HOOVER STRIKES AT SENATE

SUPREME COURT SESSION RITUAL IN ITS DIGNITY

Pen Picture of Men Who Decide Law.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—"Oyez! Oyez!"—the voice is so dignified and so distinct that it might better belong to an actor in a Shakespeare play than to a clerk in an American law court. Only this is a very special law court which was created to "establish justice," and which has always accepted ceremony as a commonplace.

So, of course, there is not a sound in the semicircle of gray marble, just off the main corridor on the second floor of the capitol, and the young man in the perfect cutaway continues:

"All persons having business with the Supreme Court of the United States are admonished to draw near and give attention, for the Supreme court is now sitting. God save the United States and the Supreme court."

The gentlemen for whom divine aid has just been invoked settle back quietly in the academic robes of black, as apparently impervious to heavenly intervention as they are indifferent to earthly interference. They sit in big leather chairs, in a row on a platform, beneath a golden eagle, and between velvet draperies of a red that is deep and quiet.

Where Quiet Prevails.

But everything is quiet in this room where nine men are making the law of America. The line of visitors that forms outside the double doors voluntarily stops its chattering long before it reaches the doorman who is perpetually hushed.

Indeed, the casual visitor who has been brave enough to talk in the house gallery, and brash enough to whisper in the senate gallery, walks on tip-toe when he approaches this sanctum. He stumbles with embarrassment when he finally reaches the magnificent doorman who is seated beside the door and pulls great silken cords to make the dark doors noiselessly open.

When the door has opened and the visitor is in the courtroom, he finds himself between a pair of doormen, likewise seated on squatty stools and gently pulling more silken cords. It's all like a shadowy dream and the newcomer stands with his mouth open and, perhaps, his hat on, until one of the doormen makes a motion of anguish and the terrified visitor yanks off his hat and slips into the nearest seat.

The Sacred Area.

Inside, on the two back rows reserved for visitors, there is not a word of conversation. The newspaper man conceals the reportorial pencil and takes notes in his head. Up in front, in the sacred area saved for legal colleagues, the lawyers themselves are actually speechless.

And sometimes even the attorney pleading the case is so overcome by the great silence that his voice trails off into nothing. Then the chief justice is likely to bring him back to earth with this suggestion:

"You will have to speak louder if you wish us to hear you."

Here the simplest processes are a ritual. At a few minutes before 12 each day they are in session, the justices assemble in the robing room. When they have put on their gowns, the door swings noiselessly open and they march across the hall, between cords stretched by guards, and into the anteroom, and then behind the pillars at the front of the courtroom. Like priests in a processional they march, evenly spaced.

Appear Simultaneously.

Folks who claim to know insist that they practice this march as carefully as school boys drill for a field day. At any rate, just as the clerk announces, "The honorable, the chief justice and the associate justices of the Supreme Court of the United States," they all appear, simultaneously, in back of their respective chairs. Page boys, smoothly alert, push back the chairs and seat the men, as deftly as English butlers at Buckingham.

If it happens to be a Monday morning, the court is crowded, for that is the day decisions are handed down. Again, the procedure is a ceremony; Chief Justice Hughes, with the eager, watchful eyes, and the sharply cut features, gives a nod to the man at his extreme left. The man is Associate Justice Roberts, newest man on the bench and the first to read his decisions.

They are not his sole decisions, but they are the cases that the chief justice has assigned to him to write up, after a majority opinion has been obtained from the group.

Justice Roberts is young. Fifty-five is young for this assembly. His voice

CHICAGO SETS RECORD AS 125 ARE DEPORTED

8 Criminals Among Those Ousted.

A deportation train carrying 234 aliens in seven armed and barred coaches left the La Salle street station last night for New York, where the undesirables will be placed on boats bound for European countries. With the group were 125 from the Chicago district, the largest number ever sent from an interior administrative area, according to Shirley D. Smith, district director of immigration.

The Chicago contingent included eight criminals and six insane persons. Among the criminals were Giuseppe Tuccillo, gunman, pander, and all around terrorist, and Michael Volpe, said to be no relative of Tony [Mops] Volpe, but a pander just released from the Bridewell. Mops Volpe, a public enemy, is slated for deportation, but his hearing before the inspectors was continued until Jan. 17.

Deported from N. Y. in 1913.

Tuccillo delayed his departure for several months through habeas corpus proceedings. He was deported from New York as a pander in 1913, but soon returned. Last year he was convicted of carrying concealed weapons in Chicago and fined $50. Witnesses failed to appear at his trial for a second offense and it was reported he had attacked them with a knife and threatened to kill them.

The other criminals were Albert Jones, Denmark, burglary; James O'Gara, Scotland, larceny; Steve Foker, Jugo-Slavia, assault and robbery; Henry Scholler, Jugo-Slavia, burglary; Naum Karinkovic, Jugo-Slavia, reëntry after deportation for manslaughter; Hector Chavarria, Costa Rica, larceny and confidence game.

Of the Chicago deportees, 35 were from Jugo-Slavia, 13 were from Poland, 10 from Italy, and the others were from various countries of Europe. The Chicago undesirables were added to 109 others who came from the west on a train which started at Seattle.

50 Per Cent Increase Seen.

The campaign of department of labor authorities to rid the country of undesirable aliens has resulted in steadily increasing expulsions from Chicago and vicinity, according to figures produced by Director Smith. Since July 1, 1930, 500 have been deported, indicating that the fiscal year ending next June 30 will show an increase of 50 per cent over the last fiscal year, during which 614 persons were deported.

Mr. Smith's territory includes Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana, and Illinois, but the majority of yesterday's deportees were Chicagoans. The day's work brought the number of criminals deported since July 1 up to 55 and the number of insane to 32.

NITTI GOES TO PRISON

Frank Nitto, alias Nitti, Capone booze and gambling lieutenant, left the Union station last night over the Burlington road for Leavenworth penitentiary, to serve a sentence of 18 months. Nitti was the first to go to prison as the result of United States Attorney Johnson's campaign against income tax dodging hoodlums and politicians.

Nitti surrendered to United States Marshal Henry C. W. Laubenheimer yesterday afternoon and was turned over to Deputy Joseph Spizzirri, who took him to Leavenworth, accompanied by one other prisoner, a dope peddler sentenced to five years.

Sentenced on Guilty Plea.

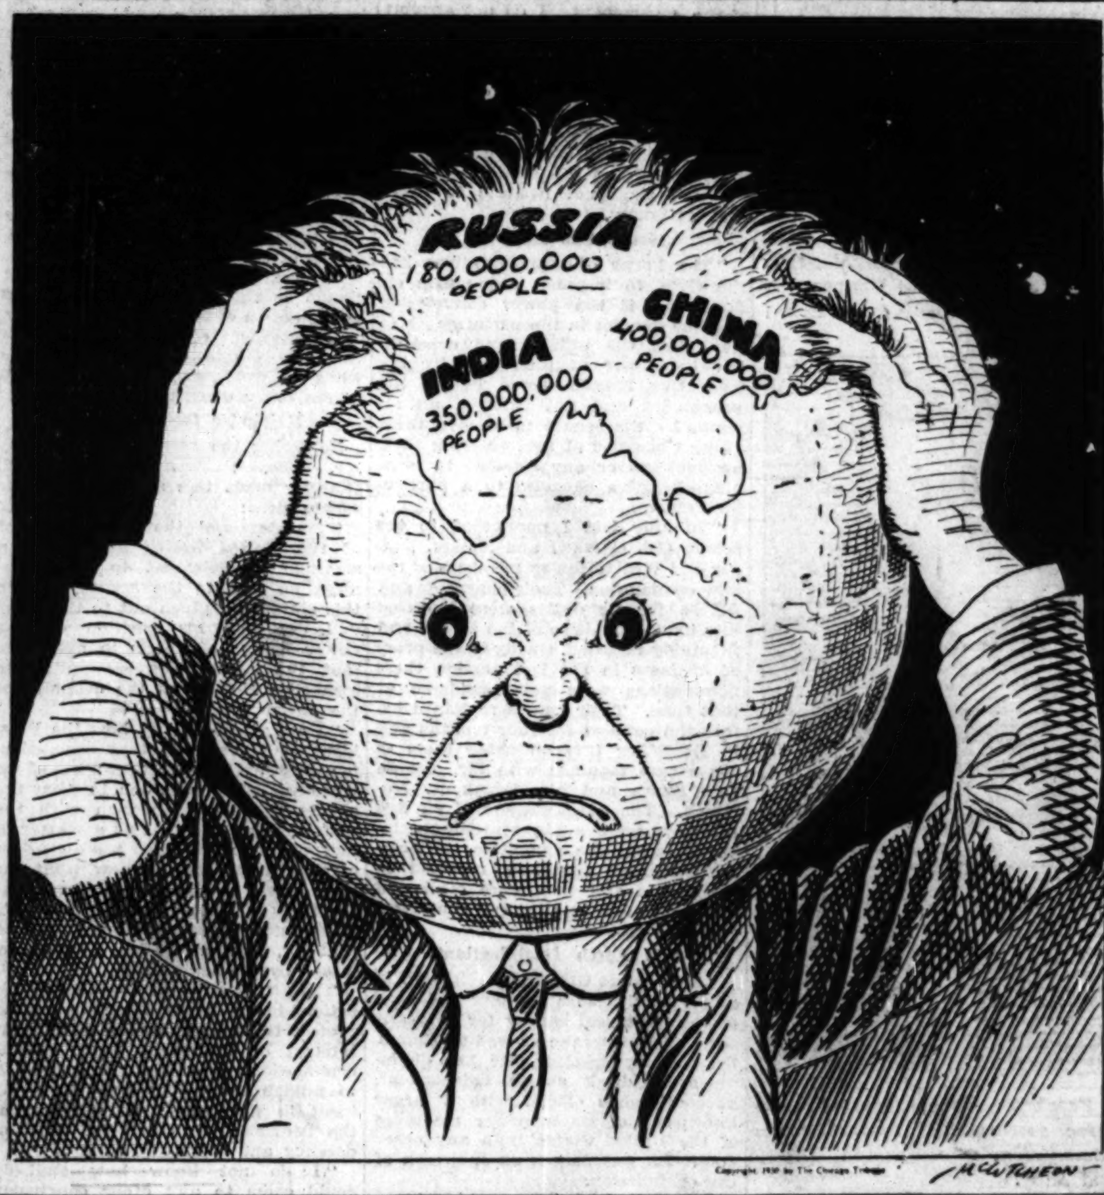
The gangster pleaded guilty on Dec. 20 to charges of evading some $175,000 in taxes on an income of $700,000 for 1926, 1927, and 1928, derived largely from the sale of alcohol and from gambling. He was sentenced to 18 months and fined $10,000 by Federal Judge Woodward.

Terry Druggan, another public enemy whose wealth was derived from beer, is scheduled for trial on income tax charges in Federal Judge Wilkerson's court tomorrow, but the case is expected to be continued for a week. There have been persistent reports at the federal building that Druggan will plead guilty.

Frankie Lake, Druggan's former partner, is slated to follow on trial and it is reported he will plead guilty if Druggan does. The conviction of Ralph Capone, County Assessor Gene Oliver, State Legislator Lawrence C. O'Brien, Jack Guzik, and the plea of guilty by Nitto, all on income tax charges, is reported to have put the fear of the inevitable in the hearts of others under indictment.

Federal Judge Woodward yesterday continued until Jan. 21 the motion for probation of Oliver.

NO WONDER THE WORLD HAS A HEADACHE



RESCUE 20 MEN TRAPPED 24 HRS. BY ROCK CAVE-IN

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Twenty miners entombed since 6:30 yesterday by a cave-in in the Camp Mitchell tunnel of the San Francisco water department's Hetch Hetchy project were rescued alive late today and rushed to a hospital for examination. Rescuers said none of the entrapped men had suffered from the experience.

The rescue crew broke through the barrier shortly before 4 p.m., today and the first man was taken out half an hour later, the others being helped through one by one.

The men were hungry and thirsty, having only the emergency supplies crammed through the four inch pipe supplying them with fresh air.

Welby Morgan, 28 year old nozzleman, was credited with saving the lives. It was he who dropped the four inch pipe under the tottering timbers just before they crashed 800 feet below the surface. "If I had known more about tunnels I probably wouldn't have taken the chance I did."

FORECASTER HITS NEW DROUTH FEAR OF THE PESSIMIST

Forecaster W. P. Day yesterday promised rain within twenty-four hours and declared that fears of a repetition of 1930, the driest and warmest year on record, had no reasonable basis.

"In the last few days the drouth stricken areas of the central southern states and the middle west have had general rains," said Mr. Day. "We have not been hit so hard in this section but the low pressure area, bringing rain, is on its way here.

"There is also no foundation for the bets and gossip that the temperature will not reach zero before this winter is over. No such weather is in sight, but before the end of the month some people may be wishing for warm weather."

The general rains, he said, assure plenty of moisture for early spring planting. Records of the weather bureau show that the total precipitation during 1930 was 23.34 inches, the lowest on record here and 40 per cent below the normal.

Drys Raid Speakeasy in Winnetka, First in 2 Years

Prohibition agents yesterday raided the first speakeasy found in Winnetka in two years. Caterino Latlanzi was arrested at his home at 1083 Oak street, where five barrels of wine were found. In a raid on a drug store at 3404 North Clark street yesterday the agents found several gallons of alcohol and gin and arrested K. A. Terman, proprietor.

Flying Widow on 2,042 Mile Atlantic Hop

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 10.—Three tons of white monoplane roared across the water of the bay here today before a large crowd of white clad vacationists and carried two pilots, Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren, into the air on the second leg of their trans-Atlantic flight. The couple took off at 10:20 a. m., Chicago time.

The plane circled once for altitude and disappeared eastward over the trackless water, headed for the Azores, 2,042 miles distant. Up to 8 o'clock tonight no word had been received of the flyers' progress. The plane has no radio.

The two flyers, carrying the first pay load of merchandise over the ocean in a heavier than air craft, expressed confidence before the takeoff that they would have little difficulty in attaining their goal. The trip to the Azores was expected to take about eighteen hours.

Who the Flyers Are.

Mrs. Hart is a 27 year old, red haired widow of New York. She is one of the few women transport pilots in American and learned to fly under the tutelage of her companion on the flight. MacLaren is a former lieutenant in the navy and a former flight instructor at the Newark airport. He is 34 years old and the son of Dr. William C. MacLaren of Princeton, New Jersey.

Their monoplane, the Tradewind, is the same which was overdue here a week ago from New York and finally turned back to the United States after having reached a point within 75 miles of Bermuda. The plane was sighted twice by ships and then followed twelve hours of anxiety and silence until Lieut. MacLaren landed long after dark at Hampton Roads, Va., with his fuel supply nearly exhausted.

Sextant Was Damaged.

Lieut. MacLaren explained that their sextant, a delicate instrument used for making celestial observations to check position at sea, had been rendered useless by a fall.

They obtained a new sextant through the courtesy of the navy department and on Wednesday, Jan. 7, made a perfect flight across the water to Hamilton in 6 hours 55 minutes. They had planned to refuel at once and leave immediately on the second leg of the flight to the Azores, but the weather once more prohibited a start over so long and barren a route.

While no official weather reports could be had regarding the exact conditions which the two were scheduled to face tonight and early tomorrow morning, several reports from ships in mid-Atlantic indicated storms, low clouds, poor visibility, and rain.

Wind Due to Change.

The wind at Bermuda at the takeoff was out of the west and was an aid to the flyers, but, according to ship reports, this following wind will change about half way to the Azores and come from the east, detracting from their speed and shortening the cruising range of the plane.

Mrs. Hart and Lieut. MacLaren embarked on the flight to prove the practicability of establishing regular air transport service. MacLaren said that he and Mrs. Hart had expressly chosen this season of the year as most disadvantageous and hoped to prove their point more conclusively because of that choice.

The plane is carrying a 200 pound cargo of mail and foodstuffs in addition to its fuel load of 300 gallons. It is a Bellanca monoplane similar to the Columbia, in which two separate trans-Atlantic crews have crossed. The Tradewind is painted white and is mounted on pontoons as a seaplane. It is powered with a Wright Whirlwind motor of 300 horse power.

RESUME FIGHT TO USE WATERS OF LAKE ZURICH

The fight of more than 100 Chicagoans for the right to use the water of Lake Zurich, along the shores of which they have built their summer homes, will be resumed tomorrow before Judge Edward Shurtleff in McHenry County Circuit court at Woodstock. August Froelich, mayor of the town of Lake Zurich, and Mrs. Margaret Pearce, claim ownership of most of the lake bed, and contend they have the right to make others pay for the use of the water.

Judge Shurtleff will hear objections from the home owners to the report of Ralph J. Dady, master in chancery. Dady's report, made to the court last fall, was favorable to the contentions of Froelich and Mrs. Pearce. The master held that the lake is private property and not open to the use of the home owners. His ruling was based on a government survey of 1837, in which Lake Zurich was declared not to be "a navigable and meandering stream."

PRESIDENT GIVES PUBLIC APPEAL AGAINST SENATE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—President Hoover late today carried his contest with the senate to the people with a statement in which he said, "there is no issue for or against the power companies involved."

He added that the senate's action was "an attempted invasion of the authority of the executive."

"As President," he added, "I am bound to resist."

"I have today notified the senate," the statement said, "that I will not accede to their resolution requesting the return to the senate of the resolutions advising and consenting to the appointment of Messrs. George Otis Smith, Col. Marcel Garsaud, and Mr. Claude L. Draper, members of the federal power commission.

Issue Is False.

"I am advised by the attorney general that these appointments were constitutionally made, are not subject to recall, and that the request cannot be complied with by me. In any event, the objective of the senate constitutes an attempt to dictate to an administrative agency upon the appointment of subordinates and an attempted invasion of the authority of the executive. These as President I am bound to resist.

"I cannot, however, allow a false issue to be placed before the country. There is no issue for or again power companies.

"It will be recalled that on my recommendation the federal power commission was reorganized from the old basis of three cabinet members giving a small part of their time, to a full commission of five members in order that adequate protection could be given to public interest in the water resources of the country, and that I further recommended that the commission should be given authority to regulate all interstate power rates. The law establishing the new commission became effective last June although legislation giving it authority to regulate rates has not yet been enacted.

Political Camouflage.

"The resolutions of the senate may have the attractive political merit of giving rise to a legend that those who voted for it are 'enemies of the power interests,' and, inferentially, those who voted against it are "friends of the power interests," and it may contain a hope of symbolizing me as the defender of power interests if I refuse to sacrifice three outstanding public servants, or to allow the senate to dictate to an administrative board the appointment of its subordinates, and if I refuse to allow fundamental encroachment by the senate upon the constitutional independence of the executive. Upon these things the people will pass unerring judgment.

"Much of the debate indicates plainly that those who favored this resolution are intent upon removing Messrs. Smith, Draper, and Garsaud, not because they are unqualified, but to insist upon the senate's own selection of certain subordinates. Irrespective of the unique fitness of these commissioners for their positions, and before they have given a single decision in respect to any power company, they are to be removed unless they are willing to accept employés not of their choosing. It is not only the right but it is also the duty of the commission under the law to appoint its own employés.

Commission Responsible.

"It must assume the responsibility for the conduct of its office. The fitness of its subordinates for the fulfillment of their respective duties must be determined by the commissioners, and no honorable man could accept such responsibilities upon any other terms. If the appointments of these commissioners are withdrawn, it is obvious that their successors must accept the senate's view of these subordinates.

"The resolution raised the question

BATTLE OVER POWER BOARD ON TO FINISH

President Stands by Appointees.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—President Hoover and his senatorial foes went at it hammer and tongs today in a fight to a finish.

The President precipitated one of the stormiest senate debates of the session, by sending a message curtly refusing to return the resolutions of confirmation of three members of the federal power commission.

Opponents of the administration among the Democrats and radical Republicans directed a scathing oratorical fire at the President, who in his message and a separate statement raised the issue of encroachment upon the executive's prerogatives.

Senators Thomas J. Walsh and Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.]; George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.], and Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.] were among those participating in the attack.

Senate Stands to Its Guns.

The senate, by a vote of 36 to 23, adopted a motion of Senator Walsh ordering the clerk to restore the names of the three power commissioners to the executive calendar. This action places the senate on record as holding that no power commission exists, even though it continues to function under the authority of the President. A governmental impasse thus is created, with no way out as yet in sight.

In proposing his motion Senator Walsh admitted that the President has the advantage from a legal standpoint and there appears to be no way to enforce the senate's action of yesterday, reconsidering the confirmations and in effect declaring the offices vacant.

Senator Walsh expressed the opinion that there is no method by which the commissioners can be ousted through the courts. Only through impeachment proceedings, which must originate in the house, he indicated, can they be removed.

Will Seek to Cut Off Pay.

Senator Wheeler served notice that he would seek to tie up the salaries of the commissioners in the annual independent offices appropriation bill. Appropriations already have been made for the commission for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Senator Wheeler intimated that a filibuster would be conducted against the bill if necessary. The controversy thus may help the radicals in their move to force the President to call a special session.

The President transmitted his message to the senate within a few hours after receiving the resolution adopted yesterday by a vote of 44 to 37 requesting him to return the resolutions of confirmation of George Otis Smith, chairman; Claude L. Draper and Marcel Garsaud as members of the power commission.

Charges "Encroachment."

In his message the President declared that he "cannot admit the power of the senate to encroach upon the executive functions by removal of a duly appointed executive officer under the guise of reconsideration of his nomination."

The President was fortified in his action by an opinion of Attorney General William D. Mitchel.

In a lengthy statement to the public the President said that "he cannot allow a false issue to be placed before the country," and that there is no issue for or against power companies."

Without mentioning by name Solicitor Charles A. Russell and Chief Accountant William V. King, the officials backed by the radicals, and whose dismissal brought on the senate's attempt to reconsider the confirmation of the three power commission members, the President made it plain that he approved of the action taken.

Text of Message.

The text of President Hoover's message to the senate was as follows:

"I am in receipt of the resolution of the senate dated Jan. 5, 1931, 'that the President of the United States be respectfully requested to return to the senate the resolution advising and consenting to the appointment of George Otis Smith to be a member of the federal power commission, which was agreed to on Saturday, Dec. 20, 1930.'

"I have similar resolutions in respect to the appointment of Messrs. Claude L. Draper and Col. Marcel Garsaud.

"On Dec. 20, 1930, I received the usual attested resolution of the senate, signed by the secretary of the senate, as follows: 'Resolved, That the senate advise and consent to the appointment of the following named person to the office named agreeably to his nomination: George Otis Smith, to be a member of the federal power commission.

"I received similar resolutions in respect to Col. Garsaud and Mr. Draper.

"I am advised that these appointments were constitutionally made, with the consent of the senate, formally communicated to me, and that the return of the documents by me and reconsideration by the senate would be ineffective to disturb the appointees in their offices. I cannot admit the power in the senate to encroach upon the executive functions by removal of a duly appointed executive officer under the guise of reconsideration of his nomination.

"I regret that I must refuse to accede to the requests."

Senate Storm Bursts.

The President's message was read to the senate late in the afternoon and immediately diverted attention from the interior department appropriation bill to the power commission controversy.

No sooner had the clerk finished the last word than Senator Walsh, author of the original motion to reconsider the power commissioners' nomination, was on his feet, the senate executive calendar in his hand.

"I do not observe mention of the three commissioners' names on the executive calendar," he exclaimed. "Inasmuch as action by the senate was taken to reconsider their confirmation, I wish to inquire by what right the executive clerk has omitted to restore their names to the calendar?"

"They will not be placed there until the papers have been received back from the President," the chair announced.

"I move that the executive clerk be advised to put them on the calendar," Senator Walsh declared. "I will not tolerate for a moment that the plain intention of the senate be disregarded."

Moses Protests.

Senator George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], president pro tem of the senate, who was in the chair last night when the motions to reconsider were passed, here jumped into the debate.

"They cannot go on the calendar until the nominations have been returned to our hands," he asserted.

"The fact that the papers are not in our hands is no obstacle," Senator Walsh retorted, his gray mustache bristling belligerently. "I am ready to support that contention with legal authority. The refusal of the President to return the nominations in no wise restricts the senate's actions."

Senator Wheeler arose and charged that the President's statement supplementing the message indicated that he was playing into the hands of the power trust.

"No fact exists that would justify such a conclusion as that reached by the senator from Montana," Senator Shortridge of California, administration supporter, retorted. "No fact exists to show that the President had coöperated with the power trust as against the people of our country."

"Notwithstanding what the senator says," Senator Wheeler insisted, "I still maintain the assertion I have just made."

Norris Takes a Hand.

"No action is contemplated in the motion of the senator from Montana," said Senator George W. Norris [Neb.], radical Republican. "The senate actually reconsidered the vote when it held no papers. The putting of the names on the calendar is not an action of the senate. It is merely a ministerial action on the part of the clerk. In order to raise the question as to whether the senate can act without the papers, as the senator from New Hampshire said it could not, the only thing to do is to put the names on the calendar."

Senator Watson believed he saw what the anti-administration senators proposed doing.

"I suppose it is desired to get a vote on the commissioners and then to reject their confirmations," he declared.

"On the contrary, I do not desire to pursue any futile course," Senator Walsh answered. "If there were any proceedings in law through which the right of the commissioners to their office could be attacked, then I would insist on a vote to reject their confirmation. Inasmuch, however, as it is impossible to test the case in court, I deem any subsequent proceedings futile."

"Ah," Senator Moses remarked, "then you wish the names to go on the calendar and stay there in perpetuity, is that it?"

"Until they are removed by action of the senate," Senator Walsh corrected.

At this point Senator Wheeler reëntered the debate.

"I wish to serve notice now," he declared, "that when the appropriation bill for independent offices comes up for consideration, and these three commissioners are still in office, I propose to move that no appropriations be made for their salaries."

Senator Hiram Johnson, arch political enemy of the President, arose.

"I waited for the message to be read through doubt about what the President would do," he said. "I thought, of course, the President would see the error of his ways and would act in accordance with the views of the senate. I wish to make it plain that I do not wish to be bound by Senator Walsh's statement that no subsequent action will be taken.

"I wish to announce to the senator from Indiana [Mr. Watson] that I and perhaps others will feel free to take any action we see fit."

"What has the senator in mind?" inquired Senator Moses.

"My mind is confused and all in doubt," Senator Johnson heaved a mock sigh, "because of the President's action in refusing to send back the confirmations."

McKellar Cuts In.

"I want to give a notice similar to that voiced by Senator Johnson," Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.], most vocal of the President's senate critics, joined in. "I voted against the commissioners and I want a chance to vote against them a second time, because they are not the sort of men who ought to be on the power commission."

The vote on the Walsh motion followed. The roll call follows:

FOR MOTION.

REPUBLICANS — Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Fraizer, Howell, Johnson, La Follette, McMaster, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Pine.—12.

DEMOCRATS — Ashurst, Barkley, Black, Bratton, Caraway, Connally, Copeland, Dill, Fletcher, George, Glass, Harris, Hayden, Heflin, McGill, McKellar, Morrison, Sheppard, Smith, Thomas [Okla.], Walsh [Mont.], Wheeler, Williamson—23.

FARMER-LABOR—Shipstead—1.

Total—36.

AGAINST MOTION.

REPUBLICAN — Bingham, Capper, Davis, Deneen, Fess, Goff, Goldsborough, Gould, Hebert, Jones, Metcalf, Moses, Oddie, Shortridge, Smoot, Steiwer, Townsend, Vandenberg, Walcott, Watson.—20.

DEMOCRATS — Broussard, Kendrick, Ransdell.—3.

Total—23.

PAIRED—For the Walsh motion: Cutting, Pittman, Bulkley, King, Trammell, Tydings, Stephens. Against the motion: Phipps, Carey, Hastings, Glenn, Kean, McNary, Robinson [Ind.].

The senate recessed, as still in executive session, until Monday.

How Walsh Views It.

The legal status, as Senator Walsh views it, is that the names of Smith, Draper and Garsaud are once more on the senate's executive calendar awaiting approval as a result of the adoption of the resolution for a reconsideration of the nominations. He contends that the three men do not hold office and that since they constitute a quorum of the new federal power commission, that body is not in existence.

Frank E. Bonner, ousted executive secretary of federal power commission, who opposed Russell and King.

According to Senator Walsh's theory Secretaries Wilbur, Hyde and Hurley, who made up the old power commission, again are members, as the law for the substitution of a commission of five appointive members provided that they should continue in office until three members of the new board were confirmed.

It was learned today that the administration had found another place for Frank E. Bonner, the executive secretary whom the power commissioners had dismissed along with King and Russell.

Secretary of the Interior Wilbur has named Bonner consulting engineer of the reclamation service. Bonner's new appointment is expected to furnish a fresh talking point for the senate critics of the administration. The anti-administration senators have repeatedly accused Bonner of being unduly friendly to the power trust.

Even Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.] whose reputation for independence was enhanced by his last evening's defense of President Hoover and the three power commissioners, termed Bonner a man unfit to serve in a position on the power commission.

President Appeals to Public in His Battle With Senators

of the executive arm of the government in respect to the appointment and removal of executive officials. Many Presidents have had to meet this particular encroachment upon the executive power in some form. Every one of them has repelled it, and every President has handed on this authority unimpaired. It reaches to the very fundamentals of independence and vigor of the executive, whose power comes from the people alone, and the maintenance of which is vital to the protection of public interest and the integrity of the constitution.

"The President is responsible to the people to see that honest and capable officials are employed by or appointed to the various administrative agencies of the government. I do not appoint nor recommend any subordinate of the power commission. Under the law the commission appoints these officers untrammeled. If the power commission shall fail to employ honest and capable officials, it is within my power to remove such officials as well as the members of the commission. I have not and shall not hesitate to exert that authority.

House Can Impeach.

"The house of representatives has the right to impeach any public official and if the power commission shall be derelict in the performance of its duties the orderly and constitutional manner of procedure by the legislative branch would be by impeachment and not through an attempt by the senate to remove them under the guise of reconsidering their nominations or any attempt to force administrative agencies to a particular action.

"In July last I nominated to the senate Col. Garsaud and Messrs. Draper and Williamson as members of the new commission. Their character and fitness for its duties were inquired into by a committee of the senate and favorably reported. Owing to the press of business in the last session these nominations were not considered at that time. Their names remained before the country for four months and in December I renominated them to the senate together with Mr. George Otis Smith and Mr. Frank R. McNinch. The qualifications of all five members were again searchingly investigated by the committee, the nominations were favorably reported to the senate and they were confirmed on Dec. 19 and 20 after full consideration and debate.

Sets Forth Qualifications.

"Mr. George Otis Smith been in public service as a member and head of the geological survey for 30 years, through Democratic as well as Republican administrations. He has distinguished himself as an independent, devoted public official with a larger knowledge of water power resources of the United States than any other man. He was chosen as chairman of the commission.

"Col. Garsaud is an eminent engineer and had a distinguished service as colonel in the army during the world war.

"Mr. Draper served for 10 years as chairman of the public utilities commission of his state, with the universal approval of the citizens of that state. Not a single member is in the remotest way connected with power interests.

"Upon confirmation, official notice was forwarded to me by the secretary of the senate in accordance with the precedents of many years. I thereupon issued the commissions and the appointees were duly sworn into office.

How Controversy Started.

"Messrs Smith, Draper, and Garsaud, the only members who were then in Washington, met and assumed the responsibility of office and, I understand, notified all employés of the old commission that under the new law their employment was automatically terminated. Arrangements were made with the civil service committee to temporarily continue the clerical employés and further action was deferred upon the secretary, a solicitor, and an accountant, and others, until a meeting of the full commission, including Messrs. Williamson and McNinch, which was held early in January.

"At that time all employés, including the three men whose dismissal has been the subject of controversy, were informed they could apply for reappointment and their qualifications would be examined. I am informed that the solicitor and accountant have applied for reappointment but no action has been taken by the commission upon their applications. The chairman of the commission has, however, expressed disapproval, especially of the former secretary and the solicitor, because of long continued bickerings and controversies among employés of the old commission.

"I regret that the government should be absorbed in such questions as the action of the power commission in employment or nonemployment of two subordinate officials at a time when the condition of the country requires every constructive energy."

Rejoinder from Wheeler.

Following the second statement by Mr. Hoover, Senator Burton K. Wheeler made this statement on the senate floor:

"I understand that the President of the United States has issued a statement supplement to the statement he sent to the senate, and in this statement, given out to the press and outlining his position on the power fight, he asserts in substance that the senate was attempting to symbolize Hoover as the defender of the power trust.

"I am at a loss just how the President could come to that conclusion, for the simple reason that most of us, when we called attention to what the effects were in connection with the matter, suggested that as a matter of fact we did not believe the President of the United States knew what the facts were, and had he known what the facts were in the case, he would immediately have acted and insisted that Mr. Russell and Mr. King be retained by the commission.

"But it would seem now that by his action today he was attempting to protect those who are fighting in the interest of the power trust on the commission and seeking, if you please, to punish those who have been diligent in fighting in the interest of the people's rights and for common decency and common honesty.

"I do not know how anybody could come to any other conclusion in view of the facts in the case."

SENATE VOTES MILLION TO HELP REAR U. S. BABIES

Only Ten Oppose Jones Maternity Act.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Federal aid for state health work in caring for mothers and children was approved by the senate today. It passed the Jones-Cooper maternity bill, successor to the Sheppard-Towner act.

The vote was 56 to 10, only a handful holding out against what they claimed was an intrusion on a state function by the federal government. An amendment proposed by Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah], a leading opponent, sought to limit the provisions of the bill to five years, after the manner of the original Sheppard-Towner act. The amendment was promptly voted down.

"The bill is obnoxious to our theory of government," Senator King declared. "It is backed by Miss Grace Abbott, head of the children's bureau, and a number of communistic ladies, by women who may be charming, but who have no idea of the functions of the state, and who are willing to have superimposed on the states a federal bureaucracy."

Brings Quick Retort.

His use of the term "communistic" drew upon him a wrathy retort from Senator Alben W. Barkley [Dem., Ky.].

"Those who are in favor of making a cow or a horse more healthy through farm legislation are lauded as eminent statesmen," he declared. "But let a man favor making a baby or a mother more healthy and he is denounced as a communist. We have been seeing an example of that sort of reasoning in the consideration of the drought relief bill, when $45,000,000 was approved for feed for animals, but when $15,000,000 was proposed for food for humans it was criticized and opposed."

Praise for the children's bureau under Miss Abbott and for the administration of the maternity act came from Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, radical Republican.

Faces Fight in House.

The measure still faces a fight in the house where it is expected an attempt will be made, with administration approval, to attach a time limit.

The Jones measure carries an annual appropriation of $1,000,000 to be distributed among the states. It would make the extension of maternity and infant aid a permanent federal work.

SHIP'S CALL FOR AID GETS MERRY CHRISTMAS REPLY

COLON, C. Z., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Members of the crew of the Newfoundland trading schooner John W. Miller told today how, when their vessel was waterlogged and sinking on Dec. 25, a passing steamer mistook their signals, hoisted the flags for "Merry Christmas," and passed on.

The seven men, after drifting rudderless in a storm for 31 days, were rescued by the German steamer Wido Dec. 30 and brought here, arriving today. The John W. Miller was loaded with codfish for Pernambuco. She was burned by the crew as a derelict when they abandoned her.

G. O. P. MAYORAL RACE ENTERING FINAL 6 WEEKS

Thursday Is Last Day for Filing Candidacies.

BY PARKE BROWN.

During the current week it is expected final battle lines will be drawn for the Republican mayoralty war which will reach its climax at the primary on Feb. 24—six weeks from Tuesday.

The final day for the filing of nominating petitions is next Thursday. There follows a five day period for withdrawals. That ends on Tuesday of next week. But the general prediction is that if there are any withdrawals they will be made approximately as soon as the full list of candidates is known.

And with this stage of the proceedings reached there will be a straightening out of lines among ward leaders, ward organizations, and probably numerous nonpolitical units that take part in the campaigns to the extent of expressing preferences among candidates. Many decisions of this sort have been postponed until the entry list is complete.

Rumors of New Entry Vague.

As far as can be ascertained the last important movement to bring in a new man came to a conclusion when George F. Harding refused to run even if Mayor Thompson finds himself unable to make his fourth race. Since that time there have been tenuous rumors that efforts were being made to find a new entry upon whom the anti-Thompson groups could unite, but close inquiry has failed to produce evidence that they had any substance.

The same is true concerning reports of intended withdrawals. Thompson, still at Mount Clemens, Mich., until today, has declared that he is in to stay. And efforts of peacemakers among the other three groups, each of which has its own candidate, are said to have been fruitless in spite of pleas for unity against Thompson.

Lineup Shifts Favor Lyle.

Under these circumstances the important shifts of organized political strength have been chiefly in favor of Judge Lyle of the Felony court who now is backed by Harding, County Chairman Snow, and Edward J. Brundage, and whose strength has been increased from day to day by the conversion of a number of independent ward leaders and organizations.

The faction most injured by these switches has been the Deneen group backing Ald. Arthur F. Albert, although the city hall has been startled by declarations for Lyle in some quarters where it had counted on support for Thompson through the use of patronage.

Yesterday brought announcements of several shifts to Judge Lyle. In the Forty-fifth ward, where the committeeman, Ald. William H. Feigenbutz, is following Thompson, the regular Republican ward club, of which Stanley C. Armstrong is president, declared for the judge.

49th Ward Club for Judge.

The Forty-ninth Ward Republican club at a meeting in the Rogers Park hotel, where it elected Harry F. Ham[illegible] as president, unanimously indorsed Lyle as "the one outstanding figure in public life in Chicago who is poor financially but rich in courage and who has demonstrated above all other things by his unimpeachable honesty, his unwavering warfare against the gangsters and his fight against commercialized politics that he is qualified to properly head our city government."

President Frank R. Leonard of the Forty-seventh Ward Regular Republican club and Committeeman Louis Nettlehorst of the Fiftieth ward announced that their organizations had adopted similar resolutions.

Albert Camp Raps Lyle Again.

The candidates were silent on the half-holiday. The one statement issued in behalf of any of them came from Ald. Albert's headquarters, where Jacob D. Allen, campaign manager, repeated his and Ald. Albert's previous charge that Judge Lyle has not sentenced a single public enemy to jail.

"The fight against gangland," read Manager Allen's statement, "has been effective because of the work of State's Attorney Swanson, U. S. District Attorney Johnson, and Acting Commissioner of Police Alcock.

"Of the public enemies listed by the Chicago crime commission, not one man is in jail or the penitentiary as a result of Judge Lyle's sentence. These statements regarding the public enemies are based on the police department record.

"Through the work of District Attorney Johnson, Ralph Capone was convicted of violation of the income tax law. Jack Guzik and Frank Nitti were convicted in federal court for income tax evasion."

There was appended to the statement a list showing the arrests and the status of cases against public enemies prepared in the office of Acting Commissioner Alcock, who is said to have promised to aid Ald. Albert in his mayoralty fight. The list showed cases pending against most of the public enemies with deportation proceedings being sought against "Mops" Volpe, with "Red" Barker returned to prison, with "Three Fingered Jack" White in the county jail awaiting trial for murder, and Steve Oswald sent to Joliet for burglary.

DECLINING YEARS OF ONCE RICH COAL MEN FULL OF ADVERSITY

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Two former captains of finance and industry, once with millions of dollars at their command, now are waging battles against the inroads of illness accentuated by financial troubles.

They are Josiah V. Thompson, former Uniontown, Pa., coal magnate, banker and seeker of gubernatorial honors, and John A. Bell, one time coal baron and banker of Carnegie, Pa. Both are in their 70s.

Thompson, whose wealth once was estimated at $76,000,000, is in a Pittsburgh clinic hospital awaiting an operation for removal of a cataract from one eye which threatens to blot out his vision. Bell, aspirant for a seat in the United States senate years ago, fights for his life in a sanitarium at Washington, Pa. His wealth was computed at $25,000,000 several years ago.

Thompson, owner of a home that is one of the show places at Uniontown, ran afoul of the law while acting as trustee of the Emma Messmore and John Niccolls estates. The princess of Thurn and Taxis, formerly Lydia Niccolls, is a niece of Thompson.

He served one week in jail at Uniontown on a contempt of court charge arising from his alleged mismanagement of the estates. Doctors despaired of his life if he were not released from jail and given medical treatment.

Bell was given six years in the pentientiary for allegedly embezzling several thousand dollars from a Carnegie bank which later closed. He never went to jail, but was sent to a hospital to "serve" his time.

SPECIAL DETROIT GRAND JURORS TO CHECK OFFICIALS

Detroit, Jan. 10.—(AP)—After four and one-half months of investigation into gang killings, racketeering and other crime in Detroit and Wayne county, a special grand jury of 22 men has headed off on another trail which leads to the doors of city, county, and state law enforcement offices.

The grand jury, which came into being late in August, primarily to investigate the slaying on July 23 of Jerry Buckley, radio orator—a killing which climaxed a series of underworld outrages—has decided to find out what the police were doing while the shooting and racketeering were going on.

The Buckley case, prosecutors say, is solved.

EINSTEIN'S HOME IS RANSACKED, BUT HE REFUSES TO WORRY

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Prof. Albert Einstein lit his pipe. Syllable by syllable he read a dispatch from Kaputh, Germany, telling of the burglary of his home last night.

"Burglars? Wass dass?" he asked.

"Robbers, thieves," it was explained.

"Ransacked?" His brows corrugated. "Ach, ja; upside down."

"Very ordinary," he summed it up, puffing his pipe, then smiling. "Empty house they go into. Political? Nien?"

"I was so excited," said Frau Elsa, who built the home a year ago just so it would meet the professor's likes.

KIN OF HORLICK ASKS COURT TO STOP SLEUTHING

Racine Doctor Charges Plot to Ruin Him.

W. Perkins Bull, K. C., of London and Toronto, was served in his suite at the Drake hotel yesterday morning with the summons in a suit for $250,000 damages filed by Dr. John Streeter Sidley, physician of Racine, Wis. J. J. Harrison, head of a Chicago detective agency, and co-defendant with Bull, who was in the suite at the time, was also served with notice of the suit.

At the same time another legal action was started against Bull and the detective. Attorney J. Fred Reeve filed a petition for an injunction in the Circuit court asking that Bull and Harrison be restrained from maintaining a constant surveillance on Dr. Sidley.

It is this incessant shadowing by private detectives upon which Dr. Sidley also bases his $250,000 suit, claiming that his health has been injured to that amount.

Physician Charges Plot.

The injunction suit, which will probably be brought before a judge tomorrow, charges that Bull and Harrison are engaged in a plot to ruin Dr. Sidley. Detectives have been put upon the physician's trail for the "fraudulent and illegal purpose" of wrecking the doctor's health and his business, the suit asserts.

Dr. Sidley, according to the suit, has been "daily annoyed, intimidated, harassed, shadowed, and followed closely" by detectives. These private investigators have pursued him so faithfully at all hours of the day that the physician is unable to practice his profession or seek any other employment, the suit charges.

Specific instances of this shadowing were related by Attorney Reeve. When Dr. Sidley would leave his home in the morning a man would walk closely behind him. When he ate in a restaurant a detective would sit at the next table. If he went to a theater, an investigator would be near. If he registered at a hotel, detectives would be knocking at his door during the night and peering into his room.

Motive Is Not Explained.

The reason for this alleged shadowing was not made clear by either party to the suit. Dr. Sidley and his attorney professed to be unaware of any motive for such surveillance. Bull, visited at the Drake, sent out word through a young man who said he was a secretary that any statement from him would come through his lawyers.

The detective work, according to Attorney Reeve, started three years ago when Dr. Sidley's wife, the former Miss Mabelle Horlick, daughter of William H. Horlick, the founder of the Horlick Malted Milk company, filed suit for divorce, charging cruelty. Her suit is still pending. Dr. Sidley at the time was secretary of the Horlick company, but resigned his position.

Bull was formerly a friend of Dr. and Mrs. Sidley. After the divorce suit was filed, Bull became Mrs. Sidley's adviser and the detectives were employed by Bull, according to Attorney Reeve. One report was that Mrs. Sidley thus sought to obtain evidence against her husband which might be used in the divorce suit.

FARMERS CROWD HALL TO PROTEST MILK PRICE CUT

Meetings in Du Page and Kane Counties.

Dairy farmers in two counties—Kane and Du Page—in massmeetings yesterday expressed their discontent at the reduction of milk prices in the Chicago area. The Kane county producers took no definite action, but those in Du Page county finally agreed to accept the price cut.

At Geneva the Kane county farmers who are members of the Pure Milk association, marketing agency for 18,230 dairymen, overflowed the meeting hall. Many stood outside while W. C. McQueen, president of the association, and D. N. Geyer, the manager, told of economic conditions which have forced lowered milk prices in Chicago and 16 nearby cities.

Farmers Hint at Strike.

Although no formal action was taken at the meeting, several farmers who spoke asked the officials what they would do if a strike of dairymen was called, and if they intended to take a reduction in salary.

Geyer defended the soundness of the arbitration of milk prices in Chicago by Dr. Clyde L. King of Philadelphia on Jan. 3, under which the farmers bear three-fourths of the loss resulting from the reduction of the price of retail milk one cent a quart. Geyer declared Dr. King to be the outstanding authority on milk price arbitration, and expressed disappointment at the action of Lake county farmers who on Friday voted in favor of the arbiter's dismissal.

Nine hundred Du Page county members of the association met last night in Wheaton. After a long session during which spokesmen protested against the price reduction the meeting agreed to abide by the King decision. The following officers were reëlected for the district: J. B. Theis of Naperville, president; Martin Stark, Cloverdale, vice president; E. P. Kampmeyer, Downers Grove, secretary-treasurer, and John P. Case, director.

Cook county farmers in a meeting late Friday night at Palatine adopted a resolution approving the policies and actions of the association after a heated debate.

BRITAIN'S 1931 DOLE FUND SHORT BY $325,000,000

Seek Way to Halt Drain on National Treasury.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The royal commission which has undertaken to find out what is wrong with the British system of unemployment insurance had before it today a long memorandum from the minister of labor calling attention to the fact that existing law cannot adequately meet the terrific strain of the present abnormal conditions.

As things are now, seven-eighths of England's 2,600,000 unemployed are receiving benefits from the state insurance fund. That this is a dole pure and simple, received without having paid any insurance premiums, is true of only about 400,000 of the jobless. Technically they are not legally entitled to benefits, but their plight is such that they had to be added to the list to save them from "going on the town."

Pays Double What It Receives.

All the rest of the beneficiaries had paid something, but in hundreds of thousands of cases their premium contributions were so few before they became jobless and qualified beneficiaries that the whole system was dislocated by the unforeseen strain.

The net result is that the fund is paying out just about twice what it is receiving, and is already indebted to the national exchequer for 300 million dollars. Another loan this year of 200 million dollars is needed to keep the fund solvent. In addition, the fund will receive $70,000,000 in premiums from the workers, $80,000,000 from the employers, and $75,000,000 from the national exchequer, or total resources amounting to 425 million dollars. But the estimated demand will be 550 million dollars, if the average number of jobless can be kept down to 1,800,000, which is doubtful.

A $325,000,000 Shortage.

In other words, without the new state loan added to the fund, its own estimated resources from the three normal sources of contributions are only 225 million dollars to meet an estimated 550 million dollars.

Some irregularities and petty frauds have crept into the system, whereby an occasional payment is made to an unqualified person, but these are so few that they are negligible and would hardly make a decimal point dent in the mathematics of the general situation.

The problem of the royal commission is to devise a scheme whereby the insurance fund may retain its solvency under hard times conditions of unusual intensity or unusual duration, or both.

Devised on Normal Conditions.

The present system was built on the old theory that a period of balancing might be as long as seven or even fifteen years, and assumed the average length of the trade cycle. It was supposed that with the reasonable level of income its surpluses in good years would balance the deficits of the lean intervals in such a cycle. But that theory has been unworkable under post war conditions, and the years 1929 and 1930 knocked it into a cocked hat.

"It is dangerous to continue this theory," says the labor ministry in its memorandum to the royal commission. "We can't hold to the faith that bad years are going to be offset by good ones. If the scheme is to be made self-supporting it must be financed on some empirical basis with an adjustment between the income and expenditure made often enough to prevent the debt from accumulating."

The ministry does not approve of making larger grants from the exchequer, because that would put the fund itself "on the dole," lowering it in public esteem and making it embarrassing for any government charged with administering it.

DAVIS WILL FIGHT NYE OUSTER MOVE; WILL OPEN RECORDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Senator James J. Davis [Rep., Pa.], former secretary of labor, announced today that he was ready to fight the move of Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.], radical Republican chairman of the senatorial campaign committee to oust him from the senate.

He declared his readiness to appear before the Nye committee next Wednesday with letters from Pennsylvania leaders showing that only a small percentage of the funds expended for the Brown-Davis ticket were expended in his behalf. He said he would speak in his own behalf against the motion Senator Nye has announced he would make to declare the Pennsylvania senator's seat vacant.

"Senator Nye can see my books in which every penny of my campaign expenditure is accounted for," Senator Davis declared.

In an address tonight Senator Nye attacked large contributors to political parties and declared that they demanded and received favors, such as a reduction of taxes, in return for their money.

HUNDREDS DIE AS BLIZZARD GRIPS NORTH OF CHINA

SHANGHAI, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Sweeping down out of the barren steppes of Mongolia a blizzard and sand storm that started Thursday had brought death and desolation to a wide area of north China tonight.

Hundreds were reported to have died in the dust and snow that raged southward as far as the Yangtze river. Temperatures suddenly dropped 40 degrees to an average of 15 below zero over the region most affected.

Peiping police gathered from the streets the bodies of 100 persons who perished in the last twenty-four hours from the blinding dust and freezing temperature. In outlying districts 13 more bodies were found in unheated shacks. Penniless, these victims were unable to buy fuel. Twenty froze to death in Tientsin.

In both Peiping and Tientsin the Salvation Army and Chinese organizations set up gruel kitchens. They also built temporary shelters for many.

The area from Peiping southward to the Yangtze valley, a stretch of a thousand miles, was buried beneath a heavy snow. Railway traffic was completely stalled in many places.

With wires crippled or prostrated by the storm the number of dead could not be ascertained.

GERMAN REDS DAUB PAINT ON CARDINAL'S HOME

Chancellor Is Greeted by Angry Mobs.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Chancellor Bruening's tour of eastern Germany, where he is investigating the tension with Poland, is drawing to a close. He spoke at Ratibor today, and he was a tired man as he protested against what he termed "unscrupulous agitation" against Poland and pleaded for all party leaders to tell the people the whole truth as to what is and what is not possible. He added:

"I can only continue to bear the responsibility if it be possible fully to inculcate the sense of truth in politics again in the German people."

Daub Red Paint on Palace.

Last night the walls of the palace of Cardinal Bertram at Breslau, where Chancellor Bruening is staying tonight, were defaced with letters in red paint and two feet high, reading: "Death to Bruening" and "Death to the hunger dictator." A statue of the bishop was also daubed with red paint and a bucket of red paint was spilled at the entrance of the cathedral. The police blamed communists.

More than 2,000 persons demonstrated tonight near the Breslau town hall while a reception for the chancellor was going on.

Police Swing Clubs.

The entire police force of Breslau, mounted and afoot, was called out to clear the streets. They were forced to use their night sticks on the unruly mob. Numerous arrests were made and one policeman was seriously injured.

A protest, giving the details of 100 acts of terrorism during the Polish elections, was sent to the league of nations today by the German People's Federation for the Protection of Minority Rights. The headquarters of the federation are at Breslau, and the special aim of the protest is to seek protection of the rights of the German minority in Poland.

German Arbiter Decrees 6% Wage Cut for 300,000 Miners

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ESSEN, Germany, Jan. 10.—The wages of 300,000 Ruhr miners were cut 6 per cent today by the government arbitration court, which was vested with special powers, under an emergency decree signed by President von Hindenburg yesterday to settle the dispute. The board sat today under heavy police protection. The award will be valid for six months and then for a further six months if its termination is not ordered.

The employers, who had demanded an 8 per cent wage reduction, later rejected the award, while the unions, which had declared they would not agree to more than a 4 per cent reduction, also recommended rejection.

The government is expected to enforce acceptance of the award under article 48 of the constitution, the so-called "dictator clause."

British Coal Prices Jump.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Poor folk of London who haven't enough money to lay in a winter's supply of coal but buy it by the hundredweight got their first reminder today that if the coal strike continues it will not be confined to the grimy valleys of South Wales.

The price of coal hawked through the streets in bags for open grates, which take the place of furnaces in thousands of humble homes, has jumped forty cents a ton. On Monday the price will move up another forty cents.

But such hardship as may be felt here if the strike continues will be slight compared with that in the coal fields, where women and children used to poverty are now faced with downright destitution.

Miners and the mine owners will meet here again on Monday at the invitation of the government to make one more desperate attempt at an agreement which will put 140,000 miners back at work.

25,000 Weavers Locked Out.

In Britain's other great industry torn by strife—the cotton textile trade—25,000 weavers were locked out today in retaliation for a strike of 5,000 earlier in the week. Unless the strikers surrender—and they have indicated that they will not—the lookout will be extended next Saturday, the mill owners have declared, and 250,000 weavers will be thrown out of work. This will automatically affect an equal number of spinners, and England will have half a million more unemployed on her hands.

The far reaching effects of prolongation of the coal strike were indicated today by an announcement for the West Wales tin plate industry, whose spokesmen said their business would come to an abrupt standstill if it could not get coal.

3,000 Men Strike in Dublin.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 10.—Three thousand building trades workers laid down their tools here today as a result of the failure of negotiations instituted by their employers towards a reduction in wages. The strikers threaten to increase their ranks to 10,000 on Monday if the Masters' association does not agree to a higher wage scale.

ZUTA RELATIVE IS WITNESS AT ESTATE HEARING

Ike Ginsberg of Middleboro, Ky., a cousin of Jack Zuta, slain vice monger, was a witness yesterday at the hearing on the gangster's estate before Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. Ginsberg testified that Zuta has a half sister, Mollie Bergman, who he says was in New York when he last heard from her eight years ago.

The half sister was approved as an heir to the estate which is valued at $40,000. Other heirs are Hirsch Zoota, a brother, and Elja Zuta, a half brother, both in Poland.

Another witness was Nate De Lue, chief appraiser for the board of education, who testified concerning Zuta's residence in Chicago. He said that to his knowledge Zuta operated a saloon at Lake street and Campbell avenue from 1911 to 1920.

The hearing here is being contested by Ginsberg and others on grounds that Zuta was not a resident of Chicago and that his will has already been filed in Kentucky.

ATTORNEY TRIES IN VAIN TO SEE LINGLE SLAYER

Officials Defy Threat of Court Action.

Unsuccessful efforts were made yesterday by Attorney Tyrrell Krum to visit Leo V. Brothers, accused of the murder of Alfred Lingle. The attorney said that by authority of telegraphic communication with Brothers' mother he has been commissioned to represent Brothers.

Attorney Krum went around to the various law enforcing agency offices yesterday serving notice on officials to the effect that he will prosecute them under a so-called "personal liberty statute" unless they give him permission to talk privately with Brothers, who is being held secretly by Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office and Assistant State's Attorney Charles Rathbun.

Lawyer's Efforts Fail.

Although the notices in the form of a demand were served on Acting Commissioner Alcock, State's Attorney Swanson, Prosecutor Rathbun, and Roche, Attorney Krum was not permitted to see Brothers. There was every indication that Krum would not talk to the prisoner until Wednesday morning, when Brothers is to appear before Judge Philip J. Finnegan on a writ of habeas corpus.

Attorney Krum tried to file a petition under the personal liberty statute in the Circuit court, but was told by the clerk that the court had no jurisdiction in such matters and would not even accept the petition. The attorney then went to the law enforcing authorities and served them with copies.

Under section 477 of the criminal code there is a provision that no jailer or public officer may prevent a prisoner from seeing a lawyer in private except in case of a great danger of imminent escape. The authorities contend, however, that this statute applies to cases where a formal charge has been made against a defendant and he is being held in jail. The penalty for its violation is a fine of $500, or one year's imprisonment, or both.

Seize Two in Secret Raid.

A secret raid early yesterday in the Riviera apartment hotel, 4900 Blackstone avenue, netted Roche and Rathbun two prisoners and some documentary evidence.

One of the prisoners was revealed last night as Miss Betty Cook, a pretty, red haired girl who was said to have been a sweetheart of Brothers. She was a resident of the Riviera hotel at the same time that Brothers lived there.

Miss Cook talked to the investigators but her testimony was kept secret, pending further inquiry into the activities of the slayer of Lingle. She told Roche and Rathbun that she had been married twice and is now separated from her second husband. She has one child, a boy. She admitted a friendship with Brothers.

Refuses Further Information.

"To give out any further information, we feel, would be to hamper the efforts of our men, which are now rapidly yielding fruit," said Chief Investigator Roche.

In the meantime preparations were being made to seek the indictment of Brothers before the scheduled hearing of the writ of habeas corpus on Wednesday morning. The authorities, however, refused to say whether the indictment will be asked tomorrow or Tuesday, but it was promised before Tuesday night.

Attorney Krum said that Brothers' mother, Mrs. Robert Jessen of Webster Groves, Mo., was on her way to Chicago and was expected to reach here last night.

BANKER GIVEN TWENTY YEARS.

Utica, N. Y., Jan. 10.—[U. P.]—County Judge Frederick H. Hazard today sentenced Joseph Tomaino, 60, of the defunct private banking concern of Tomaino Brothers, to serve a minimum term of twenty years in prison following conviction on charges of forgery and perjury.

Twin Babies Sue Grandfather

Mrs. Alice Woyton and her twin babies, Patsy and June, in whose name she filed $150,000 alienation suit against the babies' grandfather, Stanley Woyton. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

9 MONTHS OLD TWINS SUE FOR LOST AFFECTION

Seek $150,000 from Their Grandfather.

Stanley Woyton, a street paving contractor of 2206 North Talman avenue, was sued for $150,000 damages in two suits filed yesterday in the Circuit court by his two granddaughters, Patsy and June Woyton, 9 months' old twins. Only the praecipes were filed. Attorneys Irving L. Block and Maurice E. Shankman, representing the twins, said the declaration in the suits will charge alienation of affections.

The suits were filed for the twins through their mother, Mrs. Alice Woyton, 19 years old, who is separated from her husband, Max Woyton, the son of the contractor. Court officials said it is the first suit of its kind ever filed in Cook county.

Mrs. Woyton and her husband were married in August, 1929. Last summer Mrs. Woyton filed suit for separate maintenance, alleging that her husband deserted her in July. At a hearing before Circuit Judge Trude she was awarded $9 a week temporary alimony and the custody of the twins.

The suits filed yesterday, the attorneys said, will charge that Stanley Woyton induced his son to leave his wife and live with his father. The father owns property worth several thousands of dollars, the attorneys said.

Last August, Mrs. Woyton said yesterday, she was evicted from her home at 2415 Canton street when her husband failed to pay the rent. She has since been living with her father, Peter Keller, 2456 North Rockwell street.

When Mrs. Woyton found it impossible to support herself and her babies on the $9 a week alimony, her attorneys enlisted the aid of the Cook county bureau of public welfare, who have been supplying the young mother with milk, groceries and fuel.

MIAMI WILL TRY JOHN CAPONE ON VAGRANT CHARGE

Miami, Fla., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—John Capone, brother of Al Capone, was arrested here today and held in the city jail for more than an hour on an investigation charge. This was later changed to vagrancy and Capone obtained his release on bond of $1,000. He wil be prosecuted under Miami's new vagrancy ordinance which provides a penalty of 90 days in the city jail and a $500 fine.

Reports that Al Capone was on his way to Miami prompted the arrest of his brother, police officials said. This, they said, will be the beginning of the annual winter campaign of annoyance against the Capones. Last winter Al Capone was involved in more than fifteen legal actions.

John Capone already has a number of court cases pending, the result of a brawl during which he struck a hotel clerk with a bottle.

TAKEN FOR RIDE

ELMER GASPARINO.

Whisky Ager Mars Radio; May Call in Dry Agents

Billings, Mont., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Seeking the source of annoying interference with radio reception, radio dealers assert they have traced the trouble to an electrical whisky "ager." Today they warned that unless the use of the machine is discontinued they will enlist the aid of prohibition authorities to seek out the nuisance. Prohibition Agent John Parker, the dealers point out, would be doubly pleased to find the machine. He is one of the interference victims.

AMATEUR SLEUTH TAKEN FOR RIDE BY SHOTGUN GANG

Blame Bandits Arrested with His Aid.

Elmer Gasparino, 31 years old, whose propensity for sleuthing had won him the tolerance of the police and the nickname of "Sherlock," paid gangland's penalty for exerting his talents on behalf of the law early yesterday.

Gasparino, formerly a roustabout in the Twentieth ward and more recently the manager of a roadhouse on the far southwest side, was found shot to death at 5 a. m. in an abandoned sedan at 114th street and Avenue G, a desolate spot where the concrete highway ends. He had once been held as a suspect in the murder of Octavius Granady.

Slain with a Shotgun.

Evidently slain elsewhere, Gasparino's body had been hoisted into the back seat of the sedan. His swarthy features had been almost obliterated by a shotgun blast, evidently fired unexpectedly, for the victim's automatic pistol was found in his right hip pocket, fully loaded.

The victim was last seen alive by Sefedin Ali, of Whiting. Sefedin, a scullery boy, was found asleep in the kitchen of the Miramar café, 103d street and Indianapolis boulevard, of which Gasparino was manager and bartender.

"He got a telephone call about midnight," said the Turk. "He left the place saying he had an appointment to meet somebody. I don't know who."

Police Captain's Theory.

Capt. Dennis Malloy, commander of the east side police district, in which the body was found, advanced a theory as to who had called Gasparino.

Late on the night of last Sept. 28, the captain said, Gasparino had telephoned to the East Side station that a gang of gunmen was cruising the neighborhood in search of a hijacking crew, who had intercepted a liquor cargo en route to Chicago from Savannah, Ga.

The captain dispatched a flivver squad comprising Patrolmen Merritt Collins and John Kelly.

"You can't catch them with that yellow can," Gasparino told the policemen. "Take my machine."

So the flivver crew climbed into Gasparino's big car and a little later captured three gunmen at 106th street and Indianapolis boulevard.

Named in Bank Robbery.

The prisoners identified themselves as Joseph O'Malley, 31 years old, 301 West State street, Calumet City; Joseph Hanley, 28 years old, 500 Homan avenue, Hammond, and Frank Ostrowski, 33 years old, 301 West State street, Calumet City. Charged with carrying concealed weapons, they were subsequently identified in connection with a bank robbery at Tomah, Wis., but they jumped their bonds.

These three and a fourth, known only as "Wop, the Bootlegger," are now being sought for the murder of Gasparino, Capt. Malloy said.

WOMAN SLAYER OF STEPCHILD GETS LIFE TERM

Denver, Colo., Jan. 10.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin, 38, was sentenced to life imprisonment late today by Judge Henley A. Calvert in District court, for the murder of her 10-year-old stepdaughter, Leona, 10. Judge Calvert overruled a motion for a new trial.

The woman was convicted of having drowned her stepdaughter, Leona, in Berkeley lake last October. The red-haired woman also was charged with having fed the child broken glass and striking her on the head with a tire iron.

She heard the sentence pronounced apparently without emotion. Her attorney was granted a 60 day stay in which to take the case to the State Supreme court.

When Judge Calvert asked Mrs. O'Loughlin if she had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, she cleared her throat and said chokingly:

"I am innocent of any wrong, in word or thought or deed against the little girl. I loved her as my own."

BRITAIN'S 1931 DOLE FUND SHORT BY $325,000,000

Seek Way to Halt Drain on National Treasury.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The royal commission which has undertaken to find out what is wrong with the British system of unemployment insurance had before it today a long memorandum from the minister of labor calling attention to the fact that existing law cannot adequately meet the terrific strain of the present abnormal conditions.

As things are now, seven-eighths of England's 2,600,000 unemployed are receiving benefits from the state insurance fund. That this is a dole pure and simple, received without having paid any insurance premiums, is true of only about 400,000 of the jobless. Technically they are not legally entitled to benefits, but their plight is such that they had to be added to the list to save them from "going on the town."

Pays Double What It Receives.

All the rest of the beneficiaries had paid something, but in hundreds of thousands of cases their premium contributions were so few before they became jobless and qualified beneficiaries that the whole system was dislocated by the unforeseen strain.

The net result is that the fund is paying out just about twice what it is receiving, and is already indebted to the national exchequer for 300 million dollars. Another loan this year of 200 million dollars is needed to keep the fund solvent. In addition, the fund will receive $70,000,000 in premiums from the workers, $80,000,000 from the employers, and $75,000,000 from the national exchequer, or total resources amounting to 425 million dollars. But the estimated demand will be 550 million dollars, if the average number of jobless can be kept down to 1,800,000, which is doubtful.

A $325,000,000 Shortage.

In other words, without the new state loan added to the fund, its own estimated resources from the three normal sources of contributions are only 225 million dollars to meet an estimated 550 million dollars.

Some irregularities and petty frauds have crept into the system, whereby an occasional payment is made to an unqualified person, but these are so few that they are negligible and would hardly make a decimal point dent in the mathematics of the general situation.

The problem of the royal commission is to devise a scheme whereby the insurance fund may retain its solvency under hard times conditions of unusual intensity or unusual duration, or both.

Devised on Normal Conditions.

The present system was built on the old theory that a period of balancing might be as long as seven or even fifteen years, and assumed the average length of the trade cycle. It was supposed that with the reasonable level of income its surpluses in good years would balance the deficits of the lean intervals in such a cycle. But that theory has been unworkable under post war conditions, and the years 1929 and 1930 knocked it into a cocked hat.

"It is dangerous to continue this theory," says the labor ministry in its memorandum to the royal commission. "We can't hold to the faith that bad years are going to be offset by good ones. If the scheme is to be made self-supporting it must be financed on some empirical basis with an adjustment between the income and expenditure made often enough to prevent the debt from accumulating."

The ministry does not approve of making larger grants from the exchequer, because that would put the fund itself "on the dole," lowering it in public esteem and making it embarrassing for any government charged with administering it.

DAVIS WILL FIGHT NYE OUSTER MOVE; WILL OPEN RECORDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Senator James J. Davis [Rep., Pa.], former secretary of labor, announced today that he was ready to fight the move of Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.], radical Republican chairman of the senatorial campaign committee to oust him from the senate.

He declared his readiness to appear before the Nye committee next Wednesday with letters from Pennsylvania leaders showing that only a small percentage of the funds expended for the Brown-Davis ticket were expended in his behalf. He said he would speak in his own behalf against the motion Senator Nye has announced he would make to declare the Pennsylvania senator's seat vacant.

"Senator Nye can see my books in which every penny of my campaign expenditure is accounted for," Senator Davis declared.

In an address tonight Senator Nye attacked large contributors to political parties and declared that they demanded and received favors, such as a reduction of taxes, in return for their money.

HUNDREDS DIE AS BLIZZARD GRIPS NORTH OF CHINA

SHANGHAI, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Sweeping down out of the barren steppes of Mongolia a blizzard and sand storm that started Thursday had brought death and desolation to a wide area of north China tonight.

Hundreds were reported to have died in the dust and snow that raged southward as far as the Yangtze river. Temperatures suddenly dropped 40 degrees to an average of 15 below zero over the region most affected.

Peiping police gathered from the streets the bodies of 100 persons who perished in the last twenty-four hours from the blinding dust and freezing temperature. In outlying districts 18 more bodies were found in unheated shacks. Penniless, these victims were unable to buy fuel. Twenty froze to death in Tientsin.

In both Peiping and Tientsin the Salvation Army and Chinese organizations set up gruel kitchens. They also built temporary shelters for many.

The area from Peiping southward to the Yangtze valley, a stretch of a thousand miles, was buried beneath a heavy snow. Railway traffic was completely stalled in many places.

With wires crippled or prostrated by the storm the number of dead could not be ascertained.

GERMAN REDS DAUB PAINT ON CARDINAL'S HOME

Chancellor Is Greeted by Angry Mobs.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Chancellor Bruening's tour of eastern Germany, where he is investigating the tension with Poland, is drawing to a close. He spoke at Ratibor today, and he was a tired man as he protested against what he termed "unscrupulous agitation" against Poland and pleaded for all party leaders to tell the people the whole truth as to what is and what is not possible. He added:

"I can only continue to bear the responsibility if it be possible fully to inculcate the sense of truth in politics again in the German people."

Daub Red Paint on Palace.

Last night the walls of the palace of Cardinal Bertram at Breslau, where Chancellor Bruening is staying tonight, were defaced with letters in red paint and two feet high, reading: "Death to Bruening" and "Death to the hunger dictator." A statue of the bishop was also daubed with red paint and a bucket of red paint was spilled at the entrance of the cathedral. The police blamed communists.

More than 2,000 persons demonstrated tonight near the Breslau town hall while a reception for the chancellor was going on.

Police Swing Clubs.

The entire police force of Breslau, mounted and afoot, was called out to clear the streets. They were forced to use their night sticks on the unruly mob. Numerous arrests were made and one policeman was seriously injured.

A protest, giving the details of 100 acts of terrorism during the Polish elections, was sent to the league of nations today by the German People's Federation for the Protection of Minority Rights. The headquarters of the federation are at Breslau, and the special aim of the protest is to seek protection of the rights of the German minority in Poland.

German Arbiter Decrees 6% Wage Cut for 300,000 Miners

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ESSEN, Germany, Jan. 10.—The wages of 300,000 Ruhr miners were cut 6 per cent today by the government arbitration court, which was vested with special powers, under an emergency decree signed by President von Hindenburg yesterday to settle the dispute. The board sat today under heavy police protection. The award will be valid for six months and then for a further six months if its termination is not ordered.

The employers, who had demanded an 8 per cent wage reduction, later rejected the award, while the unions, which had declared they would not agree to more than a 4 per cent reduction, also recommended rejection.

The government is expected to enforce acceptance of the award under article 48 of the constitution, the so-called "dictator clause."

British Coal Prices Jump.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Poor folk of London who haven't enough money to lay in a winter's supply of coal but buy it by the hundredweight got their first reminder today that if the coal strike continues it will not be confined to the grimy valleys of South Wales.

The price of coal hawked through the streets in bags for open grates, which take the place of furnaces in thousands of humble homes, has jumped forty cents a ton. On Monday the price will move up another forty cents.

But such hardship as may be felt here if the strike continues will be slight compared with that in the coal fields, where women and children used to poverty are now faced with downright destitution.

Miners and the mine owners will meet here again on Monday at the invitation of the government to make one more desperate attempt at an agreement which will put 140,000 miners back at work.

25,000 Weavers Locked Out.

In Britain's other great industry torn by strife—the cotton textile trade—25,000 weavers were locked out today in retaliation for a strike of 5,000 earlier in the week. Unless the strikers surrender—and they have indicated that they will not—the lookout will be extended next Saturday, the mill owners have declared, and 250,000 weavers will be thrown out of work. This will automatically affect an equal number of spinners, and England will have half a million more unemployed on her hands.

The far reaching effects of prolongation of the coal strike were indicated today by an announcement for the West Wales tin plate industry, whose spokesmen said their business would come to an abrupt standstill if it could not get coal.

3,000 Men Strike in Dublin.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 10.—Three thousand building trades workers laid down their tools here today as a result of the failure of negotiations instituted by their employers towards a reduction in wages. The strikers threaten to increase their ranks to 10,000 on Monday if the Masters' association does not agree to a higher wage scale.

ZUTA RELATIVE IS WITNESS AT ESTATE HEARING

Ike Ginsberg of Middlesboro, Ky., a cousin of Jack Zuta, slain vice monger, was a witness yesterday at the hearing on the gangster's estate before Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. Ginsberg testified that Zuta has a half sister, Mollie Bergman, who he says was in New York when he last heard from her eight years ago.

The half sister was approved as an heir to the estate which is valued at $40,000. Other heirs are Hirsch Zoofa, a brother, and Elja Zuta, a half brother, both in Poland.

Another witness was Nate De Lue, chief appraiser for the board of education, who testified concerning Zuta's residence in Chicago. He said that to his knowledge Zuta operated a saloon at Lake street and Campbell avenue from 1911 to 1920.

The hearing here is being contested by Ginsberg and others on grounds that Zuta was not a resident of Chicago and that his will has already been filed in Kentucky.

ATTORNEY TRIES IN VAIN TO SEE LINGLE SLAYER

Officials Defy Threat of Court Action.

Unsuccessful efforts were made yesterday by Attorney Tyrrell Krum to visit Leo V. Brothers, accused of the murder of Alfred Lingle. The attorney said that by authority of telegraphic communication with Brothers' mother he has been commissioned to represent Brothers.

Attorney Krum went around to the various law enforcing agency offices yesterday serving notice on officials to the effect that he will prosecute them under a so-called "personal liberty statute" unless they give him permission to talk privately with Brothers, who is being held secretly by Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office and Assistant State's Attorney Charles Rathbun.

Lawyer's Efforts Fail.

Although the notices in the form of a demand were served on Acting Commissioner Alcock, State's Attorney Swanson, Prosecutor Rathbun, and Roche, Attorney Krum was not permitted to see Brothers. There was every indication that Krum would not talk to the prisoner until Wednesday morning, when Brothers is to appear before Judge Philip J. Finnegan on a writ of habeas corpus.

Attorney Krum tried to file a petition under the personal liberty statute in the Circuit court, but was told by the clerk that the court had no jurisdiction in such matters and would not even accept the petition. The attorney then went to the law enforcing authorities and served them with copies.

Under section 477 of the criminal code there is a provision that no jailer or public officer may prevent a prisoner from seeing a lawyer in private except in case of a great danger of imminent escape. The authorities contend, however, that this statute applies to cases where a formal charge has been made against a defendant and he is being held in jail. The penalty for its violation is a fine of $500, or one year's imprisonment, or both.

Seize Two in Secret Raid.

A secret raid early yesterday in the Riviera apartment hotel, 4900 Blackstone avenue, netted Roche and Rathbun two prisoners and some documentary evidence.

One of the prisoners was revealed last night as Miss Betty Cook, a pretty, red haired girl who was said to have been a sweetheart of Brothers. She was a resident of the Riviera hotel at the same time that Brothers lived there.

Miss Cook talked to the investigators but her testimony was kept secret, pending further inquiry into the activities of the slayer of Lingle. She told Roche and Rathbun that she had been married twice and is now separated from her second husband. She has one child, a boy. She admitted a friendship with Brothers.

Refuses Further Information.

"To give out any further information, we feel, would be to hamper the efforts of our men, which are now rapidly yielding fruit," said Chief Investigator Roche.

In the meantime preparations were being made to seek the indictment of Brothers before the scheduled hearing of the writ of habeas corpus on Wednesday morning. The authorities, however, refused to say whether the indictment will be asked tomorrow or Tuesday, but it was promised before Tuesday night.

Attorney Krum said that Brothers' mother, Mrs. Robert Jessen of Webster Groves, Mo., was on her way to Chicago and was expected to reach here last night.

Twin Babies Sue Grandfather

BANKER GIVEN TWENTY YEARS.

Utica, N. Y., Jan. 10.—[U. P.]—County Judge Frederick H. Hazard today sentenced Joseph Tomaino, 60, of the defunct private banking concern of Tomaino Brothers, to serve a minimum term of twenty years in prison following conviction on charges of forgery and perjury.

MIAMI WILL TRY JOHN CAPONE ON VAGRANT CHARGE

Miami, Fla., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—John Capone, brother of Al Capone, was arrested here today and held in the city jail for more than an hour on an investigation charge. This was later changed to vagrancy and Capone obtained his release on bond of $1,000. He wil be prosecuted under Miami's new vagrancy ordinance which provides a penalty of 90 days in the city jail and a $500 fine.

Reports that Al Capone was on his way to Miami prompted the arrest of his brother, police officials said. This, they said, will be the beginning of the annual winter campaign of annoyance against the Capones. Last winter Al Capone was involved in more than fifteen legal actions.

John Capone already has a number of court cases pending, the result of a brawl during which he struck a hotel clerk with a bottle.

COAL GAS OVERCOMES NINE.

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Half a dozen persons were overcome and nine others made ill today by coal gas that spread from a basement through a six story apartment house in the Bronx.

9 MONTHS OLD TWINS SUE FOR LOST AFFECTION

Seek $150,000 from Their Grandfather.

Stanley Woyton, a street paving contractor of 2206 North Talman avenue, was sued for $150,000 damages in two suits filed yesterday in the Circuit court by his two granddaughters, Patsy and June Woyton, 9 months' old twins. Only the praecipes were filed. Attorneys Irving L. Block and Maurice E. Shankman, representing the twins, said the declaration in the suits will charge alienation of affections.

The suits were filed for the twins through their mother, Mrs. Alice Woyton, 19 years old, who is separated from her husband, Max Woyton, the son of the contractor. Court officials said it is the first suit of its kind ever filed in Cook county.

Mrs. Woyton and her husband were married in August, 1929. Last summer Mrs. Woyton filed suit for separate maintenance, alleging that her husband deserted her in July. At a hearing before Circuit Judge Trude she was awarded $9 a week temporary alimony and the custody of the twins.

The suits filed yesterday, the attorneys said, will charge that Stanley Woyton induced his son to leave his wife and live with his father. The father owns property worth several thousands of dollars, the attorneys said.

Last August, Mrs. Woyton said yesterday, she was evicted from her home at 2415 Canton street when her husband failed to pay the rent. She has since been living with her father, Peter Keller, 2456 North Rockwell street.

When Mrs. Woyton found it impossible to support herself and her babies on the $9 a week alimony, her attorneys enlisted the aid of the Cook county bureau of public welfare, who have been supplying the young mother with milk, groceries and fuel.

TAKEN FOR RIDE

ELMER GASPARINO.

Whisky Ager Mars Radio; May Call in Dry Agents

Billings, Mont., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Seeking the source of annoying interference with radio reception, radio dealers assert they have traced the trouble to an electrical whisky "ager." Today they warned that unless the use of the machine is discontinued they will enlist the aid of prohibition authorities to seek out the nuisance. Prohibition Agent John Parker, the dealers point out, would be doubly pleased to find the machine. He is one of the interference victims.

AMATEUR SLEUTH TAKEN FOR RIDE BY SHOTGUN GANG

Blame Bandits Arrested with His Aid.

Elmer Gasparino, 31 years old, whose propensity for sleuthing had won him the tolerance of the police and the nickname of "Sherlock," paid gangland's penalty for exerting his talents on behalf of the law early yesterday.

Gasparino, formerly a roustabout in the Twentieth ward and more recently the manager of a roadhouse on the far southwest side, was found shot to death at 5 a. m. in an abandoned sedan at 114th street and Avenue G, a desolate spot where the concrete highway ends. He had once been held as a suspect in the murder of Octavius Granady.

Slain with a Shotgun.

Evidently slain elsewhere, Gasparino's body had been hoisted into the back seat of the sedan. His swarthy features had been almost obliterated by a shotgun blast, evidently fired unexpectedly, for the victim's automatic pistol was found in his right hip pocket, fully loaded.

The victim was last seen alive by Sefedin Ali, of Whiting. Sefedin, a scullery boy, was found asleep in the kitchen of the Miramar café, 103d street and Indianapolis boulevard, of which Gasparino was manager and bartender.

"He got a telephone call about midnight," said the Turk. "He left the place saying he had an appointment to meet somebody. I don't know who."

Police Captain's Theory.

Capt. Dennis Malloy, commander of the east side police district, in which the body was found, advanced a theory as to who had called Gasparino.

Late on the night of last Sept. 28, the captain said, Gasparino had telephoned to the East Side station that a gang of gunmen was cruising the neighborhood in search of a hijacking crew, who had intercepted a liquor cargo en route to Chicago from Savannah, Ga.

The captain dispatched a flivver squad comprising Patrolmen Merritt Collins and John Kelly.

"You can't catch them with that yellow can," Gasparino told the policemen. "Take my machine."

So the flivver crew climbed into Gasparino's big car and a little later captured three gunmen at 106th street and Indianapolis boulevard.

Named in Bank Robbery.

The prisoners identified themselves as Joseph O'Malley, 31 years old, 301 West State street, Calumet City; Joseph Hanley, 28 years old, 500 Homan avenue, Hammond, and Frank Ostrowski, 33 years old, 301 West State street, Calumet City. Charged with carrying concealed weapons, they were subsequently identified in connection with a bank robbery at Tomah, Wis., but they jumped their bonds.

These three and a fourth, known only as "Wop, the Bootlegger," are now being sought for the murder of Gasparino, Capt. Malloy said.

WOMAN SLAYER OF STEPCHILD GETS LIFE TERM

Denver, Colo., Jan. 10.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin, 28, was sentenced to life imprisonment late today by Judge Henley A. Calvert in District court, for the murder of her 10-year-old stepdaughter, Leona, 10. Judge Calvert overruled a motion for a new trial.

The woman was convicted of having drowned her stepdaughter, Leona, in Berkeley lake last October. The red-haired woman also was charged with having fed the child broken glass and striking her on the head with a tire iron.

She heard the sentence pronounced apparently without emotion. Her attorney was granted a 60 day stay in which to take the case to the State Supreme court.

When Judge Calvert asked Mrs. O'Loughlin if she had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, she cleared her throat and said chokingly:

"I am innocent of any wrong, in word or thought or deed against the little girl. I loved her as my own."

SUPREME COURT SESSION A RITUAL OF QUIET DIGNITY

crisp. He talks his decisions in- ead of reading them.

When he has finished Mr. Hughes rns to his extreme right and nods Justice Stone, the second youngest an in point of service. Justice Stone that member of President Hoover's edicine ball cabinet who is reputed have socked the Presidential eye ith a vigorous ball. But in court he entirely judicial. Although he does casionally chew a piece of candy, uietly.

Third, to the left this time and next Justice Roberts, comes the turn of ustice Butler. He is a large shoul- ered man with a gruff pleasantness nd a funny little patch of thinning air dropping down in the middle of is forehead. Back, on the right, Jus- ce Sutherland reads his decisions. He as whiskers and looks not unlike a ew England preacher or a professor classical languages.

Swinging the pendulum back and rth, with an ever narrowing arc, Mr. ughes' nod commands the famous ustice Brandeis. Thin and sallow, is a dramatic figure, with a mass fluffy gray hair, with nervous, grace- l hands, and with eyes that quiver ith interest. His voice is as dra- atic as his face. His pauses are mpelling. And when he says, "We," puts into that word all the accumu- ted tradition of the court from the ys of John Marshall.

Then it's the turn of Justice Mc- eynolds, the only bachelor on this nch. And then, next to Justice randeis, Justice Van Devanter gives s report. He is nearly 72 years d, has been an associate justice for early twenty years, and he is nearly ld. He is the only man, by the ay, who dares to whisper. He talks equently to Mr. Hughes, who doesn't ways seem in a responsive mood.

Waiting to Hear Holmes.

And now comes the man everybody waiting to hear, the man whom rists the world over have placed an international pedestal, the iendly, informal Oliver Wendell olmes who will be 90 years old the ghth of this March.

He has more hair than any of his lleagues, but it is snow white. So is s long, drooping mustache. His ame is large; his cheeks are pink, s voice is vigorous. It is only when walks, so slowly, past the tall arble pillars, that one gets an idea his age. He, like the newest justice, nd like Justice Brandeis, talks his cisions. His phrases are gently olloquial.

"That is it, in a rough way," he ill say, instead of the pompous legal nguage.

Last of all comes the speech of the hief justice.

While he is talking Justice Brandeis ants a glass of water. Now in the ouse of representatives when a con- ressman wants a drink of water he ets up and goes into the cloak room n' gets it from the water cooler. In e senate a thirsty senator snaps his ngers, summons a page, who comes ack after a bit with a thick tumbler lled with water.

But in the Supreme court the jus- ce merely seems to raise his eye- rows and a page appears at his bow, bearing a thin glass on a lver salver.

Questions of Social Rank.

That little ceremony is symbolic of e prestige of these justices; so- ally as well as legally. Their only dinner table quarrel is with the diplomats. The ambassador and the chief justice both demand the same rank, and the wise hostess doesn't ask Mr. Hughes and an ambassador to the same dinner party.

Similarly the foreign ministers and the associate justices qualify for the same place or rank at the table. Or rather the social secretaries with which Washington is crowded make a nice controversy out of it. As for the jurists themselves, they don't care much about dinner parties.

They are more interested in that Saturday morning meeting, in a small room in the basement of the senate, next to the senate restaurant, when they assemble and thrash out the cases that have come before them. They would rather make law than conversation.

Held Accident

A coroner's jury yesterday found that Preston M. Nolan, authority on real estate and bank appraisals and a humorist and author, was accidentally killed when an old pistol which he was exhibiting to dinner guests discharged. Mr. and Mrs. Leon W. Germain of Evanston, who were the first of the guests to arrive for dinner Friday night at the Nolan home, 5712 Kenmore avenue, told the story of how the old weapon, part of the owner's prize collection of old guns, discharged while Mr. Nolan held the barrel against his abdomen.

RAP AT ECONOMIC SOCIETY REPORTS UPSETS HARVARD

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Harvard university today denied it was responsible to any degree for the commercial results, beneficial or otherwise, resulting from bulletins issued by the Harvard Economic society.

An article in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin by William P. Evarts, Boston lawyer and Harvard graduate, yesterday said: "In weighing the causes of the great stock market crash Harvard university must receive its full share of the blame. As we look back over the bulletins of the Harvard Economic society, sent out every week by Harvard economists, we realize very forcibly how wrong they have been during the last two years.' '

A statement issued by the university said that in 1927 the society was separated from the university because of a belief that it would be unwise for the latter to be connected with economic forecasts. The society was reorganized as an independent corporation.

EX-MAYOR DIED OF POISON, JURY RULES IN DIXIE

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—George C. Bowen, former army major and West Point football player, who died here last Monday after taking a drink from a bottle, met death by poison "feloniously administered by a person or persons unknown," a coroner's jury decided today.

The investigation into Bowen's death will be continued, said Justice of the Peace T. M. Rickards, who conducted the inquest.

"We are satisfied that there has been a murder, but we don't know who did it. We are trying to find out."

Bowen died in convulsions soon after he drank from a bottle he found in a soft drink bottling plant where he was superintendent. He remarked to employés that the fluid tasted bitter.

Bowen, a veteran of the world war, was a native of South Carolina. At West Point he played on the football squad of 1907.

FLORIDIANS TOLD HOW GANGSTERS ARE NOURISHED

By Easy Money and Notoriety, Johnson Says.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The 1931 model American gangster will disappear if he is deprived of easy money and of the mantle of glamour thrown about him by a sensation loving public, in the opinion of George E. Q. Johnson, federal district attorney for the northern district of Illinois.

Johnson, here on his first vacation in four years, had other ideas on the matter of gangs and criminals.

"Any weapon which is not extrajudicial is fair if called into play against gangsters," he said. "Keep within the law, but hit them with any law they transgress."

Modern U. S. Development.

The America of today does not understand the gangsters, he continued. Normal crime, sneaking down an alley, has undergone a metamorphosis into a crime of gangsters, who ride down boulevards in expensive limousines before a gaping public, he said.

Johnson asserted the federal fight on Chicago gangdom had been effective. He cited the conviction of Ralph Capone, brother of Scarface Al Capone, for willful evasion of federal income tax, and the subsequent sentence to three years' imprisonment in Leavenworth penitentiary with a $10,000 fine.

"There was Jack Guzik, another Capone henchman, who was convicted and sentenced to serve five years and to pay a $17,000 fine," Johnson said.

"No Federal Immunity."

The government's weapon in each instance was the income tax evasion law, Johnson said, in clearing his statement as to the use of legal weapons against gangsters.

"No gangster that has been convicted and sent to jail can come back," the district attorney said. "Their immunity, or gangland's belief in their immunity, is gone."

Mr. Johnson holds that gangsters have no loyalty except the loyalty born of their common purpose—easy money.

"Cut off gang revenue and the gang disintegrates," he said.

ADDRESS O B 518, TRIBUNE

INDIAN RAJAH'S WIDOW CONTESTS $15,000,000 WILL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The final stages of an Indian princess' fight for a $15,000,000 fortune will soon be reached in London. Ranee Chattra Kumari Devi has just arrived here from India in order to attend the sitting of the judicial committee of the privy council, before which her case will be heard. Sir John Simon will be leading counsel for the princess.

Princess Devi, youngest of the four wives of the late Rajah of Ramnagar, is appealing against the award by Indian courts of the title of rajah and estates worth about $15,000,000 to Mohan Bikran, adopted son of the late rajah. During the adoption proceedings the relatives of Mohan Bikran renounced on his behalf any possibility of his succession to the throne of Nepal, to which royal house he formerly belonged.

The late rajah of Ramnagar died after having led a dissipated life. In 1903 he made a will in favor of Mohan Bikran, who was also called Ram Rajah. In the following year the rajah made another will and Princess Devi contends that this last will devises all his properties to her.

SLAVERY REPORT ON LIBERIA TALE OF GRIM HORROR

Find Murder, Torture and Oppression.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[U. P.]—A tale of murder, torture, and oppression visited upon ignorant blacks by their native rulers was unfolded before the civilized world today in the report of an international commission of inquiry into slavery in Liberia.

The report was made public simultaneously by the American state department and the league of nations. It was prepared by a Liberian, a Britisher, and an American Negro educator. Its revelation of atrocities in a land founded as a haven for freed American slaves has stimulated this government to demand that Liberia immediately put an end to all forms of involuntary servitude.

Domestic Slavery and Pawning.

Although the commission found that "classic slavery"—slave markets, professional slave dealers, and allied institutions—did not exist in Liberia, the timid and halting testimony of hundreds of natives was replete with evidence of domestic slavery and "pawning." These natives told of raids on their villages by armed officials, who gathered up hundreds of "boys" to ship to the Spanish island of Fernando Po, whence few returned; of forced work on jungle roads; of children being "pawned" for the debts of their elders; of extortion by officials; of torture by fire; of whippings; of native necks broken by huge baskets of stone hoisted on their heads by road masters; and of the forced isolation of parents from their educated children.

Commission's Recommendations.

The commission made 18 recommendations to improve conditions in Liberia. Outstanding ones were:

1. That dishonest and corrupt district commissioners be replaced by educated humanitarians recruited from Europe and America.
2. That pawning and domestic slavery in Liberia be made illegal as a preliminary to total abolition.
3. That shipment of labor to Fernando Po be abandoned.
4. That American immigration be encouraged.
5. That an "open door" policy be substituted for the present ban on aliens.
6. That education [now confined to the "upper crust"] be extended to all Liberians alike.
7. That Liberia's extensive road program be curtailed.

Liberia has accepted these recommendations "in principle," but the state department has insisted on more adequate and concrete guarantees. The only definite action observed by American officials so far has been the resignation of President King and Vice President Yancy, against whom the report makes serious charges.

The report absolves the Firestone Plantations company from knowingly using forced labor on its 1,000,000 acre rubber farm in Liberia. However, district commissioners were charged with gathering up laborers, ostensibly for government work and then sending them to the rubber farms.

"Simon Legree" of Liberia.

Yancy appears in the report as a magnified "Simon Legree" of Liberia. According to native testimony, he made a practice of demanding young men from villages to be shipped to Fernando Po. He was said to have punished and fined the village elders if the "boys" were not forthcoming.

Whole Towns Depopulated.

Whole towns have been depopulated, the report said, by wholesale recruiting of labor for Fernando Po.

The sufferings of a people are always reflected in its literature and the commissioners found native women singing this crude refrain:

"Tell us,
"Yancy, why?
"Yancy, why?
"Wedabo women have no husbands,
"Yancy, why?
"Wedabo women have no brothers.
"Yancy, why?
"Mothers, fathers, sons have died,
"Waiting for the return
"Yancy, why?"

Liberia's extensive road program is being carried out by forced labor the investigators found. These workers were found to be subjected to brutal masters. They work without pay, are forced to supply their own tools, and are fined for tardiness. Many of the laborers seen on the roads were less than 16 years old.

Brutal Punishment.

At one place natives exhibited whips, sticks and scars. When workers offend their road masters they are given "the 25"—thrown face downward and given 25 lashes. Another roadside punishment is inflicted with the "basket," the report said. A large basket, loaded with stones and sand, is hoisted onto the head of a native Meanwhile soldiers prod the sufferer, causing him to turn sharply beneath this weight. Necks are often broken by the "basket." The commissioners were told also of natives being tied to the rafters of a hut and tortured by fire.

The report was made by Dr. Cuthbert Christy [British], representing the league of nations; Dr. Charles Spurgeon Johnson, president of Fisk university, Nashville, Tenn., and the Hon. Arthur Barclay [Liberia].

Liberia was established a little more than a hundred years ago as a colony of freed slaves from the United States. Its constitution provided that no slavery should exist there. The United States, on several occasions, has aided the country in financial and other difficulties.

WED TO BROKER

Mrs. Olive Mitchel as she appeared during world war.

New York, Jan. 10.—Mrs. Olive Child Mitchell, widow of John Purroy Mitchel, former mayor of New York, and Hugo R. Johnston, investment broker and yachtsman, were married today by the Rev. Dr. Minot Simons, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, both of whom are members of socially prominent families, left on a honeymoon trip.

A CITY CAN'T BE RULED, SAYS MAN WHO TRIED IT

Youngstown's Mayor Speaks His Mind.

Youngstown, O., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Turmoil and trouble accompanying repeated failures of his spectacular efforts for law enforcement have convinced one American mayor that law enforcement in cities is hopeless, and brought from him the prediction today that "governmental collapse in the cities will lead to the nation."

Mayor Joseph L. Heffernan of Youngstown, author of the prediction, entered office here three years ago "a happy optimist and ardent idealist," but today admitted problems of law enforcement have made him "a converted pessimist and a convinced cynic."

Dismissals of two police chiefs, three vice squad leaders and innumerable civilian raiders mark the path traveled by Mayor Heffernan in his three year effort to make Youngstown "walk the straight and narrow." His life has been threatened repeatedly. Once a bomb was discovered near his home. Recall petitions have been threatened many times. But he always has weathered the storm.

Sees an Abyss Ahead.

Expanding his predicition of government collapse, Heffernan said: "I see nothing but futility to municipal government and a cynicism on the part of the people which presages a gloomy future. To me the hand writing is on the wall and unless the American people jerk themselves up short, we are going down in an abyss such as yawned before great nations at other periods of world history."

Attempts to enforce the prohibition laws have been one of Mayor Heffernan's greatest sources of discouragement. Time after time he has swept the bootleggers out, but always they have come back.

The mayor has shifted authority and orders to suppress law violation from one police official to another, with temporary success each time, but with failure in the end.

Blames "Sloppy Hypocrisy."

Now he has come to the conclusion that "law enforcement will never be a reality until the American people cease their sloppy hypocrisy. I am sick and disgusted with the futility of trying to make policemen enforce laws to govern people who refuse to obey their own laws."

"We now think we can ride along in our welter of lawlessness and not pay the consequences. Well, we can't. Cause and effect are still an immutable law. We are going to pay, and pay dearly, for our sins. The breakdown of government will spread."

From "corrupt and cynical cities" grows our national ideal, the executive said. "Governmental collapse in the cities will lead to the nation."

To change the situation, Mayor Heffernan holds, we must go ahead to new ethical standards or to the basis of old time religious ideals. "Today we are dominated by materialism. The only criterion of success is wealth."

LAST OF TRIBE IS ORDERED TO INSANE ASYLUM

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The last blood member of a Chippewa Indian tribe, Jimmie Kishketog, the sage of Munising bay, must relinquish guardianship of sacred tribal lands and spend the remainder of his lonely years in a white man's institution, an insane asylum.

As the sole survivor of the tribe which once roamed vast territory bordering the south shore of Lake Superior, Kishketog fought a silent, rebellious battle to remain on the soil where his ancestors were buried. But he waged a losing struggle.

A commission of doctors decided recently his mental condition was such that he could no longer maintain his place in society. They agreed to send him to the state hospital at Newberry. Kishketog heard the verdict without a tremor.

JOHN D. JR. DECIDES RICH FRANCE CAN NOW RESTORE WAR RUINS

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Jan. 10.—By summer of this year all the essential work for the preservation of Versailles palace, Reims cathedral, and Fontainebleau palace will be completed, and though there still is a great deal to be done if these historical monuments are to be entirely restored, John D. Rockefeller Jr. has decided that such expense should be borne by France or French citizens and that he will not give any more money for that purpose.

He takes the attitude, it is understood, that the financial situation of France is now very different from what it was when he made his gift of $2,500,000 for the restoration of the two famous châteaux and the Reims cathedral. By summer the whole of the huge gift will have been spent and the future care of their historical monuments must be the business of the French themselves.

An effort is being made by a few Frenchmen to continue and complete the work now that all the urgent repairs have been done toward restoring Versailles worthily, but it cannot be said that their hopes are very high of finding an eager response.

WAR ALLIANCE OF 3 NATIONS AIMED AT RUSSIA

Italy, France and Poland Dicker Secretly.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 10.—THE TRIBUNE learns today from a dependable source close to the government that secret negotiations are under way for a drastic realignment of forces in Europe by which Italy would drop her campaign against the Versailles treaty, Poland would withdraw from the little entente, and France would concede naval parity to Italy. These three nations would then unite in a defensive military alliance against possible attack by Germany or Russia.

If negotiations succeed the diplomatic poker players of the old world will have pulled off one of the boldest strokes since pre-war days. The Franco-Italian naval dispute will be solved, Poland will get a strangle hold on her famous corridor, and French war gains will be protected by an unshakable ring of steel around awakening Germany.

Vatican Lends Support.

Thus far, it is learned, neither France nor Italy has committed itself on the Polish overture, but it is known, at least in Italy, that these overtures are being made to the Fascist government through unofficial channels. Moreover, the Vatican is fully informed of the projected maneuver and is reported to be lending its support on the theory that a reinforced Poland will be the surest safeguard against the godless bolsheviks invading western Europe.

The plan, as related, is of very recent origin. A short time ago the progress of timid negotiations toward a Franco-German alliance created alarm in Poland.

In consequence, Marshal Pilsudski organized a secret committee of twelve among high army officers to bring about new orientation of Polish foreign policy. Various alliances were discussed and finally the Franco-Italian-Polish combination was suggested. The Vatican immediately approved, and, through church dignitaries, it is said, Italian sentiment was quietly tested out.

The result was sufficiently favorable for the Polish military junta to dispatch one of its members, a colonel very close to Dictator Pilsudski, to Rome, where he remained for a week, leaving only four days ago. During his stay this officer was constantly in consultation with Vatican officials and important private individuals.

He intrusted the task of sounding out the Italian government directly to a prominent and beautiful Polish society woman, widow of a famous Italian.

She is counted on to present the Polish offer in official form to Foreign Minister Dino Grandi and Premier Mussolini through the medium of official friends.

Warsaw's Agent Returns.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 10.—The return of Col. Omniski, prominent Pilsudski adherent, from a reported secret mission to Rome, arouses the belief here that he is acting as a special agent for the military junta in negotiation for an Italian alliance. It was stated here that the Roman agent whom Col. Omniski intrusted with continuing his work is Signora Colautti, widow of the famous irredentist writer.

POLAND PLEDGES WORLD HER AID TO BEAT SLUMP

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Poland's international policy will be one of peace and economic coöperation with the rest of the world, Foreign Minister August Zaleski today told the senate foreign affairs committee.

"I note with some regret," he said, "that other European countries seem to believe that the economic crisis can be relieved by political changes. Such measures merely add to the distress. Economic difficulties can be mastered only by economic methods. Poland is anxious to coöperate with all the nations of the world in economic fields."

Regarding Poland's relations with Germany, the foreign minister said:

"Despite all that has happened since last March, when the German-Polish commercial treaty was signed, Poland still desires to maintain friendly relations with Germany and the commercial treaty was sent to parliament for ratification two days ago. We will, however, protest every effort by Germany to use the Polish national minorities for political purposes, and several days ago we sent a note to Geneva setting forth the exact facts about the minorities problem."

Blaine Granddaughter

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Leopoldine Blaine Damrosch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch and granddaughter of James G. Blaine, was married today to Sidney Howard, author and playwright, at her parents' home. Howard, who was formerly the husband of Claire Eames, American actress who died in London recently, is the author of "They Knew What They Wanted," Pulitzer prize play of 1925. He was an aviator in the world war and later was on the editorial staff of Life. The bride is the third of four daughters of Walter Damrosch.

250 SAIL AWAY FOR 16 DAYS OF BRIDGE PLAYING

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—More than 250 persons started down the Delaware river today for a sixteen day floating bridge party, on which they will be able to play both contract and auction, day and night, taking time off only for eating and sleeping.

The bridge fans are passengers aboard the United States liner Republic, which sailed from this port on the second of five winter cruises to the West Indies. This trip was organized as a "bridge cruise," with Wilbur C. Whitehead, an authority on the game, in charge of this part of the entertainment.

The vacationists, who came from points as far west as the Mississippi valley, did not wait until Capt. A. M. Moore and his pilot took the Republic out of her pier in order to start their first tournament.

FIVE DAY WEEK TO AID JOBLESS URGED BY GREEN

Labor Federation Chief for Prompt Action.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Declaring that unemployment in the United States had reached an acute stage, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor in an address tonight urged the universal adoption of the five day week for labor both in private industry and in government employ.

"Working men and women have suffered greatly from the effects of continued unemployment," he declared. "The welfare and happiness of the masses of the people depend upon their opportunity to enjoy reasonably steady employment at decent wages and under tolerable conditions of labor. When they are denied work and their earning and purchasing power is destroyed over a general area the economic system of the nation becomes disarranged so that acute community and national suffering prevails. This has been the situation in the United States during the last year. It has now reached an acute stage.

Sees Immediate Results.

"The five day week should be immediately established and the hours of labor should be reduced to the point where they would correspond with our increasing power of production. Under such a plan practically all the slack of present day employment could be taken up very quickly and expeditiously.

"The income of working men and women should be maintained at a level where they buy and use the commodities which industry manufactures and produces. All classes of people should ben encouraged to buy, and buy as freely as possible."

Mr. Green's statement was made shortly after John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross, had requested President Hoover to issue an appeal for contributions to make up a $10,000,000 fund to be used for the relief of sufferers in the drought stricken areas of the country. Mr. Payne laid facts and figures before the President to show the mounting number of demands in the drought area. It was indicated that President Hoover probably would accede to Mr. Payne's request and issue an appeal for funds for the Red Cross within the next week or ten days.

Caraway Asks Action.

Mr. Payne's request had its repercussion in the senate when Senator T. H. Caraway [Dem., Ark.], foremost in the fight for relief of the drought states, demanded why the Red Cross and the administration had delayed so in meeting the situation.

"The delay has caused untold human suffering," he declared. "There will be more suffering before the funds can be distributed. The tears of children and the bitterness in the hearts of women are something that no effort now can ever wipe out."

In the meantime Republican leaders in the house of representatives took steps to break the deadlock on the drought relief bill with its controversial amendment calling for a $15,000,000 appropriation for food loans.

To Invoke Special Rule.

Following another failure to obtain unanimous agreement to send the bill to conference it was decided that the house rules committee should meet next Monday and report out a special rule to give the measure right of way.

Objection to a conference, where the senate amendment would almost certainly be stricken out, has come from Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.] and other city congressmen, including Representative Carl Chindblom [Rep.] of Chicago. Their opposition is based on the contention that if a food loan appropriation is to be included it should apply to cities as well as to rural communities.

Col. Woods Optimistic.

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's emergency employment committee, expressed the belief today that the present industrial depression has already reached its worst point, and that the next move must be an upward one. Col. Woods and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills were the principal speakers at the tenth anniversary luncheon of the Women's National Republican club.

Col. Woods reviewed the relief measures that have been undertaken. He pointed out that public works totaling 2,500 million dollars are under way in all parts of the country to end present conditions.

He declared that President Hoover's request to industry to maintain the standard of wages that prevailed before the depression began has been "very largely carried out."

HUPMOBILE

ANNOUNCES ITS

NEW Free-Wheeling DRIVE

AS STANDARD EQUIPMENT ON ALL OF ITS NEW SIXES AND EIGHTS

HUPMOBILE foresees that, within a few years, the Free-Wheeling principle will be as standard as the electric starter and four-wheel brakes.

For Hupmobile sincerely believes that Free-Wheeling is the most important motor car improvement in a generation.

Today Hupmobile brings you perfected Free-Wheeling. Not as an attachment ... but as an in-built principle in all of its new models.

Free-Wheeling ... synchronized with Hupmobile's traditional mechanical excellence. Free-Wheeling ... proved by a year and a half of gruelling road and factory tests. Free-Wheeling...at its best.

Your first ride in a Free-Wheeling Hupmobile will give you a never-to-be-forgotten sensation.

As you breeze into the straight-away, you take your foot off the accelerator. The motor drops to idling speed. But the car floats on and on, like a glider in the air. Traveling on its own momentum . . . with the silence and smoothness of a bird in flight.

It's the nearest thing to flying on wheels. Yet the car is always in gear and fully controlled . . . with the braking power of the motor at your instant command.

But that is only the half of it. You approach a stop-light. With a simple flick of the hand, you shift from high gear to second and back again . . . without touching the clutch.

Hupmobile Free-Wheeling makes driving unbelievably simple. It ends clutch drudgery . . . for you rarely have to use the clutch, excepting to start or back up. It does away with "traffic tension."

Hupmobile Free-Wheeling saves gas and oil. Saves tires. Saves upkeep. Saves the motor. But, more important still, it saves you. For it takes the stress and strain out of motoring.

Ride on the wings of Momentum

Shift without touching the clutch

SENSATIONALLY REDUCED PRICES LOWEST IN HUPMOBILE HISTORY

Usually when a product is so vastly improved, not only over its previous self but over all comparable competition, you'd expect to pay more, proportionately. Here's the greatest and newest improvement in motoring—Free-Wheeling—yet the lowest prices in Hupmobile history. Read these reductions.

	NEW PRICE	OLD PRICE	SAVING

WHAT FREE-WHEELING MEANS TO YOUR CAR . . . YOUR POCKETBOOK . . . AND YOU

. . . your engine makes from five to fifteen million less revolutions every year, depending on how far you drive.

. . . you save in fuel and oil because your engine idles while the car rolls forward under momentum.

. . . you may shift from high to second and from second to high at fifteen miles an hour or fifty, without touching your clutch.

. . . your second gear is so noiseless, so easy to engage, that shifting from high to second becomes a positive pleasure. You ride with a new quietness, a new smoothness free of gear noise and roar; free of motor drag and vibration.

That Hupp Free-Wheeling saves fuel, oil, tires and overhaul expense . . . that it adds to the life of your car in the same degree that engine revolutions are saved, is a self-evident fact. But brush aside these important money considerations, if you please; the outstanding fact about Hupp Free-Wheeling is that it takes the strain and the stress out of motoring whether you drive or whether you merely ride.

OFFER GOOD JOBS FOR MEN; SALLY ASKS FOR MORE

Pleased with Response to Her Appeal.

A number of good jobs for men were received from TRIBUNE readers by Sally Joy Brown yesterday to be turned over to the Illinois Free Employment service, 116 North Dearborn street, to aid the unemployed. Sally said that more jobs for men are needed, and expressed gratification over yesterday's response.

An experienced bookkeeper will receive a permanent job at a good salary from K. K., on South Market street. Temporary work at $9 a day was offered an experienced accountant by Mr. P., living in the 1000 block on North Cicero avenue.

A job for a cabinet maker was created by J. H., in the 5700 block on Kenwood avenue, who said he would pay $1 an hour to the cabinetmaker for repairing furniture.

Offer Jobs Around Homes.

Mrs. A. H., in the 7200 block on Hilldale avenue, said she would give a day's work to a plumber. Mrs. J. L. in Winnetka, provided a job for a painter, painting her bedroom furniture.

Mrs. C. C., in the 900 block on Oakdale avenue, said she would pay 70 cents a window to an unemployed man for washing her windows. J. B., in the 2100 block on Leland avenue, asked for a man to wash windows and wash floors for 50 cents an hour.

A girl typist was provided with a $20 a week job through the K. E. company on Wacker drive. It might last several months, it was said.

Help in Other Ways.

TRIBUNE readers came forward in other ways yesterday to aid jobless persons. Mrs. L. S., who lives in the 1300 block on Thorndale avenue, wrote to ask the name and address of Miss C., the former office worker who is living with her mother in a garage in an outlying part of the city, who was mentioned in a story appearing in Thursday's TRIBUNE. "I want to send her some money," Mrs. L. S. wrote. With her consent Miss C.'s name was supplied.

Mrs. C. R. of Gary wrote that her home, which was comfortable and in a good neighborhood, near a library, was open to Miss A. C., 40 year old former school teacher, who was described in the story of Thursday. Mrs. C. R. has a 5 year old boy whom Miss A. C. could teach, she said. Meanwhile she would give her a small salary and provide her with a home until she could obtain a job.

PLAN FOR FUTURE JOBLESS, IS PLEA OF MISS ABBOTT

Every available seat was occupied yesterday in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel as Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau at Washington, and Miss Julia Lathorp, her predecessor in [illegible]

[illegible] said Miss Abbott, "is the present plight of the children of the unemployed. They constitute a problem in health, delinquency and dependency, a problem which will not end when the industrial depression disappears. These children will suffer permanent injuries.

"Prevention of unemployment should of course be the first concern of our financiers, industrialists and labor leaders and students of social welfare. But we would be foolish to assume that it can be wholly prevented and plans must therefore be made for handling more adequately the care of the unemployed, and especially the children of the unemployed, than has been possible under the scramble this year.

"There has been a great expansion of private relief and a greater expansion of public relief. But this expansion became possible not in the earlier stages when homes and furniture and self-respect might have been salvaged, but after the family had gone into the abyss of pauperism. Better social planning would have made it possible to safeguard the children with no greater expenditures."

RELEASES FUNDS TO BUY FOOD FOR STARVING MAN, 79

Bright and early yesterday the legal machinery of Cook county swung into action to relieve the distress of 79 year old Jacob Pfeiffer, who had lain for weeks in a sick bed while his estate of $2,300 accumulated interest in a bank. Pfeiffer was declared by his physician, Dr. S. O. Mayerson, to be starving at his home, 4948 Gunnison avenue, because of official red tape which had tied up his assets, due to his mental incompetence.

Attorney Otto Ring, representing the Kaspar American State bank, which was appointed by the Probate court as conservator of the funds due Pfeiffer from the estate of his dead wife, was authorized by Probate Judge Henry Horner as soon as his court convened to make an investigation of the case and take whatever steps were necessary to make the patient comfortable.

As much of the cash as needed for Pfeiffer's care was ordered placed at his immediate disposal by the jurist.

Last night, properly washed, fed, and tended for the first time in his long illness, Pfeiffer was reported resting easily in a clean, comfortable bed in the county hospital, to which he was admitted on the recommendation of Dr. Mayerson. His condition, however, was said by hospital attachés to be serious.

107,000 BACK ON FORD PAY ROLL BY TOMORROW

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Ford Motor company, which yesterday announced the recall of additional workers in its various plants throughout the country, today said the total pay roll strength on Monday will reach 107,000 men.

Of these 75,000 will be employed at the Rouge plant here. The daily wage of the latter, the company statement [illegible] that time they were on a three days a week schedule. Today's announcement made no reference to a change in that program.

Recent employment figures announced by the Chevrolet Motor company, placed the total at 32,101 workers. W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, said today that the total was expected to reach 40,000, a normal operating force, during the current month.

GOOD FELLOWS, THERE'S A LOT OF WINTER LEFT!

And Many Poor Families Need Your Help.

The weather during the first ten days of January was kind to the underfed and underclad families of the unemployed. However, snowstorms and zero spells may be expected before spring. It's the job of the Good Fellows to protect these destitute families from suffering during the winter.

The Good Fellows are furnishing food, clothing, shelter, and heat to 277 families, and they can continue to do so as long as payments are maintained in accordance with pledges. There are other cold and hungry families, lacking in bare necessities, whose needs can be met if more men with jobs enlist in helping the unemployed to keep their families together this winter.

The monthly budget of the average destitute family is approximately $100. For $200 you can protect some family from cold and hunger until spring, when jobs will be more plentiful.

Perhaps some of your friends would welcome a suggestion to join you in adopting a worthy family for the period of the unemployment emergency, if $200 is more than you can spare. Or a donation of any amount, mailed to the Good Fellow, THE TRIBUNE, Chicago, will reach some deserving family. THE TRIBUNE pays the expenses of administrating the fund.

GOOD FELLOWS!

If you alone or you and your associates wish to help a hungry family through the winter, fill out the blanks below and mail to "The Good Fellow," The Tribune, Chicago:

The Legion also approved the bill of Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania for a two year suspension of all immigration.

LAY 173 MILLION BUDGET FOR 1931 BEFORE COUNCIL

Exceeds Expenditures of 1930 by $22,798,780.

Recommendation for appropriations from city funds totaling $173,321,260, covering all municipal activities during 1931 with the exception of the school board, were submitted to the city council yesterday by its finance committee. A public hearing on the proposed expenditures will be held on Jan. 19, and on the following day the council will meet to take final action.

The new appropriation bill exceeds the expenditures of 1930 by $22,798,780. The increase is due in part to larger appropriations in the water and transit budgets and partly by a requirement of the new financial legislation that the aldermen set up an appropriation for the estimated loss and cost of tax collections.

In the transit budget the committee has included a sum for the construction of the subway under the river and for legal and engineering work on the subway plans. Increases in the water appropriation were made possible by the sale of certificates which are a lien on the revenues obtained from the sale of water.

Appropriations Recommended.

The appropriations from the principal funds as recommended in the budget are as follows:

Corporate purposes	$ 67,414,639
Water	22,061,444
Bonds	24,197,890
Traction	14,242,000
Bond redemption and interest	21,065,351
Vehicle tax	5,637,500
Public library	3,120,971
Municipal tuberculosis sanitor'm	3,963,263
Police pension	3,413,078
Firemen's pension	1,760,000
Municipal employés pension	2,640,000
Judgment tax	1,400,000
Special assessment	1,277,500
River straightening	798,735
Miscellaneous trust funds	328,889
Total	$173,321,260

An amendment to the bill appropriating $2,500,000 for the payment of public benefits for the widening of North State street will be sent to the council at its meeting tomorrow. The expenditure is contingent on the adoption of a bond issue for that amount at the Feb. 24 aldermanic election and mayoralty primary.

$300,000 for Safety Islands.

Another amendment to the appropriation bill to be added Monday will provide for a $300,000 appropriation from the vehicle tax fund for the construction of safety islands on widened streets.

Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the finance committee, presided at the meeting in the absence of Mayor Thompson. In explanation of Thompson's absence, Ald. Oscar Nelson [46th] stated that he is still in Mount Clemens, Mich., but probably would be in Chicago today.

Although Thompson wasn't present he submitted the appointment of John J. McKeone to the zoning board of appeals, to fill the vacancy in the $5,000 a year job caused by the resignation of John A. Lind, contractor. McKeone for four years was a Deneen henchman and held a job in the Municipal court clerk's office. He now represents Thompson in the 40th ward.

Extend Time for Car Lines.

The time in which the surface and elevated lines may accept the new transit ordinance was extended to May 22, as was the time of the 1907 franchise, under which the surface lines operate.

The council, by a unanimous vote, approved the transfer of the traffic light bureau from Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, to the department of gas and electricity. The change was recommended by the finance committee because of trouble experienced under Wolfe with contracts for the maintenance of curb flasher signals.

GROWING TAXES DISTURB COUNTY TRUCK FARMERS

Truck farmers whose annual output is valued at $10,000,000 and whose crops are grown within the borders of Cook county met yesterday to face two of their many current problems—mounting expenses and the inroads of competing vegetables shipped from other areas to supply Chicago's appetite.

The gardeners called attention to the fact that, despite its population of nearly 4,000,000, Cook county has a larger agricultural area than any other county in Illinois.

More than two-thirds of the 1,500 members of the Cook county truck gardeners' association, together with many others from Du Page and Lake counties, attended the annual session in the Masonic temple at Gale and Milwaukee avenues.

The discussion of growing expenses concerned principally the increase in taxes on farm lands in the county as a result of the reassessment and the encroachment of real estate subdivisions.

The board of directors of the association last night elected the following officers: President, August Geweke of Des Plaines; first vice president, Walter F. Sass, Norwood Park; second vice president, Thomas Hockstra, South Holland; treasurer, John Jaacks, Des Plaines, and secretary, George Steil, Des Plaines.

RELEASE FIGURES ON PERSONAL TAX FOR EVANSTON

No Assessment Penalties Listed There.

Personal property assessments for Evanston were released yesterday by the board of assessors. The records show that no penalties for failure to file a 1930 tax schedule were levied against residents of Evanston, although only one-half of the schedules sent out were returned by the taxpayers.

In Chicago a valuation penalty of 50 per cent of the 1929 personalty valuation was made to arrive at the 1930 valuation in all cases where the tax schedules were not filed. Nathan L. Noach, the assessor for Evanston, reported to the board that he had estimated the 1930 valuations against persons who had not filed schedules by an examination of the valuations of previous years.

Members of the board of assessors would not say yesterday whether the penalties will be levied against Evanston residents the same as they were against residents of Chicago.

The highest valuation in Evanston was one of $50,000 on the personal property in the home of Charles G. Dawes, 225 Greenwood boulevard. E. J. Buffington, 1140 Forest avenue, was assessed at $40,000.

SCHOOL BUDGET SECRETS TO BE TOLD TOMORROW

Three Days of Public Meetings Planned.

The recommendations of the school board's finance committee for spending more than $95,000,000 of public funds on the public school system in 1931 will be made known at three public meetings, to be held tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday. The last of six secret sessions of the committee, conducted by Chairman James A. Hemingway, will be held tomorrow morning.

A recommendation of the committee which is expected to arouse controversy in the open meetings suggests the employment of a confidential secretary for each trustee. The salary of each secretary would be about $5,000, it was learned. An annual expenditure of more than $60,000 would be required to maintain such a staff.

Find No Funds for Teachers.

From reports of the progress which the finance committee has made behind closed doors, it was indicated that every department in the school system is well taken care of with the exception of the education department. Supt. William J. Bogan's anxiety concerning his request for more teachers to relieve overcrowded classes has increased as the trustees continue to insist that they do not know where they will get the $300,000 that has been granted for this purpose.

More than $300,000 has been recommended for addition to the preliminary draft of the budget for the hiring of new engineers and janitors and for other expenditures not instructional. Included is an addition of $50,000 to the "president's contingent fund" which it is said will be devoted to lobbying in Springfield.

Disgrace, Prof. Henry Says.

Prof. Nelson Henry of the University of Chicago, chairman of the superintendent's advisory council on the budget, said yesterday: "Chicago has departed definitely from the general educational standard of the country. That portion of its yearly expenditure for strictly educational purposes is disgracefully small."

Prof. Henry has compiled a list of ten cities showing the amount each city spent on current school expenses (excluding construction) in 1928-29, the amount of the current expenses devoted to instruction, and the number of school pupils in each city. The table, which follows, shows that while Chicago has 45 per cent of the number of pupils attending New York schools, it spent only 34 per cent of New York's expenditure on instruction:

City—	Current expenses.	For instruction.	Attendance.
N. York	$136,663,000	$110,982,000	947,534
Chicago	53,262,000	37,572,000	428,514
Phila.	26,140,000	20,452,000	237,076
Detroit	22,425,000	17,680,000	210,356
L.Angeles	28,802,000	22,897,000	208,760
Cleveland	17,111,000	12,574,000	136,146
Baltimore	8,742,000	7,052,000	94,829
St. Louis	11,311,000	8,542,000	91,369
Pittsb'gh.	11,311,000	8,598,000	87,463
S. Fran.	8,546,000	6,910,000	62,652

In comparing the figures for New York and Chicago it was pointed out that New York spends $116 on the instruction of each pupil, or 33 per cent more than the $87 that Chicago spends.

THREE ARRESTED AFTER BOMBING IN MELROSE PARK

Three minor Melrose Park politicians were arrested yesterday following the bombing of a two story frame building at 154 North 18th avenue in the western suburb. The building is the home of Pasquale Larry, a trucking contractor.

The bomb caused damage estimated at $1,000. Five persons were in the building—Larry, his wife, Mary; a grown daughter, and two brothers, Dominick and Henry Larry. The latter is employed as a laborer by the sanitary district.

The men arrested are Michael Fusaro, 114 North 20th avenue, owner of a proolroom and Democratic precinct committeeman; Mike Derrico, 112 North 21st avenue, and his brother, Tony, 1011 North 21st avenue.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Edward Markham, who ordered the arrests, the bombing was the result of a political feud between the Derrico brothers and Fusaro on one side and Henry Larry and Willie Firano, Democratic district committeeman, over the allotment of jobs.

CHICAGO PRESSES REMAP FIGHT ON GOV. EMMERSON

Charge He Urges Ignoring of Constitution.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Cook county legislators yesterday prepared to take the fight to Gov. L. L. Emmerson without delay on reapportionment, now twenty years overdue.

A resolution accusing the governor of indirectly counseling the lawmakers, in his message Wednesday, to ignore the mandate of the constitution which, with right hands upraised, they had just sworn to uphold, was prepared yesterday by Senator Tom Courtney, minority leader. The governor's proposal was to limit Cook county's representation in the general assembly instead of remapping the state on the basis of the federal census as required by the basic law.

Calls for Redistricting Map.

Senator Courtney's resolution which calls on the legislative reference bureau at Springfield to submit a tentative redistricting map by March 1, is to be presented when the senate convenes Wednesday.

With some of its "whereas-es" chopped out, the resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, One of the outstanding problems confronting the 57th general assembly is the reapportionment of the state.

"Article 4 of the constitution lays an explicit mandate on the legislature to redistrict the senatorial districts every ten years on the basis of the federal census, an obligation that has been unfulfilled for the last twenty years.

Hits at Governor's Message.

"Twenty-six new members of the senate took the oath last Wednesday to obey the constitution of Illinois, and immediately following, Gov. Emmerson in his message to the general assembly indirectly advised them to ignore the mandate of the constitution they had just sworn to uphold.

"Resolved, that the members of the senate of the 57th general assembly hereby direct the legislative reference bureau to prepare and submit to the senate not later than March 1 a map apportioning the state into 51 new senatorial districts in compliance with the constitution, thereby demonstrating to the people that the state senators realize the sacredness of their oath to uphold the constitution."

The resolution will be pressed for adoption the following week, and it will signal the opening of the battle. Similar action is planned in the house.

Form Bloc for Action.

Meanwhile the formation of a "popular government" bloc of Republicans and Democrats is being promoted among legislators from Cook county and other growing centers now subjected to "taxation without representation" due to the growth and shifting of population during the thirty years in which the present districts have been in operation.

The idea of the "popular government" movement is to place the battle for reapportionment and for repeal of the search and seizure act on a trading basis. The promoters are urging no support for administration measures unless there is reciprocity on the remapping and repealer issues.

The Cook county Democrats last week took formal action in their local caucus, making passage of their program a prerequisite of their support of any other bills or state appropriation measures. A similar disposition is being displayed among some Republican members.

Two Mandates, O'Grady Says.

"Two mandates are upon the legislature," said Representative Thomas J. O'Grady, Democrat, of Chicago yesterday. "One is the constitutional instruction to reapportion the senatorial districts. The other is the instruction of the voters in the referendum last November to repeal the state prohibition law.

"These measures, by virtue of the mandates behind them, take precedence over all else. How are we to survive as a democracy with a representative form of government unless these are carried into effect? Many members favor holding everything else back until there is action on repealer and reapportionment."

The Vest Pocket Boroughs.

What with the shifts of population, the growth of the cities, and the encroachment of manufacturing districts upon old residential sections, the vest pocket boroughs of Chicago are now pressing upon downstate as well as Chicago. Population figures on Cook county's 19 senatorial districts are not yet prepared, as census districts overlap the boundaries of wards and legislative districts. But the vote is a good index to the prevailing lopsidedness.

Last November the 17th district, smallest of the west side pocket bailiwicks, cast only 11,236 ballots. Up in the northwest corner the 25th district cast 149,601 ballots. The 25th has more than fourteen times the voting population of the smallest midget district.

Contrast with Downstate.

When downstate is brought into the situation, the 17th district has only one-third the voting strength of the 51st which is the smallest of the downstate districts. In the "Bloody 20th" ward a voter has three times as much representation at Springfield as a voter in Metropolis, down on the Ohio. At that a Metropolis voter has twice as much voice as a voter in Cairo or East St. Louis.

In the election of 1928, three pocket boroughs along the west bank of the Chicago river, the 17th, 15th, and 27th cast only 44,246 votes on governor and elected three state senators and twelve representatives.

In the 32 downstate districts, 24 districts each cast in excess of 39,000 votes and elected one senator and three representatives apiece. Eighteen of the downstate districts each polled more than 44,000 votes, but each of these has only one-third the representation given 44,000 voters in the three west side pocket bailiwicks.

FIANCE DIES

MISS LORETTA BREMNER.

[Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

Boston, Mass., Jan. 10.—(AP)—A girl from Chicago came this afternoon to share her sorrow with Mayor James M. Curley over the loss of his son, James Jr., whom she was to marry next June.

A hurried railroad trip brought Loretta Bremner to the Curley home.

In June the boy would have been graduated from the Harvard law school. Yesterday he died three hours after an operation which had seemed so successful his father had left the hospital.

Miss Bremner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bremner of Chicago. She was a classmate of Mayor Curley's daughter, Mary, at the College of the Sacred Heart, Manhattanville, N. Y.

Balchen Hopes to Better Record of Graf Zeppelin

Milford, Del., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Announcement was made here today that Bernt Balchen, widely known aviator, is planning a world circling flight in a Fokker airplane in an effort to beat the time made by the Graf Zeppelin in September, 1929. Balchen said he hoped to start about April. In its tour the Graf Zeppelin consumed 21 days, 8 hours and 26 minutes from Lakehurst, and 20 days four hours from Friedrichshafen, Germany, back to that point.

A. OF C. INDORSES MICHIGAN AVENUE TRAFFIC PROJECT

Progressive Light Plan Wins Approval.

Further support of progressive traffic signal lights for Michigan avenue between Oak and 22d streets came yesterday from the Chicago Association of Commerce. The association's traffic experts joined those of the Chicago Motor club in taking issue with President E. J. Kelly of the south park board who has expressed doubt as to the practicability of such a system.

Traffic experts are urging that the present synchronized light, now under three jurisdictions, be replaced by progressive lights under unified control. The section of Michigan avenue involved is under the jurisdiction of the south park board from 22d to Randolph street, of the city from Randolph street to the bridge, and of Lincoln park north from the bridge to Oak street.

Cites U. S. Conference Report.

"The value of the progressive type of signal system was clearly recognized last June when the national conference on street and highway safety placed it in the preferred class," Robert Nau, secretary of the street traffic committee of the association of commerce, said yesterday.

"The approval of such a system came after an exhaustive study made by the American Engineering council, which body acted as an advisory board to the conference.

"A progressive system discourages speeding and permits a uniform safe speed over a considerable distance. Motorists today on Michigan avenue think they are making rapid progress, but the long delays at cross intersections when they are stopped actually nullifies the gains made while moving.

Side Streets Are Clogged.

"Then again the present long waits on streets entering Michigan avenue cause drivers to become impatient and at the same time block traffic in these cross streets. With a progressive system the total cycle is shorter; thus there is less opportunity for traffic to pile up in the downtown streets entering Michigan avenue.

"The present long cycle on Michigan avenue and the much shorter one of the loop system cannot be made to work efficiently together. When the loop system was first installed the complete cycle was about 75 seconds. Now, with no parking in force, it has been reduced to 55 seconds, which has been of great advantage to traffic."

Mail Plane for London Crashes in Dark; 2 Killed

BRUSSELS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—A pilot and mechanic, the only occupants of the night air mail plane from Brussels to London, were killed when the plane crashed at midnight at Melle. Because of the fog the pilot decided to return to Brussels, but turning at too low a height the wing tip struck the ground and the plane was wrecked.

WIFE IS CHARGED WITH HIRING MEN TO KILL HUSBAND

Fee $500, Officers Say; Three Are Held.

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 10.—(AP)—A plump and mild mannered Italian woman in her middle thirties, mother of four children, was charged today with having paid two men $500 to kill her husband. She told police he had beaten her almost every day during the 20 years of their married life.

The staccato barking of a revolver last Thursday night brought men running out of their homes in a quiet residential street in the suburban town of Mamaroneck. They found Giovanni Volpi, restaurant proprietor of New York, sprawled on the pavement, dying, with five bullet wounds in his body.

Two Are Nabbed.

A few minutes later in the railroad station at Mamaroneck Alphonse Corrato of New York and Joseph Cowercori of Brooklyn were arrested. One carried a revolver, police said. Another gun, all its chambers empty, was found on the floor in the station.

Twenty-four hours later the widow, Mrs. Rosina Volpi, was brought from her home in Brooklyn. Today, after a grilling that lasted all night, she was placed under arrest.

Statements made by the two men involved her in the killing, police and members of the district attorney's office said. The woman and both men made statements, which were not, however, confessions.

Married at 16.

Mrs. Volpi's story, police said, was one of long years of cruel treatment and infidelity on the part of her husband. She married him when she was only 16, she said, and once a few years after their marriage he tried to shoot her. She is now charged with having paid Corrato and Cowercori to put him out of the way.

3,376,438 PEOPLE IN CHICAGO, SAYS A. OF C. REPORT

Metropolitan Area Figure Is 4,675,877.

A final population total of 4,675,877 for the Chicago metropolitan area was announced yesterday by the Chicago Association of Commerce. This figure, based on a revision of the federal census figure of last April, gives the area an increase of 17,877 over the government tabulation.

The population of Chicago proper is fixed under the revision at 3,376,438. The average annual population growth of the metropolitan area is placed at 115,442 persons, representing an increase of 33 per cent over ten years. The state's final population is fixed at 7,630,654, an increase of 1,145,374 during ten years.

The population per square mile in the metropolitan area is estimated at 1,300, for Cook county the estimate is 4,268, and for the entire state 136.2.

Rural Population 151,000.

Discussing changes observed in the metropolitan area, J. E. Vesely, research director of the Association of Commerce, pointed out that the rural population is now only 151,000.

"This total," Mr. Vesely predicts, "will be practically wiped out by 1940, due to the fact that farm lands close to urban centers are steadily being taken over by subdividers at prices six times the value of the land for farming purposes.

"Golf courses also bring prices far above the value of truck farming land as such, and these courses seem to be an essential part of the new subdivision development."

Figures for Six Counties.

Final population figures in the six counties of the metropolitan area follow:

Both at Churches

Mrs. Eleanor Freer Willson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Freer of 33 Bellevue place, and Leonard D. Karcher, son of Mrs. Louis Karcher of 1120 Lake Shore drive, were married at 5 o'clock yesterday at the New England Congregational church. The bride wore a turquoise crêpe gown and a brown velvet hat and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

The marriage of Miss Anna Catherine Hurd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hurd of Evanston, to Howard Keller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Keller of 6171 Sheridan road, was solemnized at 8:30 o'clock last night at St. Mary's church in Evanston. A reception at the Evanston Country club followed the ceremony.

The bride wore an eggshell satin gown of simple design and a tulle veil cascading from a snug cap of family lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. The matron and maid of honor, Mrs. Carroll H. Harrington and Miss Julia Hurd, wore lace frocks and held clusters of forget-me-nots and sweetheart roses. George Keller served as best man for his brother.

W. C. T. U. MEMBER GIVES HER STORY OF SPIKED PUNCH

"Some lawless person who gained admittance to a clean party" spiked the drinks at the ladies' night social given by the Kiwanis club of Lake Forest in Deerpath inn on Thursday night, Mrs. William M. Gourley declared at her home at 406 East Westminster avenue, Lake Forest, yesterday.

Mrs. Gourley, who is a member of the W. C. T. U. and who stumped the state for Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, Volsteadian crusader in the last senatorial campaign, walked out of the party after sipping her punch and declaring firmly that "they're serving liquor here."

Despite the fact that Dr. A. J. Rissinger tipped and smashed the bowl, Mrs. Gourley kept her glass and she said yesterday that she had sufficient of the "liquor" for an analysis if she decided to complain to the state's attorney. Mrs. Gourley and her husband, a lumberman, were the invited guests of James Anderson, a member. Mrs. Gourley said she was satisfied that neither the club nor the inn had anything to do with the spiking of the punch.

Urge Souvenir from City for New Cruiser Chicago

A movement to provide the new navy cruiser Chicago, which was launched recently and is to be commissoned in March, with a gift souvenir from the city of Chicago, was indorsed yesterday at a meeting of the Lake Michigan Yachting association in the Hotel Sherman. A ship's bell was suggested as an appropriate gift. The matter will be brought to the attention of the Association of Commerce, it was said.

FILE NEW PAPERS IN FIGHT AGAINST EXPERT FEE ORDER

Additional suggestions in support of the motion to vacate an order denying the petition by THE TRIBUNE for a rehearing in the expert fee case were filed yesterday in the Illinois Supreme court by the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin, representing THE TRIBUNE. In a decision last October the court reversed a ruling of Circuit Judge Hugo Friend and held that Mayor Thompson and George F. Harding, who was city controller at the time of the actions forming the basis of the suit, were not guilty of conspiracy to defraud taxpayers of about $1,800,000 which was paid to real estate valuation experts and were not liable for return of the money, which, with interest, totaled $2,245,604.

The suggestions were filed on the last day allowed by the court. The Supreme court has allowed the defendants until Feb. 1 to make answer to the additional suggestions.

Escaped Pickpocket Put in Cell at County Jail

William Carey, 50 years old, convicted pickpocket, whose escape from Oak Forest infirmary several months ago brought threats of contempt action against several officials, was returned to the County jail yesterday by Sergt. John Warren of the detective bureau. He was recently arrested in Detroit. Warden David Moneypenny of the jail said that Carey will be kept safely under lock and key this time to serve the one year sentence imposed by Judge John Sbarbaro.

ASKS RECEIVER FOR MO.-KANSAS PIPE LINE CO.

Charges Fraud in Stock Promotions.

Fraudulent promotion schemes are charged in a petition filed in the federal District court yesterday asking the appointment of a receiver for the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company, 10 South La Salle street, and more than a dozen of its subsidiaries operating throughout the south and middle west.

The petition was filed by the law firm of Perlman, Goodman & Scolnik on behalf of three Cincinnati stockholders of the company, which at one time claimed assets of $67,000,000. Frank P. Parish, organizer of the company and of the Frank P. Parish company, which dealt exclusively in the stock of the holding concern, is named as the principal defendant.

Charge False Statements.

Stock in the concern is sold on the Chicago Stock Exchange and the New York curb and was quoted yesterday at $8⅝, while shortly after the organization of the company in May, 1928, according to the petition, the stock was manipulated up to $40 a share. It recently sold as low as $5.

Parish and other members of the board of directors, Burt R. Bay, Samuel J. Maddin, W. J. Hinchley, William T. Stevenson, Walter H. Scholp, Ralph B. Mayo, C. S. Shippey, and Edgar H. Stapper, are charged with issuing false financial statements, spreading propaganda to manipulate the price of the stock, and with manipulation through the reorganization of the capital stock from time to time.

It is alleged that in one instance $651,000 was paid for political purposes and that another $880,000 was paid out in graft, although the details are not set forth. The petition demands a full accounting of the activities of the concern.

Report Capital Stock Boost.

Parish, it is stated, went into voluntary bankruptcy in 1926 and organized the pipe line company in 1928 with no financial standing. It is charged that from an initial declared value of $3,000,000 the capital stock was boosted in a few months to $67,000,000. It is charged that the name of Francis I. du Pont, a relative of the Du Pont family of Delaware, was added to the board of directors for the sole purpose of issuing glowing circulars inferring that the famous capitalists of that name were back of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company. Francis I. du Pont had no financial connection with the widely known Du Pont interests, it is charged.

A financial bulletin of the Columbus Better business bureau states that the stock is carried on the books of the company at a $5 value and that the difference between this and the actual cash received is set up as capital surplus. Dividends of 10 per cent annually are offered and paid in stock, it is charged. There is a total authorized issue of 5,000,000 shares and for the year ended March 31, 1930, profits were $294,327 after payment of taxes, interest, minority interest, etc., but before depletion and depreciation, etc.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Through an error in reporting two cases in the Grand Crossing police court last Monday the name of Edward Delhanty, 32 years old, of 6529 Kimbark avenue, was listed as the complaining witness against a Negro woman pickpocket. Delhanty was in court as a witness in another case.

SOUTH YEARNING FOR RETURN OF "GOOD OLD DAYS"

Economic Woes Stress Lure of Simple Life.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—In a window in Main street, Memphis, there is a gaudy painting of an incredibly green and peaceful garden where lions and lambs are playing together, and monkeys are swinging by their tails over the heads of Adam and Eve. She is just handing him the apple, across concealing bushes, and the picture is labeled "The First Sin."

Translated into an economic thought this might apply to the stand taken by 12 southerners who have just collaborated in a book, "I'll Take My Stand," which is a plea for a return in part at least to the agrarian tradition of the south. The acceptance of the cotton gin would be the first sin that has led to all the horrors of the industrial age. It has stirred quite a debate through the south, where there has been such a sad record of bank failures and cotton troubles, now being voiced in pleas for governmental relief.

Would Be Self-Sustaining.

Economic ills have made people stop and think, and while there is little likelihood of any general return to the fine and simple life of the early days, with its genuine culture and broad and tolerant outlook on the world, there is a practical echo of this in the move to make each farmer and plantation owner more self-sustaining in the future.

A peculiar situation exists in this, one of the richest alluvial valleys in the world, and in the adjoining hill country, that many farmers are without enough to eat. In Tennessee and in Arkansas there is genuine need, and the Red Cross activity is to be increased.

"It is pathetic to contemplate," says the Memphis Commercial-Appeal today, "that one can travel through this fertile farming section and come upon farm homes where there are no chickens in the back yard, no pigs in the pen, no potatoes in the cellar—not even a garden plot. Most farmers in the tri-states could have had a winter of comfort and bounty. Pantry shelves ought to be lined with home preserved fruits and vegetables. There should be hams and slabs of meat and old reliable 'sowbelly,' called 'pig bosom' by elegant folk, hanging from the smokehouse beams. The farmer who has food for his family and feed for his stock this winter is hard to find."

Cotton Acreage May Be Cut.

It is agreed by all that a reduction in the cotton acreage in 1931 is imperative, and also that there should be supplementary production of other crops for food and feed supplies. Farmers who have depended upon this one crop and bankers who have financed them are in the same leaky boat, looking toward the same shore of safety for next year. Economic necessity will get results where writers and economists fail, just as politicians may get results where reformers fail.

There is no definite improvement in business conditions in this midsouth section, although it is felt that this is just around the corner, with spring.

"I see no signs of improvement yet, but I know it is coming," said Brinkley Snowden, president of the Bank of Commerce and Trust company, today.

"I know of a no more resilient people than ours. I have watched them for 60 years. They have gone through almost everything, fire and flood, drought and panics, and they always come out on top and happy. I don't know how they do it but they do. Just at present they need government aid in many places, just as much in Tennessee as in Arkansas. I have heard a good deal of talk about it in Washington, but I have not seen any money coming through to them."

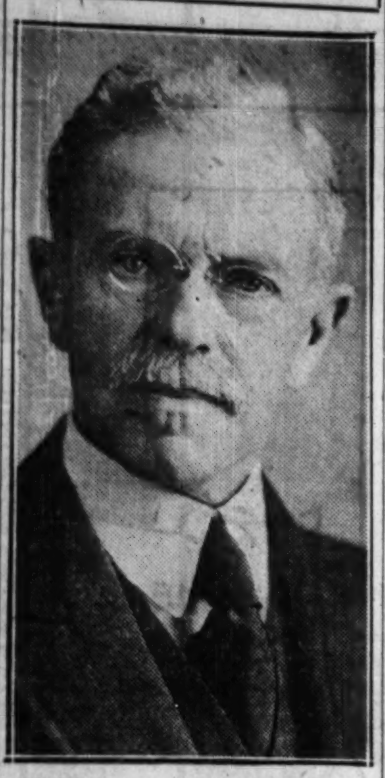
To Quit Princeton



President John Grier Hibben.

DR. HIBBEN WILL QUIT PRINCETON IN JUNE OF 1932

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Dr. John Grier Hibben tonight announced he would resign as president of Princeton university at the end of the academic year in 1932.

Dr. Hibben, in a formal statement, added that there had been no discussion by the board of trustees of his successor.

"For a long time I have had in mind the intention of retiring from my present office at the end of 20 years of service, that is, in June of 1932," he said. "I informally expressed this intention at the meeting of the board of trustees last June. I have given no notice of my intention either to the faculty or to the alumni, having expected to do this at a subsequent time.

Dr. Hibben was elected president of the university January 11, 1912, and inaugurated the following May 12. He succeeded Woodrow Wilson, who resigned in 1910 upon his election as governor of New Jersey.

Only three of Princeton's fourteen presidents served terms longer than the 20 years of Dr. Hibben. They were John Witherspoon, the sixth president, who served from 1768 to 1799; James Carnohan, the ninth, from 1823 to 1854, and James McCosh, the eleventh, from 1868 to 1888.

Dr. Hibben was graduated from Princeton in 1882. He was born in Peoria, Ill., in 1861.

Raymond A. Fosdick, New York lawyer and a Princeton graduate in 1950, was mentioned tonight as a possible successor to the presidency. He was elected to the board of trustees last fall.

THREE SLAYERS NOW IN PRISON SEEK CLEMENCY

Three convicted murderers from Chicago, one of them a woman, served notice yesterday that they will ask for executive clemency before the state board of pardons and paroles at the January session. They are all serving long prison terms and are asking the parole board to cut their sentences so they will be eligible for parole.

Kitty Malm, known at the time of her crime as the "tiger lady," announced that she would ask the board to reduce her life sentence. The penalty was imposed for the murder of Edward Lehman in 1923 during a robbery. Martin Durkin and Ira D. Perry Jr. are the other two killers asking for clemency.

Perry was once released on a lowered sentence by former Gov. Small, but a storm of public protest caused the clemency order to be rescinded. He is under life sentence for the murder of a jeweler in 1921. He is the son of wealthy parents. Durkin killed a federal agent.

ROMANCE ENDS IN POISON.

Alton, Ill., Jan. 10.—[U. P.]—The two week romance of Earl Tremmel, 28, ended in a tragedy when he took poison after his proposal of marriage was spurned by 18 year old Idella Miller. "I didn't even know his last name," the girl said.

. . . . "at the Baldwin"

. . . perhaps the most famous phrase in all music . . . for there is scarcely an hour of the day or evening but that somewhere the voice of the Baldwin is being heard in public . . . in recital-halls, theatres, opera houses and from more than two hundred broadcasting stations. «at the Baldwin» to thousands means the supreme pleasure of sitting down and joining hands, as it were, with the ivory and ebony fingers of the beautiful Baldwin. To trade your present piano for a Baldwin is good judgment. To trade it NOW is to enjoy truly great music today as well as countless tomorrows.

More often than not, when you hear piano music over the air, it is someone «at the Baldwin»

GUNMEN HERD 5 IN BANK VAULT AND TAKE $7,000

Terrorize Employes and Woman Patron.

Five bandits held up the Franklin Park State bank, 9701 Franklin avenue, Franklin Park, yesterday morning a few minutes after its doors were opened, terrified four bank employes and a woman patron and made away with $7,000 in cash and $15,000 in nonnegotiable securities.

Only three minutes were required by the robbers to finish their job; then they escaped in two automobiles. Two bandits entered first and found three employes present: Mrs. Irene Havelick, 30 years old, of Franklin Park, assistant cashier; Harvey Schnadt of Bartlett, a teller; and Jens Sorenson of Franklin Park, the janitor.

Bandit Draws Pistol.

The men warmed their hands at a radiator and then stepped to the cage. One of them, stout and shabbily dressed, pulled an automatic pistol from his pocket and, addressing Miss Havelick and Schnadt, ordered:

"Listen, sister, and you, too, guy, stand back there and keep quiet."

His companion drew a sawed-off shotgun from his coat, went to the rear of the bank and ordered the janitor into the cage. Walter De Vriendt, a second teller, walked in at this point and was lined up in the cage with the others. While two other men walked into the lobby to guard the door the gunmen scooped up the cash in the cage and then, prodding Schnadt with the shotgun ordered him to open the vault. When the door was open the bandits went into the vault and seized currency and bonds and stuffed them into a canvas bag.

Miss Mary Mina, 21 years old of Franklin Park entered and, with the employés, was ordered into the vault. The robbers closed the grill door, ran out the front door and sped away in their cars. One car went east and the other west.

Two Franklin Park residents watched the holdup from across the street, but were unable to interfere. They said a lookout sat at the wheel of one of the cars. The Franklin Park police believe there was a sixth man at the wheel of the other auto.

Italian Plane Which Flew Atlantic Sinks in Storm

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

NATAL, Brazil, Jan. 10.—The plane of Capt. Ugo Baistrocchi of the Italian trans-Atlantic air fleet was sunk at 3 o'clock this morning in a collision, during a violent rainstorm, with the scout cruiser Pesagui, which was towing it. Capt. Baistrocchi and his companions in spite of the high seas saved all the instruments and took them on board the cruiser. Gen. Italo Balbo and his fellow flyers, who have been waiting here for Capt. Baistrocchi, will hop tomorrow morning for Bahia if the weather is favorable.

RECEIVER TAKES OVER AFFAIRS OF CLOSED BANK

James C. White, Chicago attorney and until recently a vice president of the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank, assumed charge yesterday as receiver of the closed Lawrence Avenue National bank, looted on New Year's day of approximately $80,000 and believed to have lost another $100,000 through embezzlement.

Mr. White immediately began an examination of the books but announced that no statement could be made as to the bank's solvency or when it could be opened.

John E. Malloy, assistant cashier of the bank, who is charged with embezzlement, appeared before United States Commissioner Walker yesterday for a hearing, but the case was continued until Jan. 31 on the motion of Assistant United States Attorney Owen A. West, who has already begun presentation of the case to the federal grand jury.

THE RIPE TIME FOR A NEW REGIME.

The qualities which made the United States were of individual initiative, imagination, self-dependence and independence. The average American citizen asked only his chance. He expected his government to give him that. He was able to take care of himself, in the main expecting a square deal and giving one. He was an individualist and he believed in the durability of progress made by private enterprise.

These qualities are being destroyed by the kind of government which has been evolved out of communistic urges predominant in Washington, and what the nation needs is a leadership which will return to the elemental principles of American government, political action and social organization.

People long subjected to the kind of government now given the United States and tolerant of it could not have made this republic. They would have been incapable of it. The official interference with their lives, with their acts and their intentions would have deprived them of the capacity for independent accomplishment. The present condition of their government could not have been brought about if it had been plainly stated as policy in the beginning. Whenever anything suggesting such policies has been stated as political doctrine it has been suppressed by the voters. If the people wanted it they could elect Norman Thomas, the Socialist, or Zach Foster, the communist, and declare themselves for it. They would not even take a chance with Bryan.

The communizing of American life is done between elections and not in them or with their authority. If a dependable leadership can be found there will be a ready response to it from people weary of boards, commissions, commissars, official interference with private enterprise and private lives and the suffocating weight of bureaucracy, regulatory statutes and irresponsible congressmen upon industry, transportation, and all production.

The federal government cannot run the business and the affairs of the United States. It can't even build a postoffice in the city of Chicago. The people of the United States know, if they know anything, that they have not made their success in political action. They have not found the reasons for their greatness in their politicians, big or little. The best of the public men have been those who realized as acutely as any private citizen the limitations of government. The need is to recruit for public service new men of the old type.

Government can ruin but it cannot run the enterprises necessary to the success of the American people. It cannot suppress everything that is active, resourceful and competent in American life and produce a prosperous nation. The invasion by government into private affairs, its encroachments upon the individual and its deadly interference with the causes of national prosperity and well-being have been gradual but persistent. This little group and that little group has had its way at Washington and now the United States in its political organization is something it never was intended to be and something which it will not continue to be long if its people see their real needs.

What it has become is self-evident, and unfortunately the consequences are presenting their bill of costs. The time is at hand for a leadership of constructive ability which will take another road. It is to be expected that the people will respond by trimming their government down to its proper proportions, its proper functions and its proper place before it has them suffocated.

SEEING THE SEA SERPENT.

The sea serpent is pretty generally assumed by landlubbers to be a figment of the mariner's imagination or of his romantic invention. Sailors are reticent on the subject because of this skepticism, but we suspect they are not shaken in their belief in the actual existence of the monster. It is interesting, therefore, to find in no less respectable a journal than the London Times evidence by ostensibly responsible witnesses, submitted by no less an individual than Sir William Brandforth Griffith.

Unfortunately, Sir William, though on deck at the time of the appearance, did not himself observe it, a rather remarkable fact, and the flippant will note that the names of the witnesses are Punch, Craven, and Pooley. But with the more serious minded this irrelevancy will not disparage their testimony. Pooley is in fact master of the ship from which the serpent was seen· Punch, commander of a district in Nigeria, and Craven, captain of the A. F. F., whatever that is, in Sierra Leone, all, it would seem, highly credible persons. They certify that on a clear day the serpent was seen by them plainly. Their combined observations report that the creature was brownish white in color, with a body round in shape, about 18 to 24 inches in diameter, and perhaps 40 feet in length. The ship passed at a distance of 30 to 40 feet, the water was clear and, with a head wind, the steamer passed slowly, so that opportunity for observation was good. Discrepancies in estimates of the distance of the ship and the dimensions of the serpent are not serious enough to discredit the evidence, but rather give it plausibility.

As only one witness was a mariner, while two were landsmen of education and responsibility, we think their testimony is something even skepticism cannot be permitted to dismiss. We confess that this gives us much satisfaction, for we have a weakness for the sea serpent and wish we could see one, at a safe distance. We should like even better to see a sea nymph riding a dolphin, and we think the skepticism of the amateur scientific mind has been overdone. We are living in an age when skepticism ought to be difficult, since every crowded year produces its new miracles. Science itself produces them, and in a sense it is true that the greater the scientist the greater his caution in disbelief.

REVIVING CIVIL RIGHTS.

The federal Supreme court's decision in the Go-Bart case is a landmark of returning sanity in law enforcement. It is a reassertion of the right of citizens guaranteed in the 4th article of the bill of rights "to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures."

In the case decided, prohibition agents had entered the offices of the defendant company, under cover of a warrant supported by the charge of nuisance, and seized and held certain papers. The Supreme court holds this a violation of the second clause of the 4th amendment, which declares that "warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

This clause, says the court, "plainly prevents the issuance of warrants on loose, vague or doubtful bases of fact. It emphasizes the purpose to protect against all general searches. Since the creation of our government such searches have been deemed obnoxious to the fundamental principles of liberty. The amendment is to be liberally construed and all owe vigilance for its effective enforcement lest there shall be impairment of the rights for the protection of which it was adopted."

This guaranty would be virtually worthless if officers of the law under cover of a general warrant were justified in engaging in exploring expeditions even by the discovery of evidence of unlawful acts. This should be clear upon reflection, though the zealot does not concede it. Our forefathers were closer to experience of the oppression of government than we have been until recent years and especially until the prohibitory experiment began. But under the dry régime we are learning for ourselves the meaning of civil rights and their practical importance to our peace and freedom. We had forgotten or never learned the lessons our forefathers in the colonies and in England had branded upon their consciousness under the Tudors and Stuarts, but we are now beginning to realize that if we value our happiness as a free people the words of the bill of rights must live again in our administration of the laws.

The bigotry which lies at the heart of the experiment in law-imposed teetotalism has brought forth the old tyrannies, the old ruthless devices of autocratic government. Cooley, one of the chief commentators upon our constitution, says that the 4th amendment probably resulted from the seizure in 1683 of the papers of Algernon Sidney, which papers were subsequently used in convicting him of treason, and also from the similar seizure of the papers of John Wilkes, which took place in 1763, a century nearer to our constitutional period. Mr. Thomas James Norton in his useful little book, "The Constitution of the United States, Its Sources and Application," also quotes from Cooley's discussion of this amendment, in which it is pointed out that "the protection of the constitution is not confined to the dwelling house, but extends to one's person and papers, wherever they may be," since "it is justly assumed that every man may have secrets pertaining to his business, or his family and social relations, to which his books, papers, letters, or journals may bear testimony, but with which the public, or any individuals of the public who may have controversies with him, can have no legitimate concern; and if they happen to be disgraceful to him, they are nevertheless his secrets, and are not without justifiable occasion to be exposed. Moreover, it is as easy to abuse a search for the purpose of destroying evidence that might aid an accused party as it is for obtaining evidence that would injure him, and the citizen needs protection on the one ground as much as on the other."

How little consideration we have had in recent years for these wise and humane principles a little recollection will remind us. Because our generation had not suffered from the tyrannies of government we ignored them under pressure of the impulse to correct concrete evils without much regard to experience or the repudiation of principles of private right which the experience of past ages invalidated. Under the leadership of passionate and one-ideaed reform we have permitted a persistent encroachment upon private right, an encroachment not always rebuked even by the courts. It is only as this process has culminated in the dry law régime that we are waking to its significance and recovering the spirit of individual liberty which inspired our forefathers and stood guard over the progress of the American people.

Editorial of the Day

OMAHA REDUCES NOISE.

[Des Moines Register.]

The success of Omaha in reducing noise has attracted attention from many other cities. This success is all the more noteworthy when it is realized that the silencing of noise nuisances has been accomplished by persuasion rather than by force. Omaha has an anti-noise ordinance providing a fine of $100 for violation, but only one arrest has been made under this law. Moral suasion is the method that has worked best.

In explaining how unnecessary noises were reduced, the mayor of Omaha recently recounted some of the steps taken. First, newsboys were instructed by their employers to solicit sales in only an ordinary tone of voice, and taxi drivers were told to use their horns only when necessary. Then traffic officers were placed at corners in the business district to ask all auto drivers to desist from unnecessary honking.

Other steps included the requesting of railway engine crews not to blow whistles or ring bells except where the state law required, the removal of flat wheels from street cars, the closing of cutouts on motorcycles, the stopping of steel construction work at 10 p. m., and the abolition of unnecessary jangling in the loading of iron bars, pipes, and beams.

AMERICAN HEROES

DAVID CROCKETT

A Brief Review of His Contribution to Our Country

(The articles of which the following is the thirty-fourth are intended as five minute sketches of early Americans of particular achievement and distinction, each flashed briefly against the background of the times and conditions in which the subject made his contributions to the nation. Their names may be well or may be little known now to the generation which has inherited the benefits of wise, laborious, and in many instances heroic work.)

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

CROCKETT'S family antecedents reveal the common story of the frontier. His grandfather was an Irish immigrant, taking up land in Pennsylvania and then going farther and farther into the wilderness and the mountains. The sons continued the march, and David himself, true to the type, was deep in Texas at his death. (In the fight at the Alamo he was one of the six survivors who were killed after capture.) These three generations had followed the lure of new land from the Atlantic seaboard to the extreme frontier of the southwest.

John Crockett, David's father, had taken the family migrations to East Tennessee by 1783. David was born Aug. 17, 1786. The conditions of life were of primitive farming, provision of meat and apparel by hunting, the inevitable fighting with the Indians, the making and almost constant use of corn liquor (the frontier mitigant of hardships and promoter of its conviviality), and the raising of children in the school of the woods.

Crockett's fame is not explained by any distinctive achievements. He became the exemplar of a type, the embodiment of the frontier characteristics; in a way, the average man. Jackson, Boone, Sevier, Houston, Shelby, Pike, and many others impressed their personality on events. Crockett lived as thousands of other men. His adventures were the common incidents of the country. He had a very good idea of himself, but most of the frontiersmen had that of themselves. It was natural that they should. It was a part of their independence and self-reliability. They were men on their own and they made even their vices virtues in asserting themselves against their enemies.

There was no particular reason why wilderness legends should have selected Crockett for immortality, but when they did he was competent to wear them and to preserve the picture of the average man. From an illiterate boyhood he grew into illiterate manhood, but he had social qualities which made him popular in the backwoods assemblies. He had a retentive memory, a gift for stories, some printable; an honest mind, and real independence. Even on the frontier he was better than the average shot.

At 18 he married and several years later, with his family, yielded to the migrating urge and was on his way into western Tennessee to build a new cabin in new land, but not to do much with any of his possessions. Food was too easily procurable in the woods to make hard farming work attractive, and primitive household comforts were satisfactory. He was in this location when the Creek Indian confederation brought on the worst of the Indian wars, with the massacre of the garrison and the settlers at Fort Minns, on the Alabama river.

This broke a long peace and put the frontier to the test of providing for its security by the destruction of the most numerous of the southern tribes. Crockett volunteered in the rising of the riflemen under Jackson. He had encountered most of the hazards of the forests, but this war was new experience. Jackson intended to make it one of extermination, and succeeded in virtually breaking the Creek nation. Crockett's part in it was merely that of hundreds of others. He wasn't greatly impressed by Jackson. Crockett did not have much natural inclination for admiration of other characters. A sense of his own qualities kept him from such enthusiasms. The Creeks were trapped at Tohopeka in March, 1814, and lost most of their fighters.

It was merciless warfare, with desperation on the Indian side and fury on the white, and it involved all the brutal qualities of the inexorable conflict for supremacy, with the decision predetermined by the qualities of the two races. Crockett was more on the amiable side of life. He was not a fighter by instinct and such renown as he had from his army experience came because of his joviality and not because of his combativeness. To the rough men of coarse humor and horse play he was uproariously funny with his stories and, in addition, he was generous. These were qualities which could be made to count in pioneer politics. Crockett was elected to the Tennessee legislature and then to congress. He might have had considerably more success if he had not opposed Jackson, but he refused to trail with the idol of the west.

A typical Crockett story was of his electioneering. In his autobiography, on the authorship of which he was touchy, he said he found himself without funds to buy drinks for some constituents, but he shot a coon and bought a round with the skin. Another round was soon required. Crockett managed to retrieve the skin, without the vender's knowledge, and every time his auditors needed liquor, which seems to have been in ten minute intervals, he used it for currency. The crowd saw the trick, which the saloonkeeper missed. Crockett carried that constituency.

Campaigning was congenial to him. Its natural elements were his own. A stump speaker put his auditors in good humor with liquor and kept them in it with his stories, adjourning the meeting from time to time for more liquor. When Crockett went to Washington he was already a curiosity. Public interest had been aroused in the barely explicable fashion which was to preserve him as an American notable.

East and west were antagonistic sections. The west had the grievances of the frontier. The east heard of the backwoods with amusement, but also with trepidation. The effect of these rough customers on national politics was feared and Jackson had proved that it would be considerable. The west was regarded as crude, quarrelsome, illiterate, unmannerly, and savage. Stories of its ferocity were incredibly exaggerated. Crockett as a specimen of the wilderness had an astonishing run of public favor in the eastern cities. He was received and fêted and conducted himself with an honest naïveté which brought him the respect and friendship of people of consequence and understanding. He was a curiosity, but he was transparently genuine, and if the first idea had been one of amusement the second was one of regard. He could make public speeches creditably and with a native originality and he met the test very well indeed.

Furthermore, Crockett himself made intelligent observations of the east. He changed his mind, for instance, on the tariff, which was hated in the west, and said if the southerners could see the benefits of eastern industrialism as enjoyed by workers they would be convinced of the value of duties for the protection of the growing factories.

In Washington he opposed some Jacksonian measures, and the administration took measures to defeat him for reëlection. That hurt his pride and he tried again and was successful. Crockett had lost his wife when his children were young and had married a second time. After his second congressional experience the Texas frontier stirred his blood and he decided to seek his political future in the new land. He left his family and headed into the southwest in his deerskin hunting clothes and his rifle.

This trail led him to the Alamo when in February Santa Anna's army appeared before it. After the final assault six of the defenders of the place were alive. Crockett was one of them. The six were led before Santa Anna and then and there slain by his orders.

The frontiersman had reached his last frontier.

CARE OF TRACHOMA.

THE following advice to persons with trachoma is given by the United States public health service:

1. Have medical treatment and persist in it long enough to get results. Some cases require treatment two or three years.
2. Keep your face clean.
3. Use clean cloths on the eye. Boil or burn cloths soiled by eye secretions.
4. Use individual wash basin, towel and soap. Allow no one else to use your face washing facilities and do not use those used by others.
5. Be careful not to infect the eyes of babies with soiled cloths or soiled soap.
6. Keep away from dust. If a person with trachoma must work in a dusty trade he should wear goggles while at work.
7. Dark glasses should be worn when exposed to glare, but at no other time.

Trachoma is a form of granulated sore eyes. Whether or not it is caused by an infecting microbe has not been decided, but that susceptible people catch it from others is not doubted. Therefore, the principal way to avoid it is to keep away from those who have it. This applies above all to using the handkerchiefs, towels, soap, and wash basins used by other people.

It is very prevalent in certain regions and scarcely at all so in others. If a man travels into a region where trachoma prevails, while he may not find it best to tie his bath tub on the top of his flivver, he had better say—No, thank you—when asked to step out on the porch and wash his face in the porch wash basin and then use the old roller towel that flaps in the breeze. There are trachoma belts in America just as there are sleeping sickness belts in Africa.

And, finally, diet may be a factor predisposing one toward this infection, as Dr. J. N. McCormick said it was a quarter of a century ago.

NATURE COMES TO AID.

Mrs. J. E. B. writes: My experience carries two lessons for your readers. I am 68 years old, a widow, and the mother of seven children.

I have been subject to severe attacks of migraine for more than fifty years. At first they were most severe. I had to go to bed once a week for a day. I could not see. I vomited, was dizzy, and suffered terribly. I was treated by many physicians but without success. Then I learned to take soda and to follow the next day with a saline purge. When I feel an attack coming on I drink a whole glass of plain water in which is dissolved a half spoonful of cooking soda. I then lie quietly with my eyes closed for half an hour or until I can see to get around. If the attack comes on when I am downtown I go to a drug store, take the soda solution, and then go to a rest room. The next morning I take the saline purge.

Under this treatment my attacks are mild and not as frequent as formerly. This is the first part of my story. In spite of all my trouble I have made a living for my family and educated my children. I never let my sickness put my head under water or, if it did, I bobbed up. And now I feel as full of pep and look younger than any woman my age.

REPLY.

Congratulations. Nature has helped both you and the soda.

WALKING HOME.

T. B. writes: Is it harmful to walk home [about 11 miles] after a hard day's work? The party I am referring to weighs about 134 pounds and is 5 feet 3 inches.

REPLY.

I think most persons would find the program beyond their endurance.

WHOOPING COUGH.

J. H. K. writes: Is there a preventive serum for whooping cough? Is it used by country doctors? In what way does serum, given when a child has whooping cough, benefit?

REPLY.

I do not think sera have any value worth speaking of, in either preventing or curing whooping cough.

WAGE CLAIM.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—The party I was employed by for the last four years filed a petition in bankruptcy June 17, 1930. My claim for wages was filed a few days later. 1. Have I preference in my wage claim? 2. How soon can I expect some action on my claim? 3. Must I wait until a certain time expires before they close the case?

T. P. C.

1. Yes.
2. Ask the receiver.
3. The delay is not uniform.

REPEATED DUMPING.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—[Friend of the People.]—Can anything be done to prevent people from making a dumping ground for ashes, garbage, and débris of all description out of the vacant lot in the rear of Broadway and Grace streets?

This property was cleaned up some three or four months ago, but the last few weeks has seen it rapidly becoming an eyesore and a menace to the health of the community.

J. L. R.

Report is made that lot has been cleaned of all rubbish that could be removed. Old automobile body and fenders will be removed when a cleanup is made throughout the ward of bulky rubbish. Notices have also been served on merchants and householders in the vicinity to stop further dumping on this vacant property.

JOSEPH J. BUTLER,
Superintendent of Streets.

CONDUCT OF JURORS.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is a grand juror permitted to question a witness from the jury box? 2. Is a criminal court juror permitted to question a witness? 3. Is a Circuit court juror permitted to question a witness? 4. Must the questions be made through the judge or may they be made direct to the witness?

J. E. A.

1, 2, and 3. Not without the consent of the judge.

4. It could be done either way with the consent of the judge. The ordinary procedure would be for the juror to suggest a question which he would like to have the lawyer ask.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 11, 1915.

LONDON.—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Boulogne asserts that confirmation has been obtained of reports that the Germans have evacuated Lille and that the city now is virtually in possession of the British.

WASHINGTON.—The British reply to President Wilson's protest on interference with the United States shipping is firm but friendly. Great Britain holds that it must make seizures to prevent the enemy from gaining war munitions. American exporters who make false affidavits are blamed for the trouble. In part the reply says: "Great Britain will interfere only with cargoes of contraband of war destined to Germany and will pay damages if such interference in particular cases be found unwarranted."

BUCHAREST. — Rumania is preparing for war. The war office is hastening the organization of field hospitals and ambulances and the enrollment of surgeons, nurses and sisters of charity. Surgical instruments, hospital linen and bedding are being requisitioned throughout the country.

PARIS.—The official statement of the war ministry indicates that the Germans are continuing their offensive movement along the whole western front but have made no gains. In the Champagne region two counterattacks by the Germans—one to the north of Perthes, the other to the north of Beausejour—were repelled. An unofficial report says that the façade of the cathedral at Soissons was hit by forty-two German shells during the bombardment.

CHICAGO.—Albert Arnold Sprague, founder and senior member of the wholesale grocery firm of Sprague, Warner & Co., died suddenly at his home, 2710 Prairie avenue, at the age of 79. Death was attributed to heart disease.

ST. PAUL.—Marshall P. Wilder, the author and humorist, died at a hotel here from heart disease at the age of 56.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 11, 1901.

BOSTON, Mass.—"'Uncle Tom's Cabin,'" said F. Hopkinson Smith, the author, in an address before the Newton club, "is the most vicious book that ever appeared. It precipitated the war and made the north believe nothing but the worst of the south and was an appalling, awful, and criminal mistake."

CHICAGO.—President H. S. Dietrich of the Chicago Real Estate board, at the organization's eighteenth annual banquet, declared that Chicago's citizens should awake from their lethargy and arise to a realization that the city is practically all that a municipality should not be. He criticized the bad streets, the bridges out of repair and the smoke laden air. Hoke Smith of Atlanta was among the speakers.

LONDON.—William Waldorf Astor, the self-expatriated American, gave a magnificent ball at his country place, Cliveden, to 200 guests from the aristocratic families of England in honor of his daughter, Pauline, and his son, William Waldorf Astor Jr.

CHICAGO.—Godfred Langhenry of Chicago was elected president of the American Bowling congress over C. H. Ebbets of Brooklyn and F. W. Moore of Chicago. W. V. Thompson of Chicago was elected first vice president.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 11, 1881.

LONDON.—The Irish Liberal members, of whom there are thirteen, eight of them representing Ulster constituencies, and a number of English Radical members held a private meeting to take such action as might give effect to their belief that the ministry's proposed land bill for Ireland is utterly inadequate to the circumstances. Gladstone consented to receive a deputation of these members and some of the anti-Parnellite home rulers that they might state to him their views on the vexed question.

BOMBAY.—A plot to depose the rajah and massacre all European residents while in church has been discovered at Kolopore. Twenty-seven natives have been arrested. Three thousand natives are said to have been involved in the plot.

DUBLIN.—Five flying columns, including horse, foot, and artillery, are to commence a flying trip through Ireland today to strike terror into the hearts of the "Irishry," who, instead of being frightened, will doubtless enjoy the unusual show.

FOR PEDESTRIANS, IF ANY.

Winnetka, Ill., Jan. 2.—Every paved road in the country should have at one side a paved walk of the same material that the road is paved with for pedestrians and bicyclists. This walk should be on a level with the center of the road and laid with a pitch of 1 inch for drainage. Since 1816 there have been paved roads all over England, and they all have such a sidewalk. I have walked over them in both England and Scotland, safe from vehicular traffic, with mind at ease, my eyes free to view the scenery, instead of having to keep watch of the road in both directions.

Such walks are as necessary on one side of the Atlantic as the other. Our roads are full of autos, buses, and trucks, whizzing at express speed throughout the length and breadth of the country; yet in many residential districts sidewalks are being done away with altogether, and foot passengers are compelled to dibble along over private lawns or risk their lives at the mercy of drivers, especially in the evening.

Walking is one of the most healthful exercises and should be encouraged. In Europe pedestrians by the million roam over the continent, becoming intimately acquainted with the people and their customs, as no auto tourist can hope to do as he plunges along with his eyes glued to the road, the route signs cars ahead, and behind, oil stations, barbecues, and grade crossings.

Pedestrians have as much right to safe transit as car drivers, and bicycling is becoming increasingly popular and is an excellent exercise. During this speed era little attention may be given to this subject, but as we revert to a saner pace country sidewalks will surely come. And furthermore, in all Great Britain there isn't a single grade crossing and never was. They planned ahead from the start, a thing I fear we Yanks are not so good at.

L. B. RING.

A STOLEN CAR.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 1.—My Hudson automobile was stolen last night, Dec. 31, from in front of 2132 Lemoyne street, between 9:30 and 10 o'clock.

I immediately went to the nearest police station at North avenue and Oakley boulevard to report. The man behind the desk was very impertinent and seemed as if he wanted to argue and discourage people from seeking police assistance. I had called my home to get the license number, vehicle tax number, motor number, etc., but the man behind the desk would not accept any sort of report unless I first went to my home to get my license certificate, saying he could arrest me for trying to make a report of theft without this certificate. Finally, after being compelled to go to my home for this certificate, losing an hour and a quarter of time, which an efficient police department should appreciate, I managed to get in my report. During this time the man behind the desk had been relieved. The second man we came in contact with seemed human and at least acted as though we had some rights.

My car has a number of distinguishing features about it to make it easy to recognize, but in taking my report they would not accept this as information.

This is my first contact with the police department of our city. Now I readily can understand why Chicago bears its reputation for lawlessness.

LEANDER BRADFORD JR.

TWO MEN AND ONE MAID.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—I always read Miss Blake's advice to the lovelorn. Today J. P. M. wrote to her asking if it was O. K. to ask a girl who is going steady for a date. She replied that it would be all right, as the girl might welcome this change of company. It is time for THE TRIBUNE to get some one to take Miss Blake's place. Why should she, knowing so little of the circumstances, say that it would be all right for this fellow to infringe upon the possessions of another? Let us suppose that this girl really loves the man that she is going steady with, and, being womanlike, thinks it very flattering to receive attention from another. With constant persistence on the rival's part, she goes with him. Only once, but still the seed is sown. Perhaps she will decide immediately that she loves her former sweetheart more, perhaps it will take several dates for her to come to this realization, but eventually it comes. In the meantime her jilted boy friend discovers that she is two-timing him, and he naturally gets angry. He may become embittered, to what extent depends entirely upon the amount of love which he bore her. Tragedies happen over just such little things as this. I have known of whole lives to be wrecked over a few moments' thoughtlessness, and so has Miss Blake. Yet she will make a statement like the one in her column this morning. She knows a woman's vanity, being one herself, and she knows that it pleases all girls to be sought, if not literally rushed. Still she advises J. P. M. that he should certainly ask the girl to go with him. J. P. M. remarks that he loves the girl, refers to her as the girl he loves. That in itself is very inconsistent; how could a fellow who had never gone with a girl declare love for her?

If J. P. M. reads this, all I can say to him is to remember the golden rule and trust to his manhood. Most men can still be appealed to through their better nature. I can't say as to women.

UNRESPONSIVE POLICE.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—On Dec. 31 at midnight two revolver bullets crashed through my kitchen door, ricocheted around the room and embedded themselves in the ceiling. Needless to say we were very much alarmed and became fearful for our lives. Therefore we called the police station. Whoever answered the call [Woodlawn station] was a most insolent individual. The first time he hung up on us and the second time he informed us that the incident was trivial, something to be expected at that time of the year, and that he could not spare the man to investigate such a small matter.

About a year ago I received the same treatment. A man in a maniacal condition was endangering the safety and well-being of people in this locality and I called the police. Finally, after much calling upon my part, I was successful in getting a police car one hour after the departure of the man. Two occurrences of this nature are almost more than one can stomach.

RADIO TUBE MAY LET US LOOK ON SCENES OF PAST

Plan to Capture Light Rays Centuries Old.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—How would you like to sit in your room and watch the actual historical conflagrations of the ages flash by on a screen? The burning of Rome as Nero fiddled, the sacking of Troy, and, in modern times, the destruction of Chicago by fire—these spectacles all are bobbing about in space, for light waves never die. The capture of these and millions of other images is just around the corner. The next step in the tube electricity will harness the light waves of the past and radio engineers talk freely and confidently of the fantastic possibilities of their laboratories.

Bounces Rays Off the Moon.

The prodigies of scientific and engineering achievement stagger the imagination when one is permitted to peep behind the screen. Down in Washington an engineer is bouncing radio waves off the moon and catching them on the rebound; the "beam" marvel has been geared to the airplane and robot battleships of the air will fight the next war; unerring beams already guide mail planes through blinding fog, and the fascinating problem whereby the world may see as well as hear through radio broadcasting is near commercial solution.

This reporter talked today to a radio enthusiast and to a radio engineer. The enthusiast was Raymond Hood, the architect, and the engineer was O. B. Hanson of the National Broadcasting company.

Sound Waves Die; Light Never.

"The waves generated by the human voice," said Engineer Hanson, "have their limitations. But when they are transferred to the radio wave there is no limit. The human voice hits the walls of a building, rebounds and dies or rather dissolves into heat, for all energy is heat. For that reason the theory that we may some day perfect a radio receiver that will pick up the human voice of the past and give us a record of, say, the Sermon on the Mount or the orations of Demosthenes is not sound."

"It is quite within the bounds of scientific possibility," said the engineer, "that a tube will be perfected to control these age old light beams. Then one only has to use the imagination to vision the sights that may come flashing by. The theories of the most imaginative writers who told tales of incredible scientific marvels will be outdone.

Seeing by Radio Inevitable.

"The marvels already accomplished by radio give one an idea of what to expect in the future. We do not know how far away commercial television is today, but we are preparing for it. Seeing by radio is inevitable.

"I am confident that radio and chemicals will control the next war. Just imagine for the moment a great airplane carrier a thousand miles at sea. Aboard are a hundred rocket powered airplanes equipped with remote radio control and loaded with chemicals. Catapulted into the air the planes are shot to great height by the rockets and then leveled off and aimed at New York City by radio remote control. In an incredibly short time the swarm of robot guided planes are over the city. A button aboard the mother ship far at sea is pushed and tons of death dealing chemicals are released over the city.

"Certain of these features of remote radio control have passed the stage of fancy and are facts; other points remain to be worked out—but they surely will be, and in this decade."

Measures Space by "Echo."

The Washington radio engineer who is playing pitch and catch with the man in the moon is Dr. Hoyt Taylor of the navy department's Bellevue observatory. He is doing things with electrical waves that man never before dreamed could be done. For instance there is his "echo test" by which space may be accurately measured. An electrical wave is shot through the earth's atmosphere and aimed at some other planet. When it comes back to the recording instrument the elapsed time is computed by the known speed at which radio beams travel and an air line highway through space has been tagged with mile posts.

Raymond Hood, the architect for the radio city now being built in Manhattan by John D. Rockefeller and the National Broadcasting company, believes we are on the verge of almost unbelievable steps in radio advancement.

"I have talked and dreamed radio ever since I got on this job," said the architect, "and I believe it is going to revolutionize our mode of living if it has not already done so. The air in this room where we are talking is alive with invisible radio waves. Each day the engineers and inventors are getting the waves under better control. I am told these waves are deathless and have been since time began. That being true, all of the history of the past is ours to capture."

Most of us have heard the expression, "music of the spheres." Well, radio already has captured the tread of the stars across the heavens. Up at Schenectady at the General Electric laboratories there is a new electrical tube so sensitive that it will direct and permit the measurement of a current as small as the hundredth of a millionth of a billionth of an ampere. To hear the stars swing past the meridian it would only be necessary to connect an ordinary radio amplifier in the output of the tube instead of measuring instruments and let the stars flow past a slit in the telescope.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. "The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 747247, No. 1237709 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method or operations and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. See Booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure." "If you want done what the rest cannot do—see Seeley."

Mother, Daughter Caught in Flames

MRS. HATTIE PAUL.

MARY PAUL.

Woman Is Dead

Mrs. Hattie Paul, 33 years old, 505 Rush street, was fatally burned and her daughter, Mary, 9 years old, was slightly burned about the face and hands yesterday morning when an explosion followed an attempt to light a fire in the kitchen stove with kerosene. The mother and daughter were rescued by a police squad under Sedgt. Paul Muzika after neighbors were driven back by the flames. Mrs. Paul died at the Passavant hospital.

DEFENDANT IN JENNINGS WILL CASE IS DEAD

Edward C. Koester, 42 years old, former convict who was indicted for forgery, conspiracy and confidence game after he posed as the secret son of the late Edward B. Jennings, eccentric millionaire, and attempted to gain possession of the $7,000,000 estate, died yesterday in the Illinois Masonic hospital. Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers, who had charge of the prosecution of the case, was notified of the death of the main defendant in the conspiracy to obtain the Jennings estate.

The death of Koester is the second to occur since the authorities uncovered the fraud. Mary Stahl Warner, stenographer, who is alleged to have typed the false will, died on Dec. 24. The others indicted in the case are minor figures in the conspiracy and have pleaded guilty and were to be state's witnesses against Koester. In view of his death it is likely that the state will not push the case beyond the probation stage for the remaining defendants.

Koester is reported to have evolved the idea to pose as Jennings' son while an inmate in the Michigan penitentiary. He employed attorneys and through several sensational court fights tried to have the spurious will probated.

SOLEMN POMP MARKS FUNERAL OF KING'S SISTER

WINDSOR, England, Jan. 10.—(AP)—King George stood with bowed head today before the scarlet and gold high altar in St. George's chapel, Windsor castle, to bid a last farewell to his eldest sister, the princess royal, who died last Sunday.

The coffin was borne from Albert Memorial chapel, where it had rested overnight. It was carried between banks of the military knights of Windsor, clad in blue capes and plumed hats, and the king's life guards in scarlet uniforms and flashing breast plates. Two pipers playing a Scottish dirge preceded the coffin and behind it walked the king, Queen Mary, the two daughters of the princess, and other members of the royal family. It was laid at the foot of the altar during the brief service and then was lowered into the vault.

While the ceremony at Windsor was in progress there was another service in the chapel royal at St. James's palace, attended by Ambassador Dawes and representatives of other foreign powers.

JOHN D. SR. GIVES FLOWERS, READS TO GALLI-CURCI

Opera Singer Is Thrilled Auditor for Once.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Flowers and an inscribed photograph were tokens today from John D. Rockefeller Sr. to Madame Amelita Galli Curci, the opera singer. He also read her a poem.

The singer, accustomed to having audiences listen to her, was thrilled to be a listener as the aged multimillionaire gave compliments and presents to climax his daily game of golf.

Madame Galli Curci reached the golf course just as Mr. Rockefeller was about to climb into his automobile to drive home.

"Bless you, bless you," exclaimed Mr. Rockefeller, "I have enjoyed hearing you sing so many times and I am very pleased to have the pleasure of knowing you."

Presents Boutonniere.

Motioning to his chauffeur, who brought a package from the car, "Neighbor John" presented the singer with a boutonniere of violets and sweet peas.

"I found these at my place this morning," he explained, "and they made me think of your voice." Mr. Rockefeller attended the Galli Curci concert at Daytona Beach last night.

"And here is my picture with an appropriate sentiment," continued Mr. Rockefeller, handing Madame Galli Curci an envelope which contained his photograph standing erect as a soldier despite his 91 years. What the sentiment was is Madame Galli Curci's secret, for she read the inscription and placed the picture in her handbag, thanking him profusely.

Breakfast Prayer.

"If you don't mind," began Mr. Rockefeller, "I would like to read you the daily poem and prayer which we read at breakfast this morning. It made a deep impression on me." Then, in a clear, firm voice, Neighbor John read:

"Let's hollow out beside the way
Where men fare to and fro
A spring, that all their steps, may stay
Where cooling waters flow,
And then, go forth with more of grace
And goodness in every face.

Let's plant a rose beside the road
Where all the world goes by,
That every pilgrim, with his load,
May feast his happy eye
Upon its beauty as he goes
And breathe a blessing on the rose."

The poem, he said, was by Nixon Waterman.

Mr. Rockefeller also gave Mme. Galli Curci a Christmas card, saying it was belated, but he did not know her address at the holiday time.

SO that the greatest demands upon our time are properly met, we have a staff in constant attendance.

FATHER O'DWYER, CATHOLIC PASTOR, IS DEAD AT 68

The Rev. Peter P. O'Dwyer, for fourteen years pastor of St. Rose of Lima Catholic church, 48th street and Ashland avenue, died yesterday at the church rectory after an extended illness.

Father O'Dwyer was 68 years old, and was born near Rock Cashel, County Tipperary, Ireland. He was educated in Irish schools, ordained in 1888 at All Hallows seminary, Ireland, and came to the United States shortly afterward. After a brief assignment at Dixon, Ill., he came to Chicago as an assistant pastor of old St. Mary's on Wabash avenue, where he served for six years. He served either as pastor or assistant in churches in Joliet, Lemont, and Wilmington, Ill., before assuming charge of St. Rose of Lima church here fourteen years ago. Active in charity work, he soon became known to his "back o' the yards" parishioners as "Father Peter," the title being conferred as a manner of affectionate expression by his people. He was a successor to the late Father Denis Hayes, famous "back o' the yards" pastor.

Father O'Dwyer's body will lie in state tomorrow. Solemn requiem services will be held at 9 o'clock Tuesday, with burial following in Mount Olivet cemetery.

HE'D PERMIT ALL WHO STAY SOBER TO OBTAIN LIQUOR

Suggests Way to Do It Legally.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special]—Addition of a new article to the Volstead act, legalizing the sale of alcoholic liquors for "moderate consumption," was advanced today as a solution of the prohibition problem by Dr. J. J. Seelman of Milwaukee, chairman of the Wisconsin branch of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Mr. Seelman, in a statement issued after a conference with Senator John J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.], asserted that the sale of alcoholic liquors under a permit system to citizens promising not to abuse the privilege would be just as legal as selling intoxicants for medicinal or sacramental use.

Would Swear to Stay Sober.

Under the system proposed by Dr. Seelman permits would be issued to persons of good character who present evidence that they are not addicted to the excessive use of alcoholic liquors. The permittee would promise that the liquor so obtained will be used in such a manner as not to produce intoxication, the object being "to prevent such liquors from coming within the catagory of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the 18th amendment."

"Pursuant to the established precedent concerning medicinal, sacramental, and industrial alcohol and liquor I propose that the manufacture, transportation, and sale of alcohol and liquors containing more than ½ of 1 per cent of alcohol be allowed under a permit system. Permits are to be issued to persons of good character who present evidence that they are not addicted to the excessive use of alcoholic liquors, that they have never been convicted of drunkenness or any crime attributed to drinking, and who declare under oath that they will observe all the conditions of the permit.

Promise Not to Get Drunk.

"These conditions are to be, in substance, that alcohol or alcoholic liquors so allowed will be used for the purposes enumerated in the permit and will not be used and will not be permitted to be used in such manner that they will produce intoxication."

The Wickersham commission's report on prohibition is expected to be in the hands of the President early this coming week. According to one authoritative source of information the report was sent to the department of justice today for examination by the legal experts on the attorney general's staff.

The farmers in the district are receiving lavish offers for their lands, but they are now asking $25,000, per acre.

DETROIT PASTOR HAS MILLION FOR RADIO AUDIENCE

Father Coughlin Began in Small Parish.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—About four years ago Father Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, twelve miles north of Detroit, was appointed to that charge by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Gallagher, who rescued him from the inactivities of a small parish.

Immediately after the canonization of Ste. Therese of Lisieux, the building of the parish church was completed, and to his dismay the young pastor, by a careful counting of noses, discovered that he had only thirty-two supporters, and a debt of approximately $89,000.

Immediately he hit upon the idea of introducing a microphone into his little church—an edifice not much larger than a three car garage. Thus for two years over the Detroit station WJR he conducted a weekly broadcast which steadily grew in popularity.

One year ago stations WMAQ of Chicago and WLW of Cincinnati were added to the Detroit outlet.

Correspondence of 15,000.

That particular year was devoted by Father Coughlin to discussing evils of communism. Favorable results quickly accrued. His weekly correspondence reached 15,000 persons, while his radio audience was gauged at approximately one million listeners.

Meanwhile the little parish continued to grow. Along with it the radio activities of the pastor branched out until he signed a contract with the Columbia Broadcasting system. One hour each Sunday was purchased.

Being firmly convinced that unemployment and the abuses of our present economic system are the breeders of communism, Father Coughlin has been devoting his broadcast period to labor conditions with the sole purpose of remedying them and thereby checking radicalism.

Employs Fifty-five Clerks.

His business is conducted from a little frame building in which are employed fifty-five clerks and stenographers who take care of his secretarial work. More than 40,000 letters came to his office in the first delivery last Wednesday morning. Father Coughlin says that this week's mail will total more than 200,000 letters, addressed to him personally, without counting those which will eventually be sent from the various broadcasting stations throughout the long chain.

Mother Attends Golden Wedding of Her Son

Rochester, Ind., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Meyers, aged 70, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a community dinner. Mr. Meyer's mother, age 101, lived to see the celebration. Mrs. Salome Meyers, lives on a farm near her son with two daughters.

Gives Concert Today

Maurice Martenot, French pianist, cellist and instructor in wireless, arrived in Chicago yesterday to prepare for his concert this afternoon at the Studebaker theater where he will demonstrate for the first time in Chicago his new electrical sound-wave instrument.

The new instrument resembles the small square piano of the nineties. It has a five octave keyboard and is capable of extending its range to eight octaves. Inside are a series of electrical tubes similar to those used in a radio set. These tubes set up vibrations which are transmitted to a device which is similar to a loud speaker.

By slight movements of his hand M. Martenot is able to perform trills, chromatic and diatonic scales and many other tricks considered difficult on other instruments. Through operating a set of buttons the inventor controls the tone so that the sound is made to resemble a violin, flute, cello or brass instruments. M. Martenot emphasizes, however, that the instrument is not automatic, although it is comparatively easy to master.

DU PAGE COUNTY JOINS IN HOOKUP OF POLICE RADIO

Du Page county yesterday took its first official steps to equip itself with modern crime fighting apparatus. At a meeting of county and town officials at Wheaton plans were made to connect Du Page county law enforcing agencies with those of Cook county in a radio, telephone and teletype hookup.

Among those at the session were State's Attorney Chauncey Reed and Sheriff John Hesterman of Du Page county, Chief of Police Fred Onthank of Glen Ellyn, representatives of towns on the west fringe of Cook county, and Attorney William Luthardt, who appeared for Acting Police Commissioner Alcock of Chicago.

It was voted to extend the all-Cook county hookup to Du Page and a resolution authorizing Prosecutor Reed to appoint a committee to confer with the radio committee of the Du Page county board of supervisors was adopted. Attorney Luthardt, speaking for Chicago, pledged free radio service to Du Page county, free instruction, and cost prices on the necessary installations for the hookup. Wheaton will be the Du Page county center for the hookup, it was announced.

SUBURBS GAIN IN DECEMBER OVER NOVEMBER

Year's Figures Show Big Falling Off.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

While suburban building figures for the year 1930, just compiled by S. W. Straus & Co., make rather dismal reading when comparisons are made with the entire twelve months of 1929, the construction volume in forty-five Chicago suburbs for the month of December was cheering in that it registered a gain of 18 per cent over the preceding month of November. December suburban figures were $2,009,614 as compared with $1,636,684 in November.

The year's total in suburban building was $32,082,574 as compared with $72,588,947, a loss of approximately 55 per cent.

Industrial building for 1930 in the immediate Chicago district amounts to approximately $26,500,000, according to figures compiled by the industrial department of the Chicago Association of Commerce. This is a little more than half of the total of $50,330,000 for 1929.

Following are the comparative monthly building figures for the Chicago suburbs:

Chicago itself took a tumble instead of a jump as the suburbs did, when December figures are compared with November. These were $2,285,900 in December as compared with $3,756,200 in November.

Briefly stated, inactivity in building construction characterized the whole year of 1930 in the metropolitan area of Chicago. The suburbs, however, made a much better showing than did old Dad Dearborn himself, their percentage of loss being considerably less.

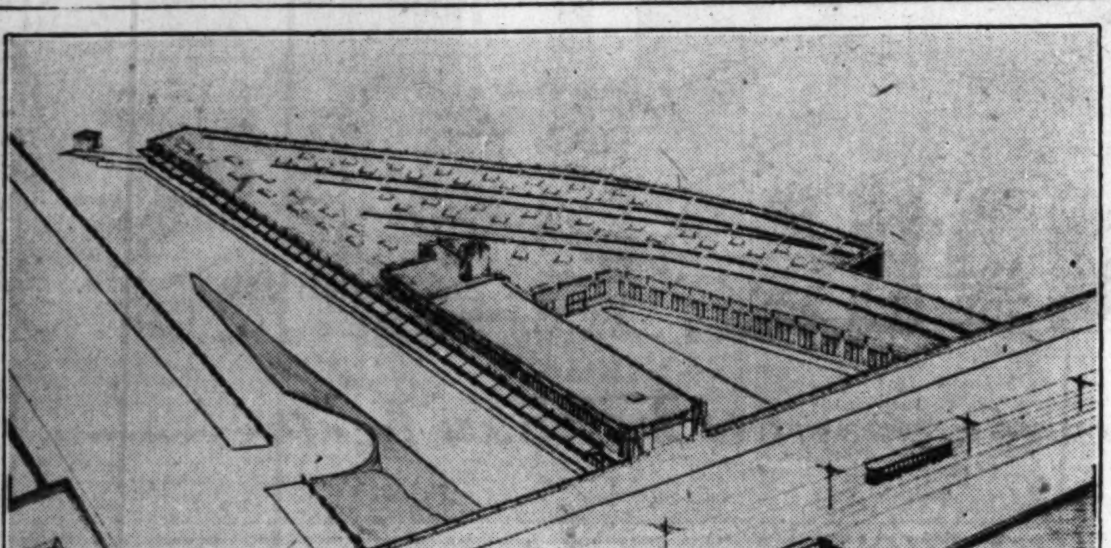
WEST GRAND AVENUE DEAL.

Eli C. L[illegible] has leased [illegible] West Grand [illegible] J. & D. Harvey & Co.

PARKER JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Paul Gerhardt designed the above new Parker Junior High school along lines that will make it an architectural unit of the Normal college group on the campus on Normal parkway, between Yale and Normal avenues. It will have a student capacity of 2,100. It will be on the east end of the campus, with the front of the building facing west. The rear will overlook the Rock Island right of way.

BIG WEST SIDE RAILROAD PROJECT.



This is a $650,000 building now under construction by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad for handling express matter. It will occupy space bounded by Roosevelt road on the south, Taylor street on the north, Canal street on the west, and the "Q" right of way on the east. Several hundred men will be employed. Completion is set for the middle of April.

BURLINGTON TO ERECT $650,000 EXPRESS PLANT

Will Beautify Grounds and Right of Way.

Work has just started, according to an announcement by President F. E. Williamson of the Burlington railroad, on a $650,000 group of buildings and tracks for handling express matter. The structures and yards will occupy the space bounded by Roosevelt road on the south, Taylor street on the north, Canal street on the west, and the railroad's right of way on the east.

F. E. WILLIAMSON.

The railroad management decided to go ahead with the project now in order to use as many of Chicago's unemployed as possible. Several hundred men will be busy until the middle of April, the estimated date of completion.

An interesting angle to this development is the announced intention of President Williamson of continuing his policy of station and right of way beautification. When this project and the great concrete grade separation work at Canal and 16th streets, said to be the most complicated rail and street crossing in the world, are completed, the Burlington will plant grass flowers, shrubbery, and otherwise completely landscape the entire right of way and around buildings and tracks from the south end of the Union station to the 16th-Canal improvement.

The express terminal will supplant the small one now at 13th and Canal streets. It will be a receiving, delivering, and pickup station, with 6,000 square feet of land area, compared with half that amount in the present station. The increase in facilities will allow the handling of twenty-five express carloads at one time and the handling of 25,000 shipments daily.

The new express plant will include a two story structure 316 feet long and another one story building 625 feet long. Both will be brick and stone. Connecting and surrounding the buildings will be an elaborate system of covered tracks and platforms.

DRAPER & KRAMER TO OPEN BRANCH ON NORTH SIDE

Draper & Kramer, who have been in the realty business in Chicago for thirty-eight years, will open their first north side office, at 2254 Devon avenue, near Oakley avenue. The main office is at 35 North Dearborn. The firm has three south side offices.

The firm is unique in one respect. Arthur W. Draper, president and treasurer, and Adolph F. Kramer, vice president and secretary, the original partners, still are the active heads of the business. Their sons, A. W. Draper Jr. and Fred Kramer have been in the business since the war and both have assumed important places. Mr. Draper Jr. is in charge of outlying offices and the young Mr. Kramer is active in the mortgage end of the business.

New York Carpet Company Rents Fisk Building Space

The Hilford-Strauss Carpet corporation of New York has leased all of the fourth and part of the seventh floor of the Fisk building at the southeast corner of Wabash and East South Water street, through Albert H. Wetten & Co. The lessee is a wholesale concern.

224 FACTORY PLANTS ERECTED IN CHICAGO AREA DURING 1930

Chicago's industrial building for 1930, briefly mentioned in the building story in an adjoining column on this page, included six projects in the class costing from $1,000,000 and up. These figures, compiled by the industrial department of the Association of Commerce, also show that in the class of structures costing from $500,000 to $1,000,000 there were seven plants erected during the last year.

In the next class, from $250,000 to $500,000 there were ten new plants built. Twenty-eight new plants were erected costing from $100,000 to $250,000. In the class of building costing under $100,000 there were 175 plants erected.

Industrial building last year comprised 224 separate projects as compared with a total of 377 during 1929.

Cooper Jr. Co., distributors of General Electric refrigerators, now in the State Bank building, at La Salle and Monroe, has leased the large corner store in the La Salle-Wacker building, containing approximately 8,200 square feet, and also the entire 23d floor of the same structure. According to Clark & Trainer, agents of the building, who negotiated the lease, Mr. Cooper will spend in the neighborhood of $100,000 on their executive offices on the twenty-third floor and the showroom display on the first floor. He contemplates, it is stated, having one of the most distinctive and attractive display rooms in the country.

The reported total rental to be paid by R. Cooper Jr. will be $627,520 for a term of five years and two months. The rental of the first floor will be $81,158 annually and that of the twenty-third floor will be $42,714. Mr. Cooper plans to have a formal opening of his new quarters in the La Salle-Wacker building on March 1.

News of the Architects

BUILD BETTER, NOT CHEAPER, IS KRAMER'S ADVICE

Chicago isn't in need of new buildings now, says Adolph F. Kramer, former president of the Chicago Real Estate board and a member of the realty firm of Draper & Kramer, but when it does we should build better and not cheaper ones.

ADOLPH F. KRAMER

"There's a movement on foot to amend our building code to cheapen construction," he says. "This is a move in the right direction, providing it can be done without weakening the building and without lessening the protection against fire.

"My own opinion is that our building code should be altered in some respects, somewhat along the lines of the Evanston code, which would make building more expensive but much safer for the occupants in the community.

"In Evanston the entire first floor over the basement in apartment buildings must be a solid concrete slab. This acts as a sound deadener, prevents fumes from coming into the apartments from the basement, and also is fireproof against the basement. All back porches must be carried up on brick walls, and they also have more strict rules with reference to plumbing and sanitation. We would do well to copy them.

"We're not in need of new buildings at this time, and if they're built or when we need them we want better buildings and not cheaper ones. We're rapidly catching up on the overbuilding in Chicago and it won't be long before buildings will be needed and when that time comes I hope that our city fathers will see to it that better and more safe buildings are built."

INSTALL LINDOP AS HEAD OF OAK PARK REALTORS

John Cummings Lindop was formally installed as the new president of the Oak Park real estate board at a meeting held on Jan. 5 at the Carleton hotel. He succeeded Edwin H. Forkel. The installation followed a luncheon at which 55 members were present. George L. Bruckert presided. Other officers installed were R. J. Caron, vice president; James A. Howe, secretary, and Mr. Forkel, treasurer. Directors for the new year, in addition to the officers, are Albert F Keeney, W. B. Ross, Charles T. Houha, and V. M. Huntington.

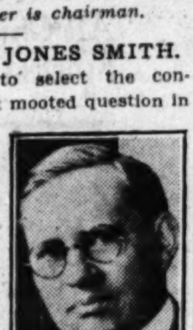
ARCHITECT TELLS HOW TO SELECT A CONTRACTOR

Says Character Is Most Important.

This is the ninth of a series of articles sponsored by the committee on public information of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, of which Eugene H. Klaber is chairman.

BY WILLIAM JONES SMITH.

How properly to select the contractor is the most mooted question in all building work. Every one is apt to question all ways and means and then finally to use the same old method of "open competition and lowest estimate."



WILLIAM JONES SMITH.

"My roof leaks," "the cost of extras was sinful," "I find the contractor skimping the cement," "now that the building is paid for, I can't get the contractor to stand back of his work and make good his mistakes"—these and many other oft repeated statements are mostly the result of "anybody's contractor" at the lowest price.

No question of ability in the reckoning, no background of reputation of contractor, no question of experience, no security financially or credit with Dun and Bradstreet; nothing except the initial lowest price. And, unfortunately, this may not be at all the final price which the owner will pay.

Called a Travesty.

What a travesty, what business folly; you do it in erecting a building but do you do it anywhere else? Do you take the cheapest doctor or lawyer or even architect? Do you go in the open market and get the cheapest clothes? Do you select the lowest priced college for your son to go to?

"Ah! that's different" you say, "we have full plans and specifications on our buildings to go by and we have the kind of an architect who enforces good workmanship—when the contract is signed, we're safe!" Now to any one who understands building, such an answer would sound funny, if it weren't so often said and so tragic in its consequence.

Plans and specifications, do they insure exactness in bidding? Certainly not! The expert estimator knows very well that if he wishes, he can vary his own estimate by 15 per cent on a skeleton 25 page specification and by 5 per cent on a complete 150 page specification.

Can extras be avoided? Not if the contractor is unfair and insists on splitting hairs, even without any changes. It is well known among the building contractors that if the lowest estimate will not cover, there is still a way out by "enforced extras" even with the best and safest of architects in charge.

Most Important Items.

Then what are the items which should govern most in selecting the contractor?

There is a definite trend among many of the large corporations who have had building experience towards a method which secures only invited estimates from a few firms well known for business integrity and experience, financial credit and backing, fair dealing and good business ability, and then to let the contract on the basis of a guaranteed total and a division of savings between the owner and the contractor.

A contractor of good reputation for business integrity handles only good building materials, and is only interested in good subcontractors and excellent craftsmanship. Such a firm interprets in the plans and specifications the meaning and intent of the owner and architect.

But the contractor's special experience with the particular type and size of building required is also very important. Certainly it would not be wise to entrust an art museum or a cathedral to a contractor who is accustomed to erecting factories.

Fairness a Vital Factor.

Security, financial soundness, as reflected in the contractor's credit with Dun or Bradstreet and other credit agencies, is essential to the owner's safety during the operation of the building. A contractor in bankruptcy is a disagreeable and often an expensive liability.

The fourth qualification of the contractor is often the most important—the contractor's known fairness in carrying out the plans and specifications. In a job of any size a dozen or more questions arise every day in connection with the plans and specifications for interpretation by the architect and contractor.

Many seemingly reputable contractors bid low to get the job, then cover their loss, and more, by extras.

If the contractor possesses all of the above four qualifications—character, experience, financial soundness, fair dealing—and, in addition, is an excellent business man and has good buying capacity, the owner and the architect can well afford to make a partner of him. Such a contractor has a wealth of suggestions and can protect the owner on the basis of price by a guaranteed top price and a savings division of the usual 85 per cent to the owner and 15 per cent to the contractor and, in addition, has all the qualifications to protect the owner on the basis of quality and hence a low cost of maintenance.

The writer can testify to the pleasure of working many times in such relationships and in one case, recently, of seeing a check of $155,000 savings division going to the owner on the completion of a job.

Character and reputation, special experience, financial credit, fair dealing, and businesslike methods—these are the factors which should govern the selection of the contractor—and the greatest of these is character!

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

NEW FLOOR CAN DO MUCH TOWARD REVIVIFYING HOME

Should Be Well Laid and in Good Taste.

[Next week: Inclosing a porch gives added space and comfort to a home.]

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Modernization of a home does not necessarily involve extensive structural changes. There are many specific ways by which one can efface from an aging house the tell tale signs of its advancing years and markedly rejuvenate it.

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

New floorings which, in many instances, can be laid directly over the old flooring are a practical and refreshing method of interior decoration.

A powerful influence on the decorative value of a room is exerted by the color and texture of a floor. Early artists of antiquity gave floors a great deal of thought and study, realizing that the area of a floor represents from one-fourth to one-sixth of the total surface visible in a room and that it is truly the base on which rests the design and decoration of the room.

A Large Industry.

A poorly laid floor creaks audibly for attention and an inharmonious floor fairly jumps out at one like a gaudy rug. By this one does not mean to imply that a floor must be costly to be attractive and well laid and durable. The home owner's purse must decide the grade or type of floor to install. Even an inexpensive flooring can be tastefully chosen, in harmony with the rest of the room's decoration. And it can be correctly laid.

There are many possibilities in wood floorings today. The manufacture of hardwood flooring has become an enormous industry in the last 18 years and owing to the adaptation of machinery to quantity production, hardwood flooring of some grade and type is within the reach of almost every one who is able to build a home.

A number of the popular hardwoods, including oak and maple, birch and beech, are manufactured in thin three-eighths inch thickness which can be laid over an old softwood floor, with scarcely more disturbance to the home owner than is caused by the laying of a carpet.

There are many types and kinds of hardwood floorings to choose from, the kind and pattern depending largely on personal taste and cost.

If one desires the decorative element is his wood floors, this can be secured by strip patterns, parquetry, herringbone or wide plank flooring so much used in early American and English type homes. Modern plank floors imitate the hand hewn planks of old and there are types of wide board floors on the market which simulate the early planking even to the point of having dots, like pegs, set into the boards. Wood blocks are also available which can be laid into patterns resembling tile.

Stains and Dyes Perfected.

In the last few years stains and dyes have been perfected which are most successfully used in certain hard wood floorings. Brilliantly hued to harmonize with almost any room decoration may be the modern maple floor in living room or bedroom, hall or dining room. The oak floor may be had in a melting golden brown or a silver grey, a forest green or a rich black or in delicately shaded pastel tones of varying shades. Beech, which sometimes runs to light brown, and birch, which is of a slightly reddish brown tinge with satiny luster when planed, may both be stained if other than a natural color is desired.

Softer woods there are which make economical and durable floorings with graining which is attractive. Southern pine is one of the popular and inexpensive woods and should be selected from dense, edge grained stock. The softer woods are often used for attics, store rooms, closets and kitchens. Where rooms are to be carpeted, flat grained pine is sometimes selected.

Besides the ever popular wood flooring in our American home today there are other flooring materials available—of differing costs but all of them possibilities in the modern home according to its size, character and cost.

Used for Centuries.

Some of these materials, such as ceramic tiles, slate, stone and brick, have been used for centuries, while others are materials which have come into popular use in the last fifty years. These so called "modern" floorings are for the most part composed of several materials, combined as one, and made commercially available through modern machinery. They are known under such names as linoleum, rubber tile, cork tile and composition or magnesite flooring.

In remodeling as well as new work these materials are playing an important part. In most cases they are colorful, offer a wide variety in design and are extremely practical for much used parts of the house, such as hallway, kitchen, vestibule, bathroom, dining room and sunroom.

Concerning real tiles, the beauty of their design and color as well as their vastly enduring quality is too well known to need amplification. Many varieties of these tiles have been developed in the last twenty-five years and these varities are known under different names; ceramic mosaic tiles, faience, quarry and white glass tiles. While the first cost of real tile is higher than many substitute materials, their permanence and the fact that they will keep their colors fresh and unfading through long years of continuous service should be kept in mind, if this "first cost" is not prohibitive.

More Generally Used.

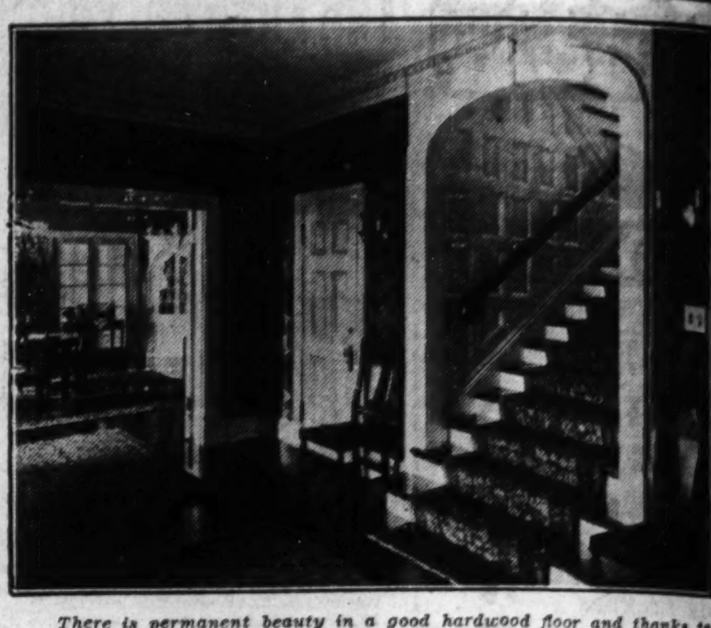
These tiles which for generations have been used in Spanish and Italian homes are now being more and more used in homes of all types for bathrooms and halls, kitchens and gay sunrooms, breakfast room and living room fireplaces.

Linoleum, rubber tiling and cork tiling, like real tiling, are found in an increasing number of homes each year in those much used parts of the house. Also they are many of them adaptable in their beauty of color and design for the living room, dining room and bedroom.

Anent the opportunities of modern plastic floorings, laid with a trowel, many possibilities are available to the modernizer. Composition floorings, they are called, and they come in different types, with new variations constantly being introduced. Color and pattern effects are procurable; in some instances mineral and wood fiber are pressed into sheets and cut into blocks resembling tile. These blocks can be used in modernizing jobs where the floor is uneven and old, as the bedding compound in which they are laid may be poured thick or thin to obtain an even floor.

Manufacturers of all types of flooring have prepared much interesting material which discusses in detail available types and existent prices; often this material contains interior decorating hints by which the home owner is enabled to select wisely and well the exact type of flooring he desires.

A GOOD UNDERSTANDING



There is permanent beauty in a good hardwood floor and thanks to the adaption of machinery to quantity production hardwood floors in all their loveliness are within the reach of practically every one today who can afford to own or to modernize a home. New stains have been perfected so that the home owner may obtain certain types of hardwood floors in different colors to harmonize with the interior home decoration. Maple is one of the hardwoods which appears in various handsome colorings and this interior shown has floors of northern hard maple.

CALLS MEN WHO FARM LIKE DAD 'MARKING TIME'

BY PAUL POTTER.

In citing six specific examples of farmers in Michigan who have increased their per acre small grain yields by means of scientific methods Paul R. Miller, extension specialist of Michigan State college, comments that "the farmer who endeavors to produce crops economically by following practices of a generation ago is merely marking time."

There is Ernest Kniverim, for instance, who is placed by Mr. Miller near the head of the class rather than with those marking time. Mr. Kniverim in 1930 set a new record yield for wheat in Michigan by harvesting 59.6 bushels on each of six acres. His farm is near Blissfield, in the southeastern part of the state, a fertile bottom land, that is being worked by the owner with an eye not only to present efficiency but to future fertility.

Nearly Triples State Average.

This 59.6 bushel yield is nearly three times the state average of 23.5 bushels per acre. Alfalfa, corn, and oats are the principal crops on the Kniverim farm, which is used for cattle and sheep feeding, thus conserving plant foods added to applications of commercial fertilizer.

"Progressive farmers of today are utilizing the latest developments of science, such as improved seed, commercial fertilizer, seed treatment—all proven methods for increasing crop efficiency," Mr. Miller says.

"True, there are conditions over which the progressive farmer has little control, such as variable temperature, drought, excessive rainfall, and the whole gamut of crop 'bugaboos,' yet in spite of such adverse conditions he is producing profitable crops."

And there are other small grain producers in Michigan who in 1930 led their neighbors by reason of using efficient methods. They compare well even with the new state wheat champion, whose slogan is "Not more but better acres," and which is evidenced in the fact that he produced on six acres the grain crop that the average farmer in Michigan harvested from 15 acres.

Two miles further north, in Mason county, only a short distance from Lake Michigan and its shifting sand dunes, is the farm of John Kaye, Custer, Mich., who had a nine acre field last year that harvested 58.6 bushels of wheat per acre. Mr. Kaye used his knowledge that the extremely heavy soil on his farm responded readily to liberal applications of both barnyard and green manure.

Better production with barley is just as easy, according to the extension man for the state college, who has records of a 66.9 bushel crop on the farm of Ferdinand Ross, prominent elevator manager and sugar beet grower of New Haven. His farm is about 35 miles north of Detroit, where the soil is heavy clay loam.

In the "Thumb district" of Michigan, sixty miles to the northwest, another barley yield record was set in 1930 that it is estimated will stand for some time in that section. It was made by Adolph Nitz, prosperous young dairy, poultry, and general crop farmer who operates 200 acres near Pigeon. Approximately nine acres of heavy clay loam produced 62.4 bushels per acre.

Fertilizing Brings Oats Record.

To show that methods can apply to any of the small grain crops Mr. Miller cites two record yields in oat fields. One was set by George Aldrich and his sons on a farm near Fairgrove. A five acre field averaged 125.5 bushels per acre. Beans occupied the field in 1929, alfalfa in 1928, and barley in 1927. The Aldrich system is to apply liberal quantities of green and barnyard fertilizer as well as commercial fertilizer on all fields under cultivation.

The second oat crop given high credit in the state is that of D. A. Geddes, Saginaw, who received 111 bushels per acre in return for using better methods.

Not only did these wheat growers far exceed the state average but each of the two barley and oat crops mentioned here are more than double the average for the state. For oats the average is an even 38 bushels per acre, while the average barley grower has a crop of thirty bushels per acre.

TWO KILLED, TWO HURT WHEN TRUCK AND AUTO COLLIDE

Five Deaths Raise County Toll to 47.

Two men were killed and two youths injured last night in a motor collision at Ohio and Bickerdike streets. The dead were Vincent D'Alesio, 37 years old, 1546 North Keeler avenue, and Rocco Ciglieso, 50 years old, 1338 Grand avenue.

The two men were riding in Ohio street in a laundry truck driven by D'Alesio when a touring car operated by Charles Stojak, 19 years old, 2623 North Merrimac avenue, and carrying his companion, Constantine Hrycij, 20, 2029 West Huron streets, came down Bickerdike street. The two machines crashed, killing the truck occupants. Stojak and Hrycij were taken to the county hospital.

These deaths and three others in Cook county increased the motor toll for the year to 47. The victims:

Mrs. Rose Hairie, 45 years old, 3858 North Irving avenue. Died at her home from injuries received Tuesday night when an automobile in which she was riding collided with another machine at North and Harlem avenues.

Charles G. Davis, 70 years old, 347 North Clark street. Killed last night at Grand avenue and La Salle street, when struck by an automobile driven by C. J. Maguire, salesman, of 4814 North Drake avenue.

Joseph Ford, 84 years old, 727 South Ashland avenue. Died in the county hospital of pneumonia superinduced, physicians said, by injuries suffered on Dec. 30 when hit by an automobile.

Dr. E. Willis Stone, 75 years old, 515 West 56th street, a retired physician, died yesterday at the German Deaconness hospital of injuries received on Dec. 18 in a motor collision in southern Michigan.

Mrs. Edwin Daggett, 73 years old, of Aurora was killed last night when struck by a hit and run driver at Galena boulevard and Lake street in that city.

KILLED IN CRASH

VINCENT D'ALESIO.

PREDICTS DEATH TO GANDHISM IN BRITISH GRANTS

Indian Envoys Pleased by Dominion Hopes.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—When Prime Minister MacDonald announces on next Thursday that India has attained dominion status, the leading Indian politicians, who are members of the Indian round table conference, believe that the Gandhi movement will cease to exist as an important factor in Indian politics.

The Gandhi movement, as summarized today by one of the Indian leaders, consists of about 30 per cent revolutionaries and visionaries, and 70 per cent of men and women, had become disgusted by failure of political agitation for constitutional government. He said the latter will return to the constitutional movement as soon as they see that it has secured solid results.

Most of the delegates are agreeably surprised at the progress which has been made at the round table conference. It has exceeded their expectations. They contend that they have secured more than a third of what they had hoped to get, and that they would have taken much less than what, it is expected, will now be offered them.

British Indians Pleased.

The British Indians are especially delighted at the advance which has been made by the princes, and at the prospect of a union of native states with British-India in an all-Indian federation. Much credit is given for this advance to the British politicians, particularly to the Liberals, including Lords Reading and Lothian, who had the confidence and trust of the princes.

Another of the Indian delegates today said that there was every reason to believe that the Liberals were prepared to go even further in waiving the safeguards than what they have stated so far.

Lord Reading in particular, he said, had expressed a change in mind after listening to the India assurances. The delegate added:

"A process of evolution in British thought about India is still going on, and the greater the unity found among the Indans the greater is the possibility of an advance in India's powers. This is recognized by the Indians, and a striking instance of it was the announcement made by Sir Haidrai, dewan of Hyderabad, that he recommends that the princes make all the sacrifices possible in the cause of unity."

Rights of Subjects.

The troublesome question of the rights of subjects in the various Indian states has been avoided by a side path. The question as to the rights of British settlers in India was raised and Lord Reading suggested that a definition of Indian citizenship should be wide enough to take in all the residents of India to meet the case.

This would also apply to the subjects of states who, having been recognized as citizens of federal India, could not be denied civic rights even in the most backward of the states.

This was considered a victory by the democratic politicians, who feared that the princes would never consent to the introduction of democracy in their states. It will also go far to solve the problem of the untouchables who cannot be denied their civil rights in those states controlled by the Hindus, which it was feared would be the case.

ALCOHOL TOTER IS FREED.

Fred Specht, 21 years old, 5114 Broadway, arrested as he was entering the flat of Fred Hart at 4546 Magnolia avenue, with a half gallon of alcohol, was discharged yesterday in Town Hall court by Judge Leon Edelman when the state failed to prove Specht had the liquor for sale.

JAPANESE URGES PEACE WITH U.S. TO AID NEW ERA

Japan is ready to present to the world a new kind of culture brought about by the "new urgency of spirit and mind," Yusuke Tsurumi, leader of the Japanese Liberal party and a son-in-law of Baron Goto, former prime minister of Japan, declared yesterday. He spoke before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations in the Palmer house.

"We are passing through an unprecedented era of literature and art, which we hope America will watch kindly because the essence of the pacific era is the meeting of the two countries in friendship," he said.

Mr. Tsurumi said that, although communists may be found in the universities of Japan "you can be sure the older Japanese people are not to be turned by communism." Labor, he said, will not go the extreme of communism.

JONES WITHDRAWS FROM U. S. GOLF BOARD

CHAMPION CUTS LAST TIE WITH AMATEUR RANKS

H. H. Ramsay Made President.

Interpret Golf Rules

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—[U. P.] Interpretations on rules of golf were approved by the United States Golf association in convention here today. Some of the interpretations:

"In any handicap match the honor is determined by the net scores at the preceding hole."

"If a ball cannot be found in ground under repair, it must be considered a lost ball."

"Where handicap matches result in a tie, the tie should be decided by another round of 18 holes."

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Bobby Jones relinquished his post as a golf official today when his resignation as a member of the executive committee of the United States Golf association was accepted at the annual meeting of the organization.

Shortly after the telegram from Jones had been read, and the entire nominating ticket elected with the exception of Jones, Herbert H. Ramsay of New York, newly chosen president, set forth the policies of the association. Lest any misunderstanding remain, Ramsay emphasized. "Jones is no longer eligible to compete as an amateur."

In a twenty-five minute session, one of the shortest of the yearly gatherings, Ramsay swept through four general problems confronting the U. S. G. A. and for each he had a well defined policy.

Adopt Sectional Qualifying.

One of the decisions of golf's ruling body is to adopt a new system of qualifying for the amateur championship based on the sectional tests that are now in vogue as preliminary rounds to the national open. There will be 36 hole qualifying rounds in twenty sections.

In order to carry on the work of the green section Mr. Ramsay announced that the executive committee had authorized a budget of $41,000.

He also set forth a very definite idea of what is the association's attitude toward "implements of the game." Clubs of the so-called "sand wedge" type are now under the ban of the U. S. G. A. because "they are a departure from the accepted form of golf clubs."

The concave-faced niblick of this style, used by many of the leading players last season, consequently is relegated to extinction.

Jones Message a Surprise.

Perhaps the way in which the perplexing "amateur status" problem was met was the most interesting phase of the occasion to the delegates, most of whom were somewhat surprised when Alan D. Wilson, chairman of the nominating committee, read the entire list of names on his report and then supplemented it by saying he had received a telegram of interest.

Mr. Wilson then read the message from Jones which had reached him Friday night. It said:

"After careful consideration and for personal reasons as well as business demands, I request that you withdraw my name from consideration as an officer in the United States Golf association. Kindest regards.

[Signed.] ROBERT T. JONES JR.

Mr. Wilson recommended that the report he had read be accepted and that the executive committee be empowered to name a successor to fill the vacancy.

Discusses Amateur Status.

Discussing the plans for the green section and then in turn the problem of selecting the field for the amateur championship, Ramsay plunged into his discussion of "amateur status," promising a complete analysis of the entire amateur situation affecting golf.

"No mention of this problem would be complete without some reference to recent events. The withdrawal of the world's greatest golfer, Bobby Jones, from competition of all kinds has attracted world wide attention. Having withdrawn from all competition, the questions raised by his activities otherwise are somewhat academic. Nevertheless, in order that there may be no misunderstanding, we definitely state that he is no longer eligible to compete as an amateur, if that occasion should arise."

Since Jones has signed a radio contract, it was the opinion of many of those at today's meeting that he was doing another sportsmanlike act in resigning from the committee and relieving them of any possible embarrassment, as well as putting himself free to engage in any business transactions.

Chicagoan Vice President.

Ramsay, who succeeds Findlay S. Douglas, former national amateur champion and a member of the Apawamis club, will have as his other officers, Robert M. Cutting of Hinsdale Golf club, Chicago, and Rodman E. Griscom of Marion Cricket club, vice president; Prescott S. Bush, Round Hill, secretary; Charles H. Sabin, National Links [Mr. Ramsay's club], treasurer, and Livingston Platt, Apawamis, general counsel.

At left is the colt Chesney, named for Mr. Lehmann's farm near Lake Villa, and at right is Orphan Prince, son of Prince Pal-Cinderella, which is the best looking 2 year old in the Chicago district. TITLE BOUT FOG LIFTS, BUT LAND'S NOT IN SIGHT YET

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Pa Stribling, father of young Bill, can sign immediately if he wants to for a heavyweight title bout with Max Schmeling in June, either in Detroit or Cleveland. But he must agree at the same time to pit Bill against Jack Sharkey in September if he wins, and there's the rub.

The fog of words surrounding the endless conferences over the tangled affairs of the heavyweight contenders lifted long enough today to reveal these facts as part of the current vital statistics. There were other developments of equal interest.

Chicago Out of It?

Chicago, where Nate Lewis offered Schmeling $500,000 for a Stribling bout in June, apparently has lost all chance of viewing the battle.

At the same time New York city has passed from the picture as a possible site for a rival attraction, featuring Jack Sharkey and some other heavyweight of renown in a duel that would have the blessing and sanction of the New York state athletic commission for Schmeling's vacated crown.

One point alone today halted an agreement between Pa Stribling and promoters for the Milk fund who already have come to terms with Schmeling. Stribling refuses to agree to the second match, on the grounds that no heavyweight champion in ring history ever was forced to fight twice for his title in one outdoor season.

Can't Have Two Bouts.

He reasons that the fight business can not support two heavyweight title bouts in one semester and that a champion should have something to say about his own affairs both before and after he wins the crown. As a compromise Pa Stribling probably will agree to defend the title—if his son wins it—for the Milk fund promoters on some future date.

Stribling's agreement to fight Sharkey in September would pave the way for a treaty of peace with the New York commission that stripped Schmeling of his title Tuesday and offered up Jack Sharkey as the man to fight some one for the crown. The local fathers probably would accept this two fight arrangement as the only possible solution of the muddle.

Pa Won't Accept.

But Pa Stribling refuses to accept this clause and then discover, after a convenient interval, that sudden illness prevents his carrying out the agreement—the usual method in the fight game of getting rid of contracts signed under duress.

An injury to Schmeling's arm, which prevented him from giving Sharkey a return match last September after the fouling in June, involved the German so deeply with the New York commission that Max has been in difficulties here ever since.

Chicago Trainers Smile as Thoroughbreds Winter Well

BY FRENCH LANE.

Thoroughbred race horses—some with big reputations, others with names to make—are wintering so well on Illinois farms near Chicago you don't even hear an exercise boy singing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," or a stable hand humming 'My Old Kentucky Home."

Our Illinois horses are so hale and hearty, a trip over a dozen farms not far from Chicago revealed, that old time trainers and conditioners of thoroughbreds are beginning to ask "What about all this blue grass and limestone in Kentucky and Virginia which are supposed to grow bigger, better and faster stepping nags?"

You can travel through the valley of Virginia, go on into old Kentucky, double back into Maryland, New York and New Jersey, take a trip down into the Blue Grass section at Tennessee and I'll bet you a modest sum at 8 to 5 you can't show me a 2 year old that is a better looker than one called Orphan Prince which I discovered galloping over the frozen sod on Otto W. Lehmann's Chesney farm near Lake Villa.

Son of Prince Pal-Cinderella.

This fellow is a big boned healthy chestnut with a white streak extending all the way down his nose and a right front leg that is white almost to his knee. He's a son of Prince Pal-Cinderella and Orphan Prince is a very appropriate name for him.

It isn't our aim to tell anybody what horse to bet on or what horse to bet against but this chestnut colt looks like a running horse. "Class" sticks out all over him, and I'll be glad to have a ticket on him every time he starts this spring and summer. He was foaled at Mr. Lehmann's Chesney farm and of course is one of our Illinois native sons. You'll be hearing more about him when the 2 year old stake races are run in Chicago during the summer.

Next we drop in on a champion. It is Risque, the best 2 year old filly of last season, which raced to victory in the Lassie stakes at Arlington last July and followed with a triumph over a very stylish band in the Spinaway at Saratoga.

Risque Takes a Snow Bath.

And what do you suppose this bay daughter of Stimulus-Risky was doing when we dropped in to make our call at the John Hertz farm, near Cary?

She was rolling in the snow. "Just a Tomboy," said Big Bill Knapp, trainer of the Hertz horses.

But from others in the Hertz winter camp forces we learned that Bill Knapp, who is a very little big man who once was a famous jockey, seldom closes his eyes without dreaming of Risque winning the famous Oaks stakes at all the important tracks next season.

"Every light sleeper on the farm has been awaked more than once this winter by Knapp yelling in the middle of the night, 'Atta Girl Risque' and I know he must have been dreaming about one of the Oaks events to be run next year," a stable boy confided in me.

Also kicking around in the snow on the Hertz farm, romping uphill and downhill, was an "old gray mare" although she's only 4, which came out of the last racing season with quite a reputation. It was a good reputation, mind you.

Valenciennes a Good Looker.

Her name is Valenciennes, and there was a day last November when she went charging down the stretch so fast on a Maryland track that she showed her heels to the mighty Sun Beau, to the proud, fleet Lady Broadcast, and to all the other great handicap stars that could be mustered against her.

For a feeble old lady Valenciennes (she's only 4) is just about the best looking girl of the turf we've encountered. When she rounds into good racing shape next summer I'm going to have a little ticket on her and I don't care who is running against her.

It was in Maryland late in the last fall season when Risque and Valenciennes—one beaten by a nose, the other by a length—tossed away some $40,000 in prize money. Both finished second. Risque and Valenciennes, when questioned about those defeats yesterday, had no comment to make But from out of their eyes came a sparkle and an expression as if each wanted to say, "Maybe it was Jockey Steffan's fault."

Favorites Ready to Run.

At Stuyvesant Peabody's farm in Will county and at Val Crane's Wildrose place near St. Charles are such old time favorites as Flatiron, Martie Flynn, Crossco, George De Mar, and many others, all romping around in the best of health, ready, it seemed, to step on to the race track and show their old time gameness and speed.

At a dozen other farms—at Alex Heffernan's, out north; at the farm of Dr. Orth, near Wheaton; at the Goelitz place, also near Wheaton; at the Baker farm, on the outskirts of St. Charles—horses whose names are almost a byword were galloping around healthy, wealthy, and wise, it seemed.

Everywhere the thoroughbreds are thriving in our Illinois winter climate.

HORNSBY SAYS HE'S READY TO PLAY 2D BASE

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby, a St. Louis county farmer, who also is interested in baseball, took time enough off today from his cows, horses, ducks, chickens, and turkeys to predict the Chicago Cubs would have a first rate second baseman throughout the next baseball campaign. The second baseman, he said, would be Rogers Hornsby—"In all 154 games, from the way I feel."

It will be Hornsby's 16th full season as a major league player, and his first as manager of the Cubs. Managing major league teams, however, is nothing new to him, since he guided the St. Louis Cardinals to their first National league pennant, and also once managed the Boston Braves, but not to a pennant.

Heel, Ankle Are O. K.

"I've tramped a lot with my gun and dogs this winter and my legs feel fine," Hornsby said. "My heel, the one that bothered me in 1929, is all right, and I'd never know that my ankle had been broken. I feel I'm fit for a full season.

"We've got a good ball club, but we need to have, for it's going to be a tough race. There will be five tough clubs in the league this year. The Cardinals will be prominent and the Pirates will be more dangerous than they were last season. Glenn Wright made the Robins' infield. McGraw, of course, will have a good club at New York.

"I want to be at second base all the way. I'm going to California early to get some extra work and hope to be in pretty good condition by the time the other players arrive."

Cubs Have No Bolsheviks.

An interviewer asked Hornsby if he expected the Cubs to play for him with as much spirit as they showed for Joe McCarthy.

"Why shouldn't they?" he said. "They're still playing for a living, aren't they? I want to win and they want to win and they'll play for me. I don't care whether they like me personally, just so long as they play for me. Sometimes you have to get rid of a few bolsheviks, but there aren't any on the Cubs."

Hornsby was asked if the suggestion ever had been made that McCarthy resented his appointment as manager of the Cubs.

"McCarthy and I parted as friends," Rogers said. "McCarthy told the players there were no hard feelings and urged them to do their best, and he wished me luck in their presence. I didn't undermine him and he knew I didn't. I always gave him everything I had and he treated me fine."

Fesler, Ohio Star, Receives Tribune Football Award

Columbus, O., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Wesley Fesler, Ohio State's greatest athlete, didn't go back to the locker room to join his teammates after the first half of the Ohio State-Wisconsin basketball game at the Coliseum here tonight. He stayed on the floor to receive THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S most valuable conference football player award and with it the cheers of more than 5,000 fans.

Harvey T. Woodruff, TRIBUNE sports writer and a member of the committee of award, made the presentation of the trophy, a regulation size silver football mounted on a pedestal. Mr. Woodruff told the story of the award, which was originated in 1924, and pointed out that Fesler had won it by the greatest margin of any one in the seven years it has been given. In the final balloting among conference coaches and officials Fesler received 32 votes to the 6 given his nearest competitor, Jack Wheeler of Michigan.

Fesler, winded after his play in the first half of the basketball game, during which he led the Buckeyes with three baskets, was able to say no more than "Thank you!" when Mr. Woodruff handed him the trophy.

150 BASKETBALL FANS HURT WHEN BLEACHERS FALL

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—About 150 persons were injured tonight when a grandstand collapsed in a Brooklyn armory where a basketball game was about to begin between the College of the City of New York and St. John's of Brooklyn. There were about 1,000 persons in the stands.

Scenes closely approaching a panic followed upon the crash. Police reserves were called and ambulances from several hospitals were sent to the scene.

Three of those injured required hospital attention. Others were treated by ambulance surgeons. The game was played after order had been restored.

Williams Re-elected Head of Pacific Coast League

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Harry A. Williams, president of the Pacific Coast Baseball league, was reelected unanimously for a one year terms at the annual midwinter meeting of league directors today. The unanimous vote, which came on the first ballot this afternoon, was moved by William Klepper of Seattle.

Yates Scores Winning Point in Extra Period

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—A free throw by Yates gave Chicago a 28 to 27 verdict over Indiana here tonight in an overtime contest. The regular game period ended 27 to 27.

It was the opening conference game for both teams, and fans were treated to the fastest performance here this season. Chicago displayed its strongest team in years to down the Hoosiers, who had not been defeated in four nonconference games this season.

The Maroons made 10 out of 11 free throws. Indiana connected with 7 out of 12 trials.

Fish Scores 11 Points.

Fish was outstanding for Chicago with his generalship and accurate shooting. He made three field goals and five free throws for a total of 11 points. Stephenson counted 9 points.

For Indiana Miller played a good guarding game and sank 4 baskets, Campbell connected with 2 field goals and 2 free throws. Dickey was substituted in the Indiana lineup in the last few minutes of the second half and played a good defensive game. It was his under basket shot that enabled Indiana to tie the score, 27 to 27, with less than a minute to go.

The game opened with a rush with both teams using a fast breaking offense. Chicago took an early lead of 3 to 0. The Hoosiers got under way and led 8 to 4 when the Maroons called time out.

Chicago Leads at Half.

Fish and Stephenson started a barrage that put Indiana behind as the half closed, 16 to 13. Indiana came back strong in the opening of the second half and knotted the score at 20 to 20. Indiana called time out when Chicago led, 25 to 22, on two rapid baskets by Fish and Parsons. Bretz, Indiana forward, sank a long one to put the Hoosiers within one point of Chicago.

Fish collected two free throws while Veller was adding one for Indiana. Dickey followed in Miller's attempt at the basket to tie the score, 27 to 27. In the overtime Yates sank the precious point and Chicago fell back in its corner to await the gun. Lineup:

PURDUE, 30; ILLINOIS, 15

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Purdue declared itself back in the Big Ten basketball race here tonight when it ran over Illinois, 30 to 15. The Boilermakers won almost as they pleased, piling up a 16 to 5 lead at the half as Johnny Wooden wove up and down the floor on his baffling dribbles to cage four field goals and add two free throws.

Starting the second half, Purdue held Illinois to a single point while running the score up to 23 to 6 with ten minutes left to play. At this point Purdue made wholesale substitutions. Fifteen players, three complete teams, worked against the Illini.

Illinois' offense failed before the guarding of the Boilermakers and their shots were confined to long range, while Wooden and Kellar kept working the ball under the basket for Purdue.

Wooden captured high point honors with four field goals and a like number of free throws. Ralph Parmenter and John Husar, sophomore guards, both turned in pleasing performances for the Boilermakers. Lineup:

WILDCATS ROMP OVER MICHIGAN IN SECOND HALF

Good Big Team Beats Good Little One.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

A good big team still is better than a good little team. Northwestern's basketball quintet proved the adage once again last night at Patten gymnasium in its first conference game, defeating the University of Michigan, 27 to 22. If any further emphasis need be placed on the Wildcats' victory, it can be added that Michigan already has beaten Purdue, the defending Big Ten champion.

Fifty-eight hundred, the maximum capacity of the gymnasium, watched Northwestern begin its campaign. Every seat had been sold, and apparently standing room also, for many of the aisles were jammed with the partisans of the Purple.

Purple Wins in Last Half.

Almost engulfed by the mass of Wildcat rooters, a small band of Michigan adherents did its best to encourage the Maize and Blue. But as their cheers were lost in the tumultuous din of band and voice, so was Michigan's five bewildered by the assault Northwestern unleased in the second period.

Michigan was trailing, 11 to 8, at half time, but there had been little to indicate Northwestern's superiority. Then came Northwestern's dazzling attack.

With a floor speed which Michigan was hard pressed to meet, Northwestern carried the ball down the court to shooting distance. And there, the Wildcats couldn't miss. McCarnes, Marshall, Riel, Smith and Reiff—no matter who cut loose, the ball shot through the net. And Michigan, impotent in its long range attack, saw Northwestern lead 22 to 9 after ten minutes had been played. The issue had been decided.

Downing Starts Rally.

Only Michigan's determination prevented an overwhelming score. It was Joe Downing, the Wolverine captain who, with his leg entirely incased in adhesive, replaced Henry Wales and scored the first field goal of the period for his team. Alex Shaw, another substitute, followed with three points, a field goal and a penalty shot because Frank Marshall shoved him as he scored. Altenhoff, Weiss [now back in the game] and Daniels completed the Michigan rally, but it was too late. The Wildcats also had counted five points interspersed in the Michigan rally, winning by the safe margin of 27 to 22.

The difference between the rival teams last night was represented by Northwestern's superior height and Michigan's inability to locate the basket from far out on the floor in the second half. The first period was closely contested, with each alternating in the lead. The contest was rough, with all the players taking advantage of the officials' tendency to permit a maximum of body contact.

Smith Puts N. U. Ahead.

With the score tied at 8, Bus Smith's long shot, his second field goal at that point, and Joe Reiff's free throw on Weiss' pushing foul under Northwestern's basket, gave the Wildcats their half time advantage.

Frank Marshall added a free throw in the second half. Bob McCarnes pivoted on the line and scored a one hand push shot. Eveland raised Michigan's score to 9 on Riel's foul, and then Marshall scored from midcourt. Bert Riel's one hand corner goal preceded a pair of counters by Reiff. His first was a setup, when a Michigan dribbler lost the ball, and the other came from beneath the hoop. Northwestern's fourth consecutive followup attempt.

Good Guarding Pays.

Three times Northwestern counted by aggressive guarding. How Reiff scored has been told. Smith added another by intercepting a long pass and dribbling in unmolested, while Reiff repeated a long side line shot a bit later.

Statistics show each team had fifteen shots at the basket in the first half. Northwestern scored three times in nine attempts from a distance and once in six short shots. Michigan was successful once in ten long shots and twice in five from close in. Michigan's long shooting was without value until the closing minutes of the second half. The Wolverines missed eight consecutive long shots during the time Northwestern was clinching the game.

RULES CHANGES LEAVE BASEBALL SAME OLD GAME

Customers Won't Notice Much Difference.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The gentlemen privileged to do things to baseball's playing rules covered a lot of territory during their recent session, but the customer of next summer won't notice much, if any, difference in the way the game is played.

Altogether the committee, by additions, deletions or revision, shook up the language in about 25 rules or parts of rules. The idea in many cases was to modernize the wording. For instance the word "striker," which had been in the code since the game originated, was changed to "batter." Since 1883 the term "momentarily held" had been used in connection with fly balls and third strikes. This has been changed to "caught" and probably will result in the umpires being more strict about allowing retirement on fly balls which fall from a fielder's hands after apparently being safely in his grasp.

New Rule on Hits Over Fence.

The one alteration that may be noticeable to the spectators involves the time the umpire must render judgment on a ball hit over the fence, or out of the playing field. The two majors have been at odds on this point for several years, but now have agreed to abide by the revised article.

The rule formerly set forth that an umpire would rule the ball over the fence fair or foul according to where it disappeared from his view. The reading now is "the umpire shall decide it fair or foul according to where it leaves the playing field."

In other words an umpire, standing at home plate, will be forced to decide just when a ball, traveling away from him, passes a certain point. If it is fair when the umpire thinks it is passing from the playing field it will remain a home run, even if it curves foul before disappearing. Theoretically, the foul lines continue indefinitely, so any ball which comes down outside these lines but beyond the fence or grandstand should be as much foul as any batted ball performing a similar arc within the confines of the playing field.

Trick Homers Banned.

Another item written into the above rule will make the interpretation the same in both majors on trick home runs. Last year the American league limited to two bases any fairly batted ball which bounded over a fence or into a bleacher or grandstand. It was adopted because of the three foot concrete wall at the end of the short left field line in the Yankee stadium. Now the National will have to observe the restriction. Just why a batter shouldn't be able to enjoy a "lucky bounce" is something the rulemakers might be able to answer. It would be as logical to deny a hit on a ball which takes an unexpected hop past an infielder.

A needed change was made in the old method of employing substitutes. Under the old rule it was possible by two or more changes in one inning to manipulate the batting order. Now when a new man is rushed into the game his place in the batting order must be announced to the umpire before play is resumed. In the past this information didn't have to be produced until the inning closed.

Pitching Regulation Changed.

Extensive changes were made in the rule pertaining to what a pitcher can and must do before delivering a ball to the batsman or to a base. The revisions are too complicated for the fan, but pitchers themselves will understand the addition to the rule, which is: "With runners on first or second base, the pitcher must face the batsman, with both hands holding the ball in front of him; if he indulges in a preliminary stretch by shoving his arms above his head or out in front, he must return to a natural pitching position and stop before starting his delivery of the ball to the batsman."

The rest period between games in a double header has been stretched from 15 to 20 minutes. Pitchers' gloves must be of one color, not a combination of colors that might dazzle the batter. Foul lines must be at least 3 inches in width. Bases must be between 3 and 5 inches high.

Badger Cage Coach Loses Game, but Gains Son

Madison, Wis., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, University of Wisconsin basketball coach, lost a game tonight but gained a son. About the time the official timekeeper was signaling the end of the Wisconsin-Ohio State basketball game at Columbus tonight—which the Badgers lost—a nine pound boy was born to Mrs. Meanwell in a Madison hospital.

75,000 British Soccer Fans in Riot to See Game

LONDON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Seventy-five thousand soccer fans, storming the Highbury field where Arsenal and Aston Villa met today, broke into a riot during which a score or more were injured and many women fainted as the crowds rushed the gates which opened just before game time.

They had milled about the stadium since early morning while the league officials debated whether the fog would lift in time for the game. The signal for the riot came when some of the waiting crowd broke out of line and began climbing the walls. The police could not hold them in check and the gates were thrown open. It was then that women and boys were shoved about, crushed against the walls, and trampled.

No one was seriously injured, but a number required first aid from ambulance surgeons. The game was played and ended in a 2-2 tie.

In the other games Derby county lost to Exeter City and Leicester City was defeated by Brighton and Hove. Last year's runner-up, Huddersfield Town, was eliminated by Leeds United. The Corinthians lost to Port Valeside and Sheffield United tied with York.

Today's biggest score was Wolverhampton's nine goals against Wrexham's one. The games at Liverpool and Middlesbrough were postponed because of bad weather.

Benny Borgeman, formerly of the Paterson, N. J., pro team and leading scorer of the league for the last four years, will probably join the Bruins Tuesday. He has been negotiating with George Halas, owner of the Chicagoans, during the last week.

BIG SIX RULES 8 JAYHAWKERS ARE ELIGIBLE

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Eligibility of eight Kansas university athletes was affirmed here late today by the Big Six conference faculty eligibility committee, which expressed, however, a belief that both the spirit and the letter of the rule against recruiting had been violated by representatives of the school.

In a statement issued after a two day meeting here and at Lawrence, Kas., seat of the university under fire, the committee recognized an infraction of the conference rules by Kenneth and William Johnson in playing a basketball game in Oklahoma City on Dec. 26, 1929.

The Johnson brothers, who live in Oklahoma City, were reinstated immediately on application of the University of Kansas.

Seven of the athletes were offered for investigation by Kansas authorities to quell rumors and reports attacking their status. One, Phil Borello, Kansas City, former Notre Dame freshman, was accused by the University of Missouri of having been illegally induced to enroll at Kansas.

Other athletes involved were T. C. Bishop of Oklahoma City, star basketball forward; Forrest [Frosty] Cox of Newton, Kas., football and basketball player; Houston King of Wagoner, Okla., freshman football player; Ormand Beach of Pawhuska, Okla., football player, and Arch Stuck of Salina, Kas., football player.

CUE PLAYERS DRILL FOR MEET HERE JAN. 19-29

Stars of the three cushion billiard world will assemble in Chicago this week to complete preparations for the world championship tournament at Congress billiard room Jan. 19-29, inclusive. All players have been ordered to report here one week before the championship opens.

Johnny Layton of Sedalia, Mo., defending champion, has been training here for several days. The other seeded players are Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, Allen Hall of Chicago, and Tiff Denton of Kansas City, who finished behind Layton in the order named in the 1930 championship.

Four sectional champions—Charles E. Jordan, Los Angeles; Arthur Thurnblad, Chicago; F. S. Scoville, Buffalo, and D. J. Jacobs, St. Louis—will complete the field.

Black: Kings 14, 15, 23.

Black to move and win.

The above position should always be forced when playing three kings against two. In the event the white kings were on squares 5 and 32, then black kings should be on 10, 19, and 18. The general idea to win will be the same. Black now plays 14—9, preventing 1—5. White has only one move to prevent an exchange, namely, 28—32. Black then plays 15—18, and if 1—5, then 9—14 forces an exchange the next move, or if 32—28, then 23—27 forces the exchange the next move.

We shall continue, 28—32, then 9—14, 32—23, 18—27, and show how two kings win against one. Continue, 1—6, 27—23, 6—1, 23—18, 1—6, 18—15, 6—1, 15—10, 1—5, 10—6, 5—1, 14—10, 1—5, 6—1, 5—9, 1—5, 9—13, 10—15, 13—17, 15—18, 17—21, or 13; then 18—22, black wins.

Must Control 14 and 19.

The first game given is known as the Glasgow opening, and is probably one of the most important games of all to learn, as it is an excellent example of the control of squares 14 and 19, which are really the foundation to scientific checkers. The importance of the control of these squares will appear many times in the future, and the student should stress them at once.

GAME NO. 1.
Glasgow Opening.

11—15	28—24-C	10—17	11— 8	6—10-K
23—19	7—16	21—14	9—14	15— 6
8—11	24—20	8—11	8— 3	2— 9
22—17	16—19-D	25—22	14—18	3— 7
11—16-A	25—22	11—15	32—28-I	9—14
24—20-B	4— 8	31—27-G	18—23	7—10
15—24	29—25	6— 9	28—24-J	14—18
20—11	9—14-E	27—11	19—28	10—15
7—16	22—18-F	9—25	26—19	18—23
27—11	14—23	30—21	1— 6	15—19-L
3— 7	17—14	5— 9-H	19—15	Drawn.

A—This move forms the Glasgow opening and is made to attack the white double corner and eventually control square 19.

B—Best, if 26—23; then black would reply 16—20 and develop a cramp on the white double corner.

To Attack Black Weakness.

C—Made to control square 20 and eventually attack the black single corner, the only weakness in the black position.

D—Black now controls square 16, while white with the piece on square 20 will later advance to square 16 if the play permits. Yet in most cases the piece usually stays on square 20 till well into the end game.

E—Black cannot play 8—11 here, as 17—14 would force a two for one shot.

F—White now plays to control square 14 by first sacrificing the piece and then trading 17—14. This idea often occurs in other games, and should always be remembered.

G—This move breaks up the game and leads to a clean cut ending.

H—Black may have a slight advantage on the end game, but cannot win.

I—This move forces an easy draw.

J—This exchange eliminates any chance to hold pieces on the side of the board.

K—This exchange clears up the position and leads to an equal ending.

Could Establish Line Formation.

L—The student will note the play on both sides all through the game has been based on the control of squares 14 and 19. It is readily seen should either side gain full control of both these squares a line formation could then be established across the entire board. The strength of pieces 14 and 19 is obvious, as they control four diagonals, namely, 14—21 and 14—23, as well as 19—26 and 19—28.

Pieces on squares 15 and 18 also are very powerful, and always work in conjunction with pieces on 14 and 19 all the way down to 10, 6, and 1 and 2.

The following squares are known as squares of weakness when playing the black side, namely, 21 and 28, and if playing the white side then 12 and 5, as in both cases they are out of play and control very little. A piece on square 12 can some times be sacrificed, 12—8, with a piece on square 10 to go in for a king by 10—7; yet that is about the only time it ever becomes valuable, and then one must play a long combination, several moves ahead, to see the possibility of such a play. These general ideas will help one for all future plays.

End Game Most Important.

The end game is the most important study of all, and one must bear in mind at all times the weakness of pieces on the side of the board as compared with the ones in the center; also the majority of kings usually will decide the issue, such as three kings and one single piece against two kings and two single pieces. In these cases, by obtaining four kings against two kings and two single pieces, one has excellent winning chances. The study of the end games shown later will prove these theories. The game of checkers by many is classed as an art of mental pictures, painting positions which represent strength.

ABANDON PREP MEETS

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—The University of Michigan interscholastic outdoor track meet, an invitational event that has been run for more than thirty years, and the interscholastic indoor track and swimming meets will be discontinued as the result of action taken by the board of control of athletics this afternoon.

The action, according to Director Fielding H. Yost, is based on seeming overemphasis on high school meets. Meets are now sponsored by the Michigan High School Athletic association and by the 28 schools in the metropolitan area of Detroit as well as by the university. Withdrawal in recent months of Detroit schools from competition with teams outside their area is believed to be the reason for the move at this time.

State Sponsors Meets.

The state high school organization is sponsoring outdoor and track and swimming meets, but has no indoor track meets, leaving the high school teams of the state outside of Detroit without winter competition aside from their dual meets.

The outdoor meet sponsored by the university was the official state meet, starting before the beginning of this century, and remained so until 1911 when it became invitational.

Since 1923, when high school competition was placed under the state department of public instruction, the state high school league has been in existence.

Swim Meet 7 Years Old.

The indoor track meet dates from 1922, the year the Yost fieldhouse was constructed, while the swimming meet has been a university function for approximately seven years. All three have attracted high school athletes from schools in Chicago and cities in Indiana and Ohio as well as from Michigan.

"With the state holding its meets and the Detroit schools having theirs no need for our meets exists any longer," Director Yost said today. "Our outdoor track meet antedates all others, but as long as the state association is taking care of schools outside of Detroit and the Detroit schools are going to confine their activities to the metropolitan limits, there's no further need for us."

WHITE SOX SIGN BARBOUR, SON OF CLUB SECRETARY

Louis Barbour Jr., son of the White Sox traveling secretary, was signed yesterday by Manager Donie Bush of the Sox. Barbour, 19 years old, is a left handed pitcher and has an impressive high school and college record. In his last year of prep school baseball, Barbour pitched 45 innings and fanned 65 batsmen, only once striking out less than 10 in one game. When not pitching he played in the outfield and hit .400.

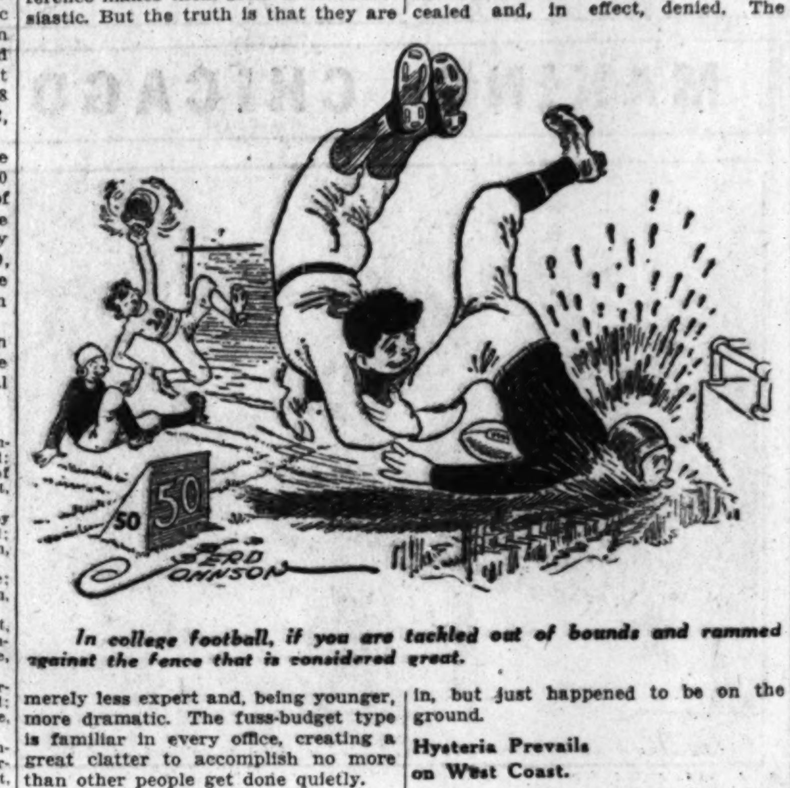
NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Commerce being the principal occupation of this country and a subject of serious study at the universities, it is puzzling to hear commercialism decried in sport and always qualified by the adjective "sordid," as though commercialism and vice had more than a little in common. The idealist in sport winces at the thought that one player may play as devotedly for pay as another will play for a flannel letter, three rousing cheers and a small pewter football washed in gilt.

It is plain to any one who watched both the amateurs and the professionals play football that the amateurs squandor a lot of effort, and this difference makes them seem more enthusiastic. But the truth is that they are merely less expert and, being younger, more dramatic. The fuss-budget type is familiar in every office, creating a great clatter to accomplish no more than other people get done quietly.



In college football, if you are tackled out of bounds and rammed against the fence that is considered great.

Joe Savoldi Knows the Difference.

Joe Savoldi, the Notre Dame fullback, noted the contrast when he turned professional as a member of the Bears.

"In college football," he said, "if you are tackled out of bounds and rammed against the bench, that is considered great. But in professional football they don't tackle you out of bounds. About all they do is give you a shoulder to put you out of bounds."

Similarly, in professional football, it is not customary to bear down unduly on an injured opponent, lest his hurt be aggravated and a sound man sent in to relieve him. It is considered better to run plays at him, imposing on his weakness, and then to help him to his feet with great tenderness.

The industry of sport is a large one now, with a great turnover, not only in gate receipts, but in sporting equipment and construction. When Harvard builds a new fieldhouse and the Army spends $300,000 on a new skating rink, that is industry and commerce.

All Sports Events Boost Business.

When millions of people travel millions of miles by automobile and train to attend football and baseball games, crew races, horse races, fights and golf and tennis tournaments in the course of a year's sport, that is a contribution to the gasoline business, the railroad business, the automobile business, the hotel and restaurant and liquor trades, and also, judging by the number of casualties along the motor highways, a stimulus to the hospital and mortuary lines.

It would be impossible to estimate the volume of spending occasioned by sport in a year's program, for the effects are felt in lines very remote from the actual sport events, but if sport were stopped or abruptly decommercialized in normal times, the loss to commerce woud make a large number of people very unhappy. An industry of considerable effect would be wiped out.

I do not want to show bad faith in this line of discussion, and so will admit that there is a phase of commercialism in college football which is as deplorable as Mr. Stagg and other idealists hold it to be. That is the covert commercialism generally described by the ponderous name of subsidization. But this is not strictly a complaint against commerce. It is a compalint against dishonesty, because the subsidies to the players are concealed and, in effect, denied. The young men are represented as casual amateurs who have not been brought in, but just happened to be on the ground.

Hysteria Prevails on West Coast.

However, there is little to complain of in this respect in the east and central west any more. It is on the west coast that football amounts to madness now, and when a city of the size of Los Angeles goes crazy over a game in that particularly daffy form of hysteria which seems local to the west coast, there are likely to be more marked deviations from amateurism and honesty.

This year, in connection with one big game on the west coast, as a delicate insult, the students of one university arranged a tableau in which the opposing team was represented as signing the pay roll and receiving their money after each play. I do not recall seeing anything of this kind in the east, where vaudeville between halves has never been developed beyond a few amusing little acts, such as the Army's presentation of the spirit of '76 at the Harvard game last fall, and the formal introduction of the Army mule and the Navy goat.

When one school publicly impugns the honor of another one, the case does not seem to be one of commercialism, but of bad feeling, and bad taste. The theatrical effects between halves have been overdeveloped in some places and football, the victim rather than the perpetrator of such displays, has taken the blame.

It's Confusing to Average Student.

But now that schools are holding out commercial courses to the students, it is hardly consistent to run down commercialism as though it were something akin to safe blowing, wife beating or prize fighting. On all sides the student sees and hears commerce glorified and values measured in terms of money. He reads of the new million dollar laboratory, the new $750,000 Walnut street viaduct, the new $500,000 moving picture theater, and just when he is ready to believe in commerce as a deity, some one pops up and denounces commerce as something sordid and likely to tarnish the soul of the athlete.

It would be interesting to see a few schools go frankly professional in football, paying their athletes in proportion to their drawing power, without concealment, and defending their course on the ground that if a player is to be hired at all, he shouldn't be beaten down to such terms as tuition, the rent of the hall bedroom, and his meals a la cafeteria. Judging by the conduct of the professional hockey players, who are very reckless, I imagine that these players would play as well as the amateurs of the same class of college.

I don't like to hear people knocking commercialism. Commercialism means business and business means advertising, and without the advertisers where would I be?

LEVINSKY FACES RING ECLIPSE IF SLATTERY WINS

King's Future Depends on Bout Wednesday.

Stadium Card

King Levinsky vs. Jimmy Slattery, 10 rounds.
Charlie Retzlaff vs. George Neron, 8 rounds.
Barney Ross vs. Henry Falegano, 8 rounds.
Gary Leach vs. Mickey McFarland, 6 rounds.
Ralph Lenny vs. Dick Landig, 6 rounds.
Billy Gladstone vs. Charlie Crocker, 4 rounds.

King Levinsky, boxing's latest side show from the tent-shop district in the heart of the Ghetto, meets Jimmy Slattery again Wednesday night at the Stadium in what may eventually turn out to be his last big fight.

Slattery, twice light heavyweight champion of the world, some weeks ago gave Levinsky what the public thought was the beating of his young life. However, the King received the decision by a 2 to 1 vote.

Levinsky's usefulness as a topnotcher has about reached an end, many close followers of the game believe. Only his terrific punching power has kept him in the limelight since those same punches unexpectedly knocked out Leo Lomski.

Can He Learn to Box?

The supposition is Levinsky never will be able to perfect his boxing so he can hit clever men. In topnotch circles he will meet none except canny boxers. His opponents up to now have not possessed a knockout punch. When the King has finished with Slattery—or Slattery has finished with him—he will be forced to meet the rougher members of the élite. And Levinsky may be a soothing tonic for their languishing records.

Slattery says he is prepared to defeat Levinsky decisively this time. He has shaped his attack toward squaring all arguments left over from their first meeting.

King's Punch Dangerous.

However, the deadliness of Levinsky's wallops must be reckoned with. If he does knock out Slattery, he can go on to bigger purses.

In addition to Levinsky and Slattery, Matchmaker Nate Lewis has hired a supporting card of five bouts featuring, among others, two Golden Glove products. Charlie Retzlaff, Duluth heavyweight, will meet George Neron in the semi-windup. Neron, a giant Greek, is the first real test Retzlaff has encountered in his 27 fights as a professional. If he is as successful in this bout as he has been in most of the others, Retzlaff will be sent against Griffith or Von Porat. In 27 fights he has won 24 by knockouts and boxed two no decision bouts. One of these was declared a draw and the other he won.

Barney Ross, another Chicago boy who fought in the intercity matches at New York two years ago, will meet Henry Falegano, a Filipino now making his home in Des Moines. Ross' last start at the Stadium resulted in a draw with Harry Dublinsky, another Chicago amateur product.

BRICKIES HOLD INDOOR SOCCER TOURNEY TODAY

With outdoor soccer activities practically at a standstill, the second indoor tournament of the season will be staged by the Bricklayers at the 108th Engineers armory, 34th and Wentworth today.

Manager Bill Alexander announces that the following twelve clubs will compete: Sparta, Bricklayers, Jugoslavs, and Carpenters of the national league; Swedish-Americans, Norwegians-Americans, Scandia, Schwaben and Vienna of the international loop, and Buda, Waverley and Maccabees of the major circuit.

All games, except the final, will be played in seven minute halves. The final will consist of two ten minute halves.

Just before the final there will be an exhibition game between the Italian Guisti club of the international league and the Slovaks of the Czechoslovak league.

Frank Stack, of the Amphion Athletic club, and Eddie Schroeder, of the Walton Arrow A. C., divided honors yesterday in the Amphion Athletic club Derby at Humboldt park. Schroeder captured the mile event and Stack the 440 yard dash by wide margins. The Derby was decided on soft ice and was won by the Norwegian American A. A. with 130 points.

Stack jumped into the lead in the 440 yard dash and was never headed. Art Peters, of the Northwest Skating club, finished second and Bill Minster, of the Norwegian American A. A., third.

In the mile Stack jumped into a lead of twenty yards which he maintained for a half mile and then while still in front dropped out of the race, allowing Eddie Schroeder, of the Walton Arrows, and Ray Wondra, of the Amphions, to move into contention for the lead. Schroeder bested Wondra after a lap and went on to win as he pleased. Cornie Ewert, of the Northwest Skating club, staged a stretch race with Wondra, who finished third to capture second place.

Miss Du Bois Wins.

Elizabeth Du Bois, of the Majestic Skating club, won her third straight victory in the Class A ladies' race. Helen Bina, of the Barrett A. C., was second and Priscilla Richey, of the same club, third.

Two Amphion skaters captured the closed races for employés of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, Roman Lukowski of the transit division winning the half mile for men and Grace Strand of the stenographic division the one lap sprint for girls. Silver cups were awarded the winners.

Ed Gathman of Elgin continued his spurt from the ranks of the unknown to stardom by taking the class AA half mile. Bud Housel of the Walton Arrows was second and Ed Paterson of the same club third.

Break Walton Arrows' String.

HOLD DERBY TODAY

The Northwest Skating club, one of the oldest skating clubs in the city, will hold its annual Derby today in conjunction with the Olympic tryouts at the 1,500 meter and 10,000 meter distances. The tryouts will start at 11 a. m. on the east lagoon. The Derby will begin at 1 p. m. on the west pond.

Bill Minster of the Norwegian American A. A., Art Peters of the Northwest Skating club, Al Kucera of the Henry A. A., and Ray Wondra of the Amphions are among favorites to capture the two remaining places on the team to represent Chicago in the national tryouts at Lake Placid. Wally Mitchell of the Majestic Skating club and Eddie Schroeder of the Walton Arrows won places last Sunday.

Stack Will Be Absent.

In the Derby to be held this afternoon Frank Stack of the Amphions will be the only prominent class A star absent. Stack will skate in the Milwaukee Silver Skate race to be held today.

The Northwest Skating club will present one of the strongest class A teams in the city to skating fans. Among their stars are Art Peters, Herb Knudten, Cornie Ewert, and Charles Massoth.

Elizabeth Du Bois of the Majestic S. C., Helen Bina of the Barrett A. C., and Faith Schoen of the Norwegian-American A. A. are expected to stage a speedy battle in the class A women's race.

Baseball Players to Watch Cuyler's Five Play in Cicero

Major and minor league baseball players who make their headquarters in Chicago will gather at the new Cicero gymnasium Tuesday night when Kiki Cuyler, Cub outfielder, brings his basketball team here to meet the Cicero Elks. The stadium is located at 52d avenue and 21st street.

SHARP BLADES + STRONG LEGS = VICTORY

Elizabeth Du Bois, a Tribune Silver Skates champion, is ready to start in the women's class A half mile race in the Amphion ice Derby yesterday at Humboldt park. Stroking with the power of a man, Miss Du Bois easily won the event for the Majestic Skating club. This comely miss also holds the Illinois women's skating crown.

Little fellows, like Master Kenneth Kisselburg, who yesterday won the midget 220 yard race in the board of education playground meet at Garfield park, will have their own event in The Tribune's Silver Skates Derbies. It will be the midget division, one of the seven classifications for the races Jan. 24 and 25.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BOXING TITLES.

HERR MAX SCHMELING to the boxing public is still heavyweight champion of the world despite the fiat of the New York state commission. Such interpretation of public opinion is shared by Pa Stribling, mentor of the leading challenger. That reason, and perhaps others, is why he prefers that the one time Georgia schoolboy shall meet Schmeling rather than Jack Sharkey of Boston.

The Wake is not a chronic critic of boxing commissions. Membership on governing bodies of such a sport as boxing is a thankless job. We conceive their duties, however, to be regulatory and for the protection, if any, of the public rather than matchmaking.

Our point is that it is impossible to convince Messrs. Fight Fans that the holder of a title can be defeated except in the ring. It does not strike true when accomplished in a committee room. Even if Schmeling were in the wrong in the present instance there could be only a clouded title were it claimed by some one else.

Is Schmeling in the wrong? He was proclaimed title holder after a foul by Sharkey, who was leading at the time of the low blow. The Wake does not feel so sure as some other writers that Boston Jack would have won had the bout gone to a conclusion. Herr Max had taken about everything Sharkey had to offer, had recovered from a wobbly second round, and still was looking for more. We saw Sharkey have Jack Dempsey, when the latter was preparing for his comeback against Tunney, in far worse condition than was Schmeling, and then take a soporific crack from Dempsey in the seventh round.

We'll grant winning by a foul is not a satisfactory ending to a title bout, but that's the way the title was won. It has been customary in recent years for champions to battle once a year. That's about as often as title bouts will command big gates. It has not been a year since the German won his title.

Now this alleged withdrawal of Schmeling's honors was not because he would not battle, but because his manager, at this time, refused to sign to meet a hand picked candidate. Were Schmeling about to sign with a third or fourth rater to escape other challengers, public approval might be behind such an edict as that of the New York commission. Young Stribling is not a third or fourth rater as heavies are rated.

Whether Schmeling is of true championship caliber perhaps remains to be proved. Yet our opinion is that Schmeling has been treated unfairly in the present instance and that the New York decree carries no weight with the public at large, which will regard Herr Max as champion until he is defeated.

To Marshal Joffre.

A white dawn swells in radiant shafts
And lo, they seem to group themselves into a fleur de lis.

And as it gleams across the heavens
before my eager gaze,
I see a shadow nearing and I hear the Marseillaise.

To east an endless column comes slow winding through the sky.
All bow the head in last salute—the marshal's passing by.

Blow soft the trumpets, let the sad bells toll,
And drums sound out like distant
thunder's roll,
To usher on its way the fleeting soul.

BOECK, GERMAN CHAMP, ENTERS CARY SKI MEET

Ludwig Boeck, ski champion of Germany and a member of the country's team at the 1928 Olympic games, will compete in the national championship tournament under direction of the Norge Ski club at the Cary hill slide, Fox River Grove, Ill., next Sunday, club officials announced yesterday.

Skiers who will attempt to wrest the title from Casper Oimen, Canton, S. D., have been forced to train at Berrien Springs, Mich., and Oconomowoc, Wis., but there will be plenty of snow imported to Cary from Escanaba, Mich., for the meet in the event that the weather man fails to help out.

Oimen captured the national title last year in a meet at his home club. For two consecutive years he has won the Class A event in the annual Cary tournament. His leap last season measured 173 feet.

Lars Haugen, Ragner Omtvedt and John Evenson are the only skiers to have held the national championship two years.

Lloyd Ellingsen, intercollegiate champ from St. Olaf college, Guttorm Paulsen, and Alf Engen, 20 year old member of the Norge club, are among the other leading contenders.

WISCONSIN ICE BOARD CANCELS WAUSAU MEET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Wisconsin will not hold the 1931 national ice skating championships. William Kritter, president of the State Skating association, tonight said that the meet, scheduled for Wausau on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 had been canceled and that so far as the group he represents is concerned, there will be no further attempt to play host to the country's leading skaters in this state. The meet originally was awarded to Lake Geneva on Jan. 24 and 25.

Outfielder Easterling Given Release by Detroit Tigers

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Frank J. Navin, owner of the Detroit Tigers, announced tonight the unconditional release of Paul Easterling, outfielder. Easterling was with the Tigers in 1927, then was turned over to the Beaumont club, returning to the Detroit club last August and finishing out the season.

SILVER SKATES WINNERS TOTAL 59; WHO'S NEXT?

Fifteenth Tribune Derby Jan. 24 and 25.

Since the first TRIBUNE Derby at Humboldt park in 1917, 59 pairs of silver skates have been won by Chicago boys and girls. From one race, THE TRIBUNE's meet was expanded into six divisions and this year, in the fifteenth renewal of the tournament at Garfield park, Jan. 24 and 25, there will be seven age classifications.

The Silver Skates Derbies, now grown to an event which annually attracts thousands of entries, is easily the outstanding event in the central states. Within the next few years it may become the greatest set of races in the country. This prediction is based on the union this year of the two associations which formerly controlled skating in Chicago. They are united under the name of the Illinois Western Skating association. All organizations affiliated with the A. A. U. now are eligible to compete in THE TRIBUNE's events.

Nine Win Two Top Prizes.

Seven boys and two girls each have won two pairs of silver skates in the 59 that have been presented. The winners each year are disqualified from further competition in their division, but may enter in the next advanced age classification. Obviously, victors in the men's senior and girls' senior Derbies can no longer compete.

Onell Farrell is the only winner of silver skates in the senior division who previously had taken first prize in another classification. In 1924 Farrell won the intermediate race and in the folowing year won the senior event.

The decision to add a fifth boys' class [the midgets, under 12 years of age] to the program this year, offers the first change since 1925 when the first boys' juvenile race was held. The next age classification, although this may not become fact for several years, probably will be in the girls' events.

Entries Close Next Sunday.

Entries for the 1931 Derbies will be received until midnight next Sunday.

JIM LONDOS TO MEET KIRILENKO IN MAT WINDUP

Five wrestling matches are down for decision tomorrow night at the 202d coast artillery armory, Broadway and Thorndale avenue.

Jim Londos makes his second Chicago appearance of the winter against Matros Kirilenko, the Russian Cossack.

The last time Londos and Kirilenko met Londos didn't have an opportunity to experiment with his "airplane spin" hold, as the Russian suffered an injured shoulder, which led to loss of the match.

Kirilenko will stalk into the ring with a 25 pound weight advantage, and this should even up any difference in the skill of the rivals.

Hans Steinke appears on the semiwindup, making his first start here in two years. He goes against Big Jack Sampson of Minnesota. This match, like the three preliminaries, will go 30 minutes to a decision unless a fall is registered before that time.

Renato Gardini, the clever Italian, will clash with Charley Fox, Cleveland performer. Fred Grobmier, who lost to Ray Stele last week, meets Milo Steinborn.

A fifth match is between Pat McKay, the Kentucky Irishman, and Frank Brunovicz, Polish youngster from New York.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS.
NATIONAL LEAGUE.
Canadiens, 6; Toronto, 1.
Philadelphia, 4; Montreal, 3.

The Shamrocks tonight will play their seventh game in eleven days when they keep a scheduled appointment with the Buffalo Americans at the Stadium hockey rink. Exhausted and battered, they cannot be certain that they will be in better condition than they were Thursday, when they suffered the worst defeat of the year. Tulsa's Oilers administered it to the tune of 7 to 3.

Buffalo, the team without a home, is not as high in the standings as the Oilers, but it is no means the weakest club in the league, and already holds one victory over the Shamrocks. It is safe to wager the Chicago six will find no respite from the gruelling activities of the week which included two overtime games in Minneapolis on consecutive nights, in addition to the Tulsa debacle.

Dennenay's Toe Broken.

Examination Friday disclosed Corbett Dennenay had been playing in all these contests with a broken toe. It was thought the little center had only sustained a bruise. This and the discovery that Bouncer Taylor's "sprained ankle" was a fractured leg, gave further weight to the argument that the Shamrocks needed a physician as badly as they did goals during the last seven days.

Jack Riley, the newly acquired center, has arrived in the city and will be available tonight. Dennenay's injury has changed the program planned for Riley and instead of using him with the second line along with Donnie McFadyen and Peewee Wiseman, he will be moved up to the front rank with Bobby Burns and Gordie Brydson. Clayton will team with Wiseman and McFadyen.

Riley is expected to give the Shamrocks the necessary spark. New in the ranks and comparatively fresh, he is counted on to abate the helplessness with which the defense operated against the Oilers.

Still Tied For Lead.

With all their bad luck, the Shamrocks still remain tied for the lead in the league race. Tulsa is idle again tonight and if fortune smiles on the Green, they can regain sole possession of first place by the margin of a full game or two points. The lineup:

SHAMROCKS.		BUFFALO.
Timmins	G	Stark
Headley	D	Contant
Mulligan	D	Oatman
Riley	C	Mills
Brydson	L. W.	Morrison
Burns	R. W.	Bouchard

CANADIENS LOSE, 6-1

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Montreal Canadiens trounced the Toronto Maple Leafs, leaders of the Canadian section of the National Hockey league, 6 to 1, tonight.

The sheer speed of the Canadiens' attack and the deadly checking of their forward lines at center ice were too much for Toronto. Johnny Gagnon and George Mantha carried off major honors for the evening with two goals each. Gagnon also got an assist.

QUAKERS WIN, 4-3

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Quakers gave the experts a surprise by defeating the Montreal Maroons, 4 to 3, in a National league hockey game.

It required overtime for the Quakers to capture their second victory of the season. They would have won in regulation time but for a goal that bounced off Joe Miller's chest to equalize the count in the third period.

The winning point was tallied by Peaches Lyons on passes from Lowery and Hutton after more than half of the extra period wa splayed. Stewart scored the other points while Milks, Hutton, and Lowery also counted for the home side.

Cude, plafing goal for the Quakers, was badly injured early in the third period, and Miller finished the game. Cude was taken to a hospital.

HAWKS BATTLE RANGERS ON N. Y. RINK TONIGHT

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—When the Chicago Blackhawks take the ice tomorrow night to battle the Rangers at Madison Square Garden they will be renewing the battle for second place in the American division of the National Hockey league. The fight has been a seesaw one between the Hawks and Rangers and has been waged for almost a month.

The Rangers will present an intact lineup, while the Hawks will be without the services of their two outstanding forwards, Johnny Gottselig and Art Somers, and their defense star, Taffy Abel.

Spanish Play Takes Rex at New Orleans

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Spanish Play, the three year old owned by Knebelkamp and Morris, gave evidence of what may be expected in richer events to follow when he scored a easy victory in the Rex handicap, which featured the card at the Fair Grounds, New Orleans, today.

Picking up 116 pounds, a part of which was C. Landolt, the speedy colt skimmed over the six furlongs in 1:13 3-5 to earn the purse of $2,330 for his owners. Four lengths back at the finish line trailed Ima Dreamer in the silks of Mrs. D. L. Keiffer, while another length to the rear was the Superior stable's Hyman.

Chene Disappoints Fans.

The big disappointment was the dull performance of C. V. Whitney's Chene, which, after breaking last, failed to make up lost ground. Whitney was more fortunate in the Hotel Roosevelt purse, however, the four year old Skirl carrying the blue and brown silks to victory.

Reveille Boy, surprise winner of last year's American Derby, won his second race since his Washington Park triumph when he accounted for the Windsor Hotel Gold cup handicap at St. John's. His other victory was over the same track on New Year's day. He was well backed today, however, paying $5 for $2 in the mutuels.

Fairyman Beats Mirage.

J. J. Keith's Fairyman scored by a head over the B. B. stable's Mirage in the Nuevagerona purse, a gallop of a mile and a sixteenth, at Oriental Park. Mrs. K. Ramsey's Selection was third. The winner was well played at 5 to 2.

Baptiste, a five year old owned by William Mikel, was the surprise winner of the best number at Agua Caliente. He covered the seven furlongs in 1:31 3-5 to pay $23 in the mutuels. J. A. Coburn's Gregory was second, with T. R. Stone's Subway Tube third.

Southern Bass Is Game Fish on Warm Days

BY BOB BECKER.

Does the southern bass put up a good fight or does the 12 months in the year feeding program of the large mouth in the south, plus warm weather, slow it up for a real scrap on the end of a line? This question starts arguments at this time of the year when thousands of northern fishermen begin to pick their lakes and streams down south for a whirl at fresh water angling.

The large mouth black bass, the popular game fish of northern waters, is the premier game fish of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Florida waters, so northern anglers naturally make mental and actual comparisons of the fighting qualities of the two.

Should Use Same Lines.

We have caught hundreds of black bass in the south over a period of years, and to us it never fails to put on a good show when we use the same rods and lines which see service on northern lakes. When bass weighing 9 and 10 pounds strike hard and then run and jump just like a bronze back in a Wisconsin or Ontario lake a fellow can't find much to complain about.

We can recall several whopping big bass hooked in Lake Istokpoga, "the lake of the weeping trees," which ran out so much line and exerted so much pressure on our slender bass outfit that they bored into the "bonnets" or lily pads and gave us the go by. Many times we saw these hooked fish make three leaps into the air before being partially subdued.

The southern bass, when weather conditions are right, needs no live bait to tempt it into striking. However, when cool winds are blowing from the northwest and the usual Florida warm weather is missing for a day or two, then one must go deep for fish either with live bait, or deep trolling with artificial lures.

Shuns Live Bait.

In all our Florida bass fishing, both in the south central and the southwestern part of the state, we never have used live bait, and by picking the days we caught plenty of fish. The southern bass is a warm weather fish, so do not expect him to do his best when the wind is blowing cool.

We suggest that northern fishermen do not confine all of their bass fishing to lakes. Try one of the many Florida rivers for real peppy fish.

TRAIL TO COAST OFFERS AUTOISTS SCENIC BEAUTIES

Climate of California Is Temperate.

Far off California, with its myriad of attractions for winter weary Chicagoans, is the goal of tour outlined here for motorists who are not afraid to follow a trail that leads about two-thirds of the way across the continent. This year finds the route terminating as Los Angeles easier to follow than ever before because of the great amount of road work completed last summer.

That motorists in increasing number are escaping from the blustery weather of the north to find a haven in milder climes is evidenced by information received by the Chicago Motor club to the effect that automobile travel to California so far this year has advanced about 23 per cent, while that to Florida is up about 34 per cent.

The Los Angeles Route.

The route recommended by the motor club to Los Angeles is as follows: US-66 through Springfield to St. Louis; US-40 through Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kas., to Topeka; Kan-22 to Emporia; US-50S to Newton, Kas.; US-81 to South Haven, Kas.; US-177 to Blackwell, Okla.; US-77 through Oklahoma City to Denton, Tex.; Tex-10 to Fort Worth; US-80 through El Paso, Tucson, Phoenix and Yuma to El Centro, and US-99 to Los Angeles.

A driver who burns up the road can make the trip to Los Angeles, roughly 2,800 miles, in six or seven days; one who travels a good steady clip can make it in nine days, and for the one who likes to take in the scenery along the way the time required is estimated at from twelve days to two weeks.

This journey offers the motorist many points of interest, both historic and scenic, well worth his while to inspect. For instance, there's the great southwest, a colorful land over which hover the shades of a romantic past. Here, as in old California, the Spanish influence predominates. And, too, one finds the relics of Indian tribes who had attained a notable stage of civilization. This great region is held by many travelers to be the most interesting section of the entire country.

Carlsbad Cavern.

There's Carlsbad Cavern, lying approximately 100 miles northwest of Pecos, Tex. This is one of the great natural wonders of the nation, being described by Dr. Willis T. Lee of the National Geographic society as "the most spectacular of underground wonders in America. For spacious chambers, for variety and beauty of multitudinous natural decorations and for general scenic quality it is king of its kind."

Take a look at the "Big Room" of the cave. This great subterranean chamber is nearly 4,000 feet long, with a maximum width of 625 feet. At one place the ceiling towers 300 feet above the floor. All in all, a truly noble hall for Pluto, ruler of the nether world.

Then at El Paso, the motorist may pause for a jaunt into Juarez, Mexico, where he can absorb some of the atmosphere of Latin America as well as make an inspection of certain liquid commodities now under ban in our own United States. Or, if he is traveling in a leisurely manner, he may take a trip up to Albuquerque and Santa Fe into the land of the ancient Pueblo Indians.

Into Cañon Country.

Continuing on along the main route the motorist if so minded can make a detour from Florence, Ariz., to Globe, Ariz. If he does he will follow a boulevard through some of the most beautiful cañon country on the continent. At Globe he will pick up the famed Apache trail and travel by way of the Roosevelt dam to Phoenix, where he again meets the main route. The Apache trail country is acclaimed by world travelers as being one of the scenic wonders of the globe.

Then on to California, a land where one finds snowcapped mountains or balmy winter resorts, where one may enjoy swimming, golfing and other outdoor sports the year around. San Diego, in the southern part of the state, offers one of the most delightful winter havens to be found. Here one may live the quiet life or find a thrill through a trip to Tia Juana, a Mexican resort somewhat wicked in the eyes of our countrymen. Another thrill for the traveler is an airplane ride over the bay of San Diego. All along the coast up to Los Angeles one finds a host of delightful communities whose climates are tempered by the comparatively warm waters of the great Pacific ocean.

Beach Cottages Reasonable.

Swimming and basking in a really temperate climate while the folks back in Chicago are shivering in winter blasts will be the good fortune of those able to get to California. Frost is rare in the great winter vacation area of California and only a few nights through the winter does one require a top coat.

At most of the coast towns one can find beach cottages where the rental is moderate. Most of these cottages have full housekeeping equipment awaiting the occupancy of the tourists. There are cottages at prices to fit almost any pocketbook and in addition there are many hotels that cater to people of moderate means as well as the de luxe establishments frequented by the wealthy.

Los Angeles itself is the center of a country holding great interest to the Chicagoland traveler. Not far distant from the city is Long Beach, one of the principal ports used by the United States navy.

Then there is Hollywood, just to the north of Los Angeles, which town needs no introduction here. And close by the metropolis of the western coast are many winter resorts, including the following: Pacific Palisades, Ocean Park, Manhattan, Hermosa, Redondo, Playa del Rey, and Venice.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

DARK STREET CORNERS.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—I recently witnessed another automobile accident which could have been avoided if bright lights were placed at street intersections. The auto swung around the corner as a man was crossing the crosswalk. Neither saw the other.

I drive a car myself and have often narrowly avoided striking some one crossing the street in the shadows. My father was killed in this manner a few years ago and I have always contended that the accident which caused his death would never have occurred had the corner been properly lighted. Is there any reason why brighter lamps could not be installed at our corner street lights.

MRS. HAVEN CORK KELLY.

AN ANSWER TO MR. BRUNE.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Mr. Brune of Port Huron had only one accident in his years of driving which, of course, was caused by the other driver. He states any jackass, deaf, dumb or blind, may drive a car. Judge not others that ye may not be judged yourself.

Personally, I fail to see what use the vocal organs are in driving a car—unless it is to bawl out the other driver. People seem to think a driver's license law will be a cure-all for all automobile deaths—something along the order of the Volstead act.

Mr. Brune seems to think the deaf driver is the cause of all automobile deaths and blames him accordingly. An unbiased investigation of all deaths would fail to show any deaf driver involved, so why blame him for something he didn't have part in.

The deaf automobile drivers as a class are more careful drivers than any others. The talkies have taken away the moving pictures from us, why bar us from one of our few remaining pleasures, that of driving. Such a law would only give the bosses a few thousand more jobs for grafters and there is no guarantee that the fee will not be raised higher.

At the present time we pay a city, state, gas and personal property tax, isn't that enough? Why kill the golden goose?

News and Views

Graham is introducing a new line of motor cars, with new bodies of enhanced beauty. A new four speed, eight cylinder model, the Special 820, is introduced, and the standard three speed six and the special four speed six appear with advanced body styles and numerous chassis improvements. In addition there is the larger custom 843, to be fitted with specially trimmed bodies. All models except the standard six have the new synchro-silent four speed transmission. Prices of the special sixes and the new eights show a marked reduction.

More than 40 new features, including bodies reflecting a new thought in style design, are incorporated in the 1931 Oldsmobile now being displayed throughout the country. Syncromesh transmission with a quiet second gear, downdraft manifolding and carburetion, a new device to assure quick starting, heavier frame, fully insulated bodies of a new type, and a newly designed high compression engine head—these are some of the important new features.

December production of Chevrolet was 64,018 cars and trucks, more than twice the number built last December and by a wide margin the biggest twelfth month in the company's history, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, states.

FORMER HEALTH WORKER, A. E. F. DOCTOR, OPENLY ENDORSES VITALEX

DR. OSCAR V. LINHARDT, M. D.

Former Health Director, also Medical Officer, U. S. A., now engaged in Medical Research at Baltimore, Maryland.

"I Have Great Faith in Health Powers of Vitalex Because I Have Seen the Wonderful Results It Has Brought to Tired, Rundown, Wornout People!"

Dr. Linhardt, who has been all over the United States, England and France doing public health work and who also served as Medical Officer in the United States Army, was more than amazed with the wonderful action of Vitaminized Vitalex on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. When an army physician grows enthusiastic over a medical preparation you can feel sure that there is a good reason for it. During their years of practice they come across thousands of preparations, and from these they must pick out the ones of real merit. Consequently the enthusiastic way in which a physician who is recognized all over the country is heartily endorsing Vitalex is proof enough that this product has the necessary ingredients to bring real benefit to people, young and old, men, women and children, who are not getting the real benefits of life. Countless folks in this vicinity have found in Vitalex a great stimulant to the appetite, a wonderfully efficient laxative and a mild diuretic for the kidneys. It nips constipation attacks before intestinal putrefaction gets a chance to mar your health or appearance. Be warned by those attacks of sick headaches, biliousness, heartburn, belching and bloating, gas and other symptoms. Take Vitalex now to ward off more serious ailments that are bound to follow if you neglect these symptoms. "Vitalex has a definite action on all of the internal organs," says Dr. Linhardt. "If people would only realize that it is necessary to get the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning perfectly before they can enjoy the real benefits of life and how simple it is to keep the body perfectly tuned up there would be so much less complaining and so much more happiness. The herbal ingredients in Vitalex each serve a definite purpose on the internal organs and the vitamins bring about a rebuilding and revitalizing process on the human body that is amazing.

"I most heartily recommend Vitalex to every one who is not feeling as they should."

SHORT COVERING BY FOREIGNERS BOOSTS WHEAT

May at Best Price Since October.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Foreigners have been caught short May wheat and in their efforts to cover yesterday they advanced the old style delivery ⅜c to a high of 83¾, the best figure at which that future has sold since Oct. 31. New May touched 84⅛c. The outside figures were not maintained due to scattered selling against purchases at Minneapolis and by longs, but the finish was ⅜@½c higher, with March, 81⅝c, and May, 83c. It took only a small buying order to make the advance.

July wheat held within a range of ⅝c for the day and closed ½c lower at 65⅝ to 65¾c, the bulk of the trade being of a local character. Some rain was reported in the winter wheat belt, and the forecast was for rain or snow over a wide area over the week-end, but the firmness in the old crop months acted as a check on selling. Winnipeg was ⅛c lower for the day, while Liverpool was off ½@⅝d in sympathy with Argentine markets. The latter were depressed by favorable weather conditions and a decline of ⅛c in the exchange rate, Buenos Aires finishing ⅛@½c lower.

Grain Markets Unsettled.

Grain markets fluctuated in a most erratic manner during the week, the nearby futures of wheat developing congestion and closing 1⅝@1¾c higher as compared with a week ago, while the July was ½c lower. Corn, after a sharp advance, eased on profit taking and finished 1@1¼c lower for the week, with oats unchanged to ⅜c lower and rye 1⅛@1¾c lower. Lard was unchanged to 10c lower and bellies 72½@85c higher for the week.

On Oct. 31, when old May wheat sold as high as 83⅜c, the July delivery was a fractional premium over the old crop month, but at the finish yesterday the July was nearly 17c under the May and is nearer in line with the world's price, although 8¼c over Winnipeg. Part of the strength in the May during the last two days has been due to lifting of hedges, some representing sales of flour.

Export demand for Manitoba wheat at the seaboard was reported as slow, and it was claimed that Argentine grain for deferred delivery was obtainable in Liverpool around 59¼c per bu c. i. f. Broomhall pointed out that Argentina and Australia had an exportable surplus of 365,000,000 bu wheat this season, sufficient to permit exports of 1,000,000 bu a day for an entire year. After the close a Winnipeg message to J. E. Bennett & Co. estimated around 500,000 bu wheat had been sold.

Liquidation in Corn.

Selling out of several lines of long corn, credited to local professionals, put more grain on the market than could be readily absorbed and prices averaged lower, closing about the bottom, with net losses of ⅞@1c, March being 69⅝@69¾c; May, 70¾@70⅞c, and July, 71⅞c.

At the inside figure yesterday May corn showed a recession of 3½c from the best figures on Wednesday, and sentiment was generally as bearish at the close yesterday as it was bullish earlier in the week. A leading industry bought 70,000 bu cash corn to come here from other terminal markets, but country offerings were very small, and asking prices were ⅛@2c above buyers' views. Outside markets were said to have outbid Chicago 1@1½c in the interior Friday night.

Oats Movement Small.

Removal of hedges against shipping sales of 116,000 bu cash oats gave the market fair support, but the weakness in corn led to local selling and the close was ¼c lower, March being 33⅝c and May 33¾c. For the week receipts at terminal markets were 478,000 bu less than the shipments, while the total arrivals since Aug. 1 aggregate 31,022,000 bu, a decrease of 35,865,000 bu as compared with the same period last year.

Selling of rye to close spreads with corn gave the former grain an easy undertone and the close was ⅛@⅜c lower with March 41⅛c and May 42¼c.

To Hold Midwest Safety Conference Here March 5

Representatives of trade associations, railroads and other public utilities and large manufacturers have been appointed to committees planning the midwest safety conference, to be held in Chicago March 5 under the auspices of the Chicago Safety council. Benjamin Samuels, vice president of the Yellow Cab company, is chairman of the conference committee for the Chicago Safety council. Prof. August Vollmer of the University of Chicago was named chairman of the committee in charge of street and highway safety.

Estimate Gross Revenue for Milwaukee Railway

See Problems of Railroads in Clear Light

BY SCRUTATOR.

It is apparent that within the last year a much greater degree of clarification has been attained concerning the problems of American railroads and the solutions that will avail in enabling them to retain their usefulness and some degree of prosperity.

The first problem, stripped to its last essential, is to get passengers and freight traffic to haul. Secondarily, there are the necessities of obtaining gross revenues and from these to keep a fair share of net profit. The term secondarily is used in view of the fact that if the railroads cannot retain or regain a certain amount of traffic now taken and being taken from them by competitors it will be impossible for them to earn satisfactory profits.

Interests involved in the rail question may be divided into four groups—railroad management, labor and investment; their competitors, also including management, labor and investment; the shipping public, which demands and will support the best and most economical transportation without regard to its form, and last, the government, which presumably represents every one concerned.

Facts to Be Faced.

And now emerge certain principles and facts that must be taken into consideration in the procedure toward the solution of the American transportation problem. Among them are:

1. The necessity to keep the railroads as money earners is subordinate to the necessity of giving the shipper the best and most economical transportation.

2. Short haul, less than carload freight traffic, has left the rails and properly belongs to highway transportation that makes pickup and store door delivery.

3. No amount of regulation of highway rates can drive this freight business back to the railroads. The truck, with certain limitations of its field, is a superior form of transportation.

4. The railroads can cut down the radius of truck operation by offering on this type of business a coördinated rail-motor pickup and delivery service.

5. The railroad future lies in hauling great quantities of freight for long distances. Permission to make trainload rates to compete with waterways and with pipe lines probably would be advisable.

6. It is recognized that huge economies in operating costs are still possible to the rails. Consolidations already agreed on in eastern territory will promote these savings.

Ceased to Clamor.

Within the last few months it is noteworthy that important representatives and advocates of the railroads have ceased to clamor for the government to put their rivals into the regulation strait-jacket that is hampering them. The new view is that regulation be lifted from the rails. This, incidentally, has been constantly pressed here and in the editorial columns of THE TRIBUNE for nearly two years. Regulation is needed only where effective competition does not exist. The initiative of the railroad managements will be restored in the measure that they are made masters of their own destinies.

Somewhere a start must soon be made. A small part of Chicago's importance as a rail center is likely to be lost when and if the interstate commerce commission approves the consolidations that will extend the eatern rail systems as far west as Kansas City and Omaha. This local disadvantage can be balanced by permitting the railroads running west to make the sort of rates they wish from the Chicago region to the Pacific coast without having to destroy their higher rates to mountain territories.

The western railroads are anxious to give this service and would give it at once if they could. The middle west is entitled to it because the Panama canal took the natural advantages in distance to the western coast from it. The western railroads are entitled to give it because they could make money doing it. No better place for a remedial start could be found.

Hold Grain Futures Losses Legal Debts, Not Gambling

Topeka, Kas., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Losses in grain futures dealings were held today by the Kansas Supreme court to be legal debts and not subject to forfeiture on the ground they were sustained in gambling transactions in violation of state law.

The court held that orders to buy and sell on the Chicago and Kansas City Board of Trade affected interstate commerce and were not subject to state regulation.

FINANCE WORLD WATCHES BOND MARKET'S RISE

Activity Has Direct Bearing on Business

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Since the depression settled over the country late in 1929 it has been the contention of bond men and many others that any sustained improvement in industry and trade must be preceded by an upturn in the bond market. Some evidence that the long awaited turn in bond prices has taken place is furnished by the action of the bond market in the last two weeks.

There has been a broadening of activity and definite improvement in prices in these basic securities in the last fortnight. The trend in prices will be watched with heightened interest by those who would discover what the immediate future has in store for business.

Will Bulk Larger.

New bond financing this week will bulk larger than for any weekly period in at least three months, according to plans revealed at the close of last week in investment banking circles. Issues which had been held up for many months, in some cases, which had to be taken care of by private loans by the banker's to the companies, are once more being gotten ready for early offering. In other words the bond market has recovered sufficiently to warrant a fair amount of new financing.

New public utility issues alone which are projected for next week approximate $100,000,000, but this amount may be added to or subtracted from according to the way in which the initial offerings are received. In addition to the major public utility issues, a long list of small ones will be sandwiched in from time to time. Next week foreign financing will include the issue of $30,000,000 Province of Ontario 4½s.

One unusual circumstance this week was the trading in the over the counter market in the various new issues to be brought out this week on a "when issued" basis. As a metter of fact, it is currently reported that the majority of the bonds to be placed on the market tomorrow have already been sold.

Effect on Incomes.

The relation of the bond market to general business is well described by W. H. Pitner of G. L. Ohrstrom & Co. Mr. Pitner's firm has handled a large volume of financing for various utility enterprises throughout the country.

With the bond market in an unsatisfactory position capital spending in all industries is restricted. In turn this has a serious effect on the spending of individual consumers, particularly that class of wage earners whose income is dependent on capital expenditures of corporations, Mr. Pitner points out.

"Corporations have no choice in the matter," he asserts. "When bond prices are low and yields high it is difficult or impossible for industry to finance large scale expansion. Such enterprises must wait until the market affords the opportunity for obtaining capital at reasonable cost.

"That many projects were held up during 1930 by the unsatisfactory condition of the market was inevitable. This in turn affected general trade, which suffered because of the reduced income of consumers.

"This situation can be corrected by instilling confidence in persons who have kept their surplus funds in cash by persuading them to invest in sound securities."

Savers Lay Foundation.

Those who have been saving during the last year or so who have been laying the foundation for the real upturn in business, Mr. Pitner says. It is they who sooner or later will come to the front and furnish business with the funds that will start the machinery of industry going at a faster clip. The savings and economies effected by these individuals has increased the potential buying power of the nation, which will have a favorable reaction on all business.

In past depressions it has been the capital spending of corporations which has furnished the foundation for a return of prosperity, Mr. Pitney declares. He says it is reasonable to expect that the present period of slow trade will be ended by a revival of such spending.

Bonds failed to develop much of a trend in a fairly active week-end session on the New York exchange yesterday. Gains and losses were well distributed.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

The price of silver steadied slightly at Shanghai yesterday as the result of profit taking by speculators. Indian buying orders coming into a market where offerings were small, caused a sharp rise of 11-16 pence per ounce in the price of silver at London which went to 13⅝ pence. The welcome rise came at the end of a week which was marked by continued declines through Chinese selling, during which silver reached new low levels.

Operations of steel mills in the Youngstown district will increase 5 per cent this week to 44 per cent of rated capacity, Dow, Jones & Co. reports. Youngstown Sheet and Tube company will increase activities 10 per cent to a total of 45 per cent of capacity. Newton Steel company will continue operations at 70 per cent of capacity, the highest rate for any district steel company.

The Carnegie Steel company has ordered 30 gondola cars from the American Car and Foundry company, Railway Age reports. The Indiana Service corporation has ordered twenty-one interurban cars from the Pullman Car and Manufacturing company. Solvay Process company is inquiring for from 10 to 13 hopper cars.

Sales executives can anticipate during the early months this year a gradually expanding volume of business, in contrast with the last quarter of 1930, a countrywide survey of sales prospects by Standard Statistics company says. "Strenuous efforts by sales managers will be required to overcome continued strong consumer resistance," the survey adds, "and price will be the paramount factor in most transactions."

New building and engineering contracts awarded in the thirty-seven states east of the Rocky mountains last year totaled $4,523,614,000, compared with $5,750,790,500 for the year 1929. Awards in that territory in December totaled $249,935,500, compared with $253,573,700 in November and $316,368,100 in December of the previous year.

Furniture sales by 498 Chicago stores totaled $69,123,220 in 1929, according to the preliminary report of the United States census of Chicago, just released. These stores, William H. Wilson, vice president of the American Furniture Mart, asserts, are shown by the census to have done two-thirds of the business of the furniture and household appliance group. The other one-third was divided among 166 store handling floor coverings, draperies, curtains, etc., which did a volume of $10,186,185; 123 household appliance stores, which collected $13,329,438 and others.

TOTAL INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION IN THE UNITED STATES AS REPORTED BY THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

CHICAGO TRIBUNE SURVEY

FIND DOLLAR IS NOW PURCHASING MORE FURNITURE

"The purchasing power of the furniture dollar today is $1.25 compared to a dollar a year ago," asserts Hugh A. Murrill Jr., president of the Century Furniture Associates, operating one of the largest organizations of retail furniture stores in the industry.

The annual report of the corporation, numbering forty-six stores, was announced following a meeting of the board of directors held at the American Furniture Mart, 666 Lake Shore drive, yesterday, at the close of the first week of the national furniture show.

Sales for 1930 as compared to 1929 show a decline of 18.3 per cent in dollars and cents.

The report indicates, however, that the number of units sold was substantially the same as in 1929, the decline in dollars reflecting the general reductions in the price of furniture.

"We are in a market of style and price," said Mr. Murrill. "The consumer is buying in a lower price level—not merely to get cheaper merchandise, but primarily because the cheaper things have been made better looking. Furniture lines have shown the most remarkable transformation in the past eighteen months in the development of style and good taste in the lower price range."

The Century Associates report indicates that the stores—which range from New England to Texas—expect an upturn in business conditions in March, with marked improvement in the fall of 1931. It is also indicated that the quickest recovery is expected to take place in New England.

SEEK AUTHORITY FOR $8,000,000 IN RAIL SECURITIES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Authority to issue $8,000,000 in securities was sought today by the New York Central and the Baltimore and Ohio railroads in applications to the interstate commerce commission.

The B. & O. wants to issue $3,000,000 of equipment trust certificates for the purpose of purchasing new equipment to cost $4,193,560, consisting of four locomotives and 2,000 steel freight cars. The certificates would bear interest at 4½ per cent.

The New York Central asked to sell $5,000,000 of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway refunding and improvement mortgage bonds which it already has been authorized to issue. They would be sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. at 98 per cent of par plus accrued interest.

AMENDMENT TO ANTI-TRUST ACT IS PROPOSED

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—An amendment to the Sherman anti-trust act, limiting actions for restraint of trade to cases in which such a restraint is deemed detrimental to the public, has been proposed by a committee of the National Civic federation.

The federation's commission on industrial inquiry, headed by James W. Gerard, and including Matthew Woll, Secretary of Labor W. N. Doak, Owen D. Young, Daniel Willard, Samuel Insull, John W. Davis, and two score others, proposed this amendment:

"That the words 'in restraint of trade' shall be deemed and interpreted to mean only such restraint of trade as, having due regard to the interests of the producers, workers, consumers, and distributors, shall be to the detriment of the public."

U. S. STEEL SHOWS GAIN IN UNFILLED TONNAGE; LARGEST SINCE 1929

The United State Steel corporation again yesterday offered a pleasant surprise in its monthly statement on forward business. It reported an increase in unfilled tonnage of 303,960 tons in December, which was rather more than has been anticipated.

Furthermore, the increase last month was the largest that has been recorded since April, 1929, and also was the third consecutive monthly increase. It brought total unfilled tonnage up to 3,943,596 tons, the largest backlog since July, 1930. Unfilled tonnage on Dec. 31, 1929, was 4,417,193 tons.

While the gain in forward business was largely attributable to the low rate of mill operations during December, it was accomplished during a traditionally slack season and a period not usually given to any increase in business. Since the first of the year, the steel industry has expanded operations measurably but the volume of incoming orders has increased proportionately. Therefore, the big industry starts the new year in a favorable position.

BOND OFFERINGS SHOW BIG GAIN DURING WEEK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 10.—The heaviest volume of new bond offerings in a month were made this week when the total reached $45,533,000. This compared with $10,665,000 last week, and with $46,882,000 during the corresponding week last year. The sharp improvement in the listed bond market, especially in the case of rail issues, permitted the marketing of two railroad bond issues this week, representing the first domestic railroad financing since early in November.

The railroad financing comprised $13,000,000 Texas and Pacific Railway company 5s, due 1980, and $5,000,000 Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway 4½s, with part of the former and all of the latter going to refund maturities as of Jan. 1, 1931. The Texas and Pacific issue was priced at 98½, to yield 5.05 per cent, and the Big Four issue at par.

Nine municipal issues, ranging in size from $3,250,000 to $131,000, reached the market, four of which were note issues. This week's public utility financing consisted of three issues, aggregating $7,500,000.

Skelly Oil Co. Omits 50c Regular Common Dividend

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 10.—Directors of the Skelly Oil company have voted to omit the usual quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share upon the company's common stock for the first quarter of 1931. In announcing the action W. G. Skelly, president, said the directors believed the best interests of the company and its stockholders would be served by passing the dividend pending the return of more stable conditions in the oil industry and general business.

Railway and Light Securities company declared an extra dividend of $1 in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of 50 cents on the common.

Look Behind American Ship Merger Plans

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—British shipping men believe that behind the new merger of the International Mercantile Marine and the Roosevelt lines lies an ambitious attempt by the Pennsylvania railroad to invade the Atlantic shipping field, as the Canadian Pacific company has already done with notable success.

In shipping circles here it was recalled that the Pennsylvania, through the Pennroad corporation, holds a controlling interest in the I. M. M. and large interests in the Roosevelt lines. On all sides here the new combination is welcomed as bringing an infusion of new blood and new energy into the International Mercantile Marine organization, which has been in difficulties even after the sale of the White Star line for $35,000,000 five years ago.

It is realized here that the amalgamation will also have the effect of consolidating in the United States ultimate financial control of the British Atlantic Transport line and the Leyland line, both of which are associated with the International Mercantile Marine company.

After the sale of the White Star line to British interests in 1926, there were suggestions that somewhat similar sales might be effected of the remaining two British companies in the I. M. M., and possibly also the Red Star line. Satisfaction is expressed in London that the status of the two lines as British companies will be unaffected by the present fusion between the controlling American company and another American shipping enterprise.

London shipping men foresee the new combination will prove a formidable rival to the P. M. Chapman interests, especially in the Baltimore-Hamburg service, which will have government contracts, thus competing with the Champaign lines from New York, which will also have the help of government mail contracts.

TICKERS HANDLE 90 BILLIONS IN '30 TRANSACTIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 10.—Transactions in securities and commodities estimated at more than $90,000,000,000 were recorded last year over thirty-one separate ticker systems, operating thousands of different tickers, and serving every principal city in the United States and numerous small towns as well, it was estimated this week, with New York stock exchange quotations amounting to nearly one-half of this grand total.

The approximate average price of New York stock exchange shares last year was $50. Giving a valuation in excess of $40,500,000,000 to transactions amounting to 810,626,270 shares, these quotations were sent to 350 cities here and in Canada. Bond trading on the exchange was $2,779,009,350, making a total of over $43,300,000,000. New York curb stock and bond transactions amounted to $8,900,000,000, it is estimated, and trading on other security markets of the country were $2,000,000,000 more, judging from figures now available.

Wheat trading in Chicago amounted to $11,000,000,000 and total grain trading in that center is estimated at around $14,500,000,000, with grain transactions elsewhere figured at $2,900,000,000 more, cotton trading in the country is placed at around $11,000,000,000 and other produce at $2,000,000,000. All commodities are thus estimated at $30,400,000,000, which, added to security transactions of $60,200,000,000, gives a total estimate of $90,600,000,000.

Britain's "Big Five" Banks Maintain Dividend Rates

LONDON, Jan. 10.—With the exception of Lloyds, Britain's "big five" banks have maintained their dividend rates despite substantial reductions in profits. A decline of slightly more than 15 per cent in aggregate profits is revealed in the annual statements. In announcing recently a reduction in the dividend rate for the whole year to 15 per cent on "A" shares, compared with 16 2-3 per cent paid for the last ten years, Lloyds directors said that, in view of "depressed conditions and uncertain outlook," it had been decided to make a substantial increase in internal reserves.

The others of the "big five" are Barclay's, Midland, National Provincial, and Westminster.

ELGIN WATCH AGAIN LOWERS DIVIDEND RATE

Directors of the Elgin National Watch company have declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents, placing the stock on a $1.50 annual basis. Three months ago a dividend of 50 cents was paid, prior to which the stock was on a $2.50 annual basis.

Super Maid corporation voted to omit the quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common. The stock was placed on a $1 basis six months ago, prior to which $3 yearly and extras, were paid.

Hazleton, Pa., Jan. 10.—In response to the invitation of the Duplan Silk corporation yesterday to reopen the plant on the basis of the wage scale that prevailed before the strike of Nov. 17 against pay cuts, employés began registering today for their old places. Pickets of the United Textile Workers were stationed near the entrance. The mill ordinarily has a pay roll of approximately 1,800. In a statement yesterday the company announced that efforts would be made to find work for as many of its old hands as possible.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 10.—Stocks moved higher in quiet trading today. About the only feature of any note was a spurt of a point or so taken by United States Steel in the last hour on cautious covering by shorts in anticipation of a possible good sized increase in the steel tonnage figures due for publication after the close of business. American Can, Consolidated Gas, and some others of pivotal classification perked up behind the leader, but none of them was able to get very far.

One of the sharpest run-ups of the day was that of Allied Chemical, which jumped nearly five points to 168¾. Chemical has been having its troubles for weeks and has sunk to one new low after another, due to pessimism over the outlook for the industry. The buying spurt of today caused a lifting of eyebrows all around the trading circle. Air Reduction moved up about a point on mild demand.

Coppers Quiet.

Copper shares were not able to show much excitement either way over the report that the metal was being offered for 10 cents a pound. Anaconda made some progress in the earlier dealings, but wound up about where it had started. American Smelting and Kennecott perked up a little, while Chile took a header in the other direction, selling off 3 points.

While the reduction in red metal prices is probably intended to stimulate lagging demand, it is probable that weakness in London metal markets recently, due to the sharp decline in silver prices, may have been a factor. The monthly copper statistics covering North and South American stocks, production and deliveries will be available early next week. It is expected a sharp reduction in surplus stocks will be shown in consequence of the curetailment of output.

Railroad shares, after providing the fireworks in the preceding session, were dull and without important fluctuation. The public interest in the rails is, if anything, more limited than in other sections of the list. And while yesterday's hasty covering undoubtedly reduced the size of the short interest in the carrier stocks, it is believed that the short account is still of substantial proportions.

Among the Favorites.

The remarks of the head of the Pennsylvania relative to the merger and the outlook for railroad earnings apparently exerted little influence on holders of railroad securities. Baltimore and Ohio, Rock Island, Delaware and Hudson and Southern railway were among the favorites in what little buying took place in the division today.

Among the motors Nash was better but the others did not do much. During the course of the forenoon it was announced that the Skelly Oil com-

Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 67,000 hogs, and 25,000 sheep.

Developments in the live stock market during the last week uncovered a decidedly stronger undertone in all branches, which held firm against increasing supplies.

The total of all kinds unloaded at Chicago during the week at 409,900 compares with 305,564 cattle, hogs, and sheep the preceding week and with 340,643 a year ago. Prices pushed on to higher ground, the cattle average at $10.00 showing 25c advance, while hogs gained 10c at $7.75 and sheep 25c at $7.85.

The size of last week's hog supply was augmented by the gain in average weights. The estimate for the week at 232 lbs, the heaviest since early last October, is 10 lbs heavier than eight weeks ago.

Total receipts at 272,500 compare with 191,830 the previous week and with 223,062 a year ago. Range of prices widened, due to the scarcity of light weight hogs. Medium and weighty hogs are dragging along at the lowest prices since July, 1924.

All but about 2,500 of the 25,000 hogs received at Chicago yesterday were billed direct to packers from other points, leaving too few on the market to establish a fair list of quotations. Lightweights were firm, the extreme top at $8.10 being the same as Friday's top, while some of the heaviest butchers showed slight reductions.

The day's general average was unchanged at $7.65. Closing sales were 10@15c below the preceding week's close. Outside demand was brisk and some orders for top kinds were carried over for next week.

Hog Futures Dull.

Trading in hog futures was dull at the close of the week. January light were offered at $8.40 and bid $8.00. February contracts carried bids of $8.50, while buyers were willing to pay $9.00 for lightweights that could be delivered to them any time during March or April. January and February heavy hogs were offered at $7.75.

Choice grades of cattle were scarce and showed the most strength during the last week, being supported by good eastern outlet for top classes. Total cattle receipts, however, were larger at 43,700, comparing with 34,838 the previous week.

With the passing of the holidays there was an expansion in demand for beef, which has been suffering some during the poultry season. Beef is still selling 1@2c per pound cheaper than a month ago and it shows a saving to the consumer of 4@5c compared with a year ago.

Lamb Market Stronger.

The "feeling" that lamb prices will gradually work upward in the next few weeks gained strength when top sales scaled the $9.00 line last week. Top lightest weights set up a new high mark of $9.15 in midweek. A slight rise in the local wholesale market; coupled with broader shipping demand, added zest to the trade. Country buyers are more hopeful and are paying up to $7.85 for 80 lbs shearing stock suitable for a short turn in the feed lots.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 67,000 hogs, and 25,000 sheep, against 13,886 cattle, 70,568 hogs and 17,407 sheep a week ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 49,000 cattle, 275,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 50,337 cattle, 207,582 hogs, and 88,367 sheep a week ago and 54,229 cattle, 264,482 hogs, and 68,888 sheep a year ago.

WHEAT AND CORN WILL SELL MUCH HIGHER

We expect Winnipeg July Wheat and Chicago July Corn to sell twenty to forty cents higher before July 25th. Stocks of wheat in Winnipeg will be practically exhausted before another crop is raised. Receipts of corn in January will be the smallest in thirty years.

Write for fifty page book free, showing all grain trades made by Ainsworth for a period of eighteen years; also last two market letters, giving reasons for expecting advance in all grains.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders say that between the farm board and the government they are in a quandary. The shorts in May are scared and are getting out, and the July price is at a level where they hesitate to press the short side, although many feel that unless something happens to the crop between now and harvest prices might look high. Uncertainty as to the foreign situation is another factor that keeps the trade nervous. Bearish sentiment exists in corn and a large percentage of the traders look for lower prices. Cash handlers, however, say that they do not expect an increased movement should there be a sharp decline in prices.

"How long this unnatural condition in wheat will continue is difficult to say," says J. F. Jackson of Pynchon & Co. "That there will have to be a readjustment when the new crop is available is inevitable. Whether old wheat prices will sink to the level of the new, as represented by July, will depend largely on the development of the growing crop. Present prices for July are relatively high when compared with those of Canada and Argentina, our competitors. The continued dry weather and lack of subsoil moisture over large areas of winter wheat and lack of snow in the northwest and parts of Canada are probably the outstanding factors, which, if continued, may change the picture later on."

"Stocks of wheat and flour in the United Kingdom ports increased nearly 6,000,000 bu during December, and the total now is 19,720,000, against 16,840,000 bu this time last year, and 20,560,000 two years ago," says Broomhall. "Millers in England are bidding for cheap Argentine wheat, which will arrive in February or March. This grain is selling at 59¼c c. i. f., and consequently is underselling Manitobas, and foreign buying of Canadian wheat has subsided. Australia is now approaching the heavy shipping season and prices from that country are comparatively low."

According to a report prepared by Dr. C. F. Marbut of the United States agricultural department 200,000,000 bu of wheat will be exported from Russia in 1933 if the five year plan holds up. Dr. Marbut recently returned from Russia, where he attended the second international soil science congress at Leningrad and Moscow.

WORLD BANK'S DEPOSITS ARE OFF $58,000,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BASLE, Jan. 10.—After the heaviest month it had yet had, the Bank for International Settlements shows in its statement for December, issued here today, $58,000,000 less deposits than at the end of November.

This decrease is the first the bank has reported and was expected owing to normal withdrawals to pay allied debt accounts, chiefly to the United States on Dec. 15. In the early part of the month before these withdrawals were made, the bank's funds rose to nearly $400,000,000, the highest point it has ever reached.

All things considered, banking circles consider the bank has weathered a heavy month satisfactorily. They point out that central banks, in addition to funds they withdrew on account of governments to meet the semi-annual debt payments, had, to withdraw some of their own deposits to meet end of the year payments. The former class of withdrawals alone totaled nearly $130,000,000, including, in addition to payments to the United States, French and Italian debt payments to Great Britain. In other words, new deposits before the end of December had to replace $72,000,000 of these withdrawals.

These new deposits were chiefly made by central banks on their own accounts, which the statement shows now amount to $43,000,000 more than in November and represent the highest figure they have yet reached, or 51 per cent of the entire bank funds. It is this development that especially pleases bank circles.

On the asset side, it is noteworthy there are no longer any investments exceeding two years and since only 2 per cent funds are invested for more than a year, the bank is now practically on less than a year's basis as far as liquidity is concerned. The statement shows 500 more shares of capital issue. They went to the Bank of Latvia.

BARNSDALL CUTS DIVIDEND RATE ON 'A' AND 'B' STOCKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 10.—Directors of of the Barnsdall corporation, meeting for dividend action on the class A and B stocks, voted to reduce the quarterly rate from 50 cents to 25 cents on both classes, and at the same time the company stated that it has earned during 1930 its full dividend of $2 a share paid out last year.

The position of the company on Jan. 1 showed net current assets over $6,000,000 and a ratio of about two and one-half to one, with budget requirements for the first six months of 1931 for drillings and other capital expenditures of less than $1,000,000, against $6,500,000 for the year 1930.

The Darby Petroleum company voted to omit its quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, due at this time.

P. W. Brooks & Co., Inc., announced today a distribution of 54.549 cents a share on Associated Standard Oil Stocks shares, coupon No. 3, payable Jan. 15. Total distributions on the shares of this fixed trust applicable to the calendar year 1930 have amounted to $1.4466 a share.

HUNT FOR STOCK BARGAINS SPURS LONDON ACTIVITY

South American Issues Veer Upward.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Coincidentally with the customary January sales in most London department stores and shopping emporiums "bargain hunters" produced considerable activity in the various stock market departments this week.

Activity was most noticeable in the government securities section, where South American, mainly Brazilian and Sao Paulo, issue experienced marked recovery. This was chiefly due to rumors, which were confirmed on Friday, that Sir Otto Neimeyer will go on a mission to Brazil to advise the government on measures of financial reform. All Brazil government stocks rallied sharply on cessation of the recent American selling. With the bears running to cover, a rise of a couple of points per day became common.

Brazil 6½s were the best performers with a ten point rise, the whole list, however, showing a cheerful tendency despite the reduction of many half yearly dividends. Sao Paulo coffee issues spurted sharply, the sentiment being assisted by satisfactory official coffee figures.

Join in Recovery.

Bargain hunters were also busy picking up German sterling loans and Chinese government stocks despite the renewed slump in silver. American securities joined the recovery, with leading home industrials keeping them company.

Wall street operations also imparted a better tone to the international railways market, with Canadian Pacific favored. British funds, however, did not keep pace with foreign bonds' improvement, the 5 per cent war loan, the 3½ per cent conversion loan, the 4 per cent consols, and the funding loan meeting a fair amount of liquidation.

The money market is gradually establishing firmer conditions, but momentarily the outlook is still somewhat obscure. The market has been chiefly engaged in repayments due the Bank of England, the operations being effected without difficulty. But the indications of a superabundance of money, experienced at the beginning of the new year, are now disappearing and very easy conditions are not looked for in the near future, partly due to prospective heavy payments of income taxes to the exchequer.

Bank Dividends.

That the recent forecast of disappointing dividend announcements might be expected in the near future, was confirmed by the decision of Lloyd's bank this week to reduce its dividend. This decision came as a shock, which was only partly offset when the other four of the "big five" banks announced distribution at the usual rate. It is generally recognized that British banks experienced a bad year in 1930, with the decline in profits considerable. Compared to 1929 the Midland bank shows a decrease of 13 per cent in profits, Lloyds, 16¼ per cent; Westminster, 15½ per cent, and Barclay's, 22 per cent. The chief discount houses, in contrast, show considerably increased profits.

GOLD DRAIN CONTINUES

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Despite the efforts of French and British banking officials to conclude a pact to end the gold drain from the Bank of England to the Bank of France, more shipments across the channel are expected next week.

"Interest in the gold question has been intensified here since the conversations and negotiations have been going on between French and British financial experts, and the French authorities are beginning to realize the adverse effects of the policy of gold hoarding and the consequent increase in note circulation.

ASK ACCOUNTING FROM OFFICIALS OF CLOSED BANK

Old Madison and Kedzie Directors Named.

A bill for an accounting against directors and some of the officers of the old Madison and Kedzie State bank, which has been in liquidation since last February, was filed yesterday in the Circuit court by Attorney John R. Nicholson in behalf of a group of stockholders.

The defendants are charged with negligent and unlawful management of the bank, resulting in a loss of $1,141,200 to the stockholders. The bill demands that the old bank officials be held liable for this loss.

No Relation to New Bank.

The bank was organized Nov. 28, 1918, and on Feb. 8, 1930, its assets were assigned and transferred to the Madison-Kedzie Trust and Savings bank for the purpose of liquidation. The new bank, organized Feb. 10, has no relation to the old bank, is not in any way a party to the action, nor can it be affected by the result in any way. The old bank, though it is not engaged in banking business, continues to have a legal existence during the liquidation.

The defendants named have been the directors of the old bank during the last ten years. Those named as defendants are Benjamin Kulp, chairman of the board; David W. Clark, veteran banker and politician; William C. Grunow, vice president of Grigsby-Grunow company; Richard Hellman, New York capitalist; A. C. Gulbransen, piano manufacturer; George D. Wilkinson, stove manufacturer; H. N. Bruns, W. F. Gleason, Isaac B. Lipson, John T. Mammoser, James F. Raleigh, Joseph Rothschild, Alfred H. Smith, and Philip Kent.

Other Defendants.

Those formerly associated with the old bank, also named as defendants, are former Congressman M. A. [Leaky Trunk] Michaelson, Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach, H. H. Baum, H. L. Schroeder, Max Ehrman, J. P. Collins, Walter Gramm, Ira Krupnick, J. A. Barkey, Ralph B. Wilson, and Jacob Kulp, investment broker, who was questioned by the senate committee investigating scandals in letting of postoffice leases. Sixty-nine complainants are listed as holding 2,586 shares of stock.

The bill charges that each of the directors of the old bank in their term of office violated their legal oaths and negligently administered the affairs of the bank. It also charges the directors of juggling with funds. It is stated that the directors disregarded warnings from the state auditor and the Chicago Clearing House association with respect to making improvident loans. The complaints list numerous loans made far in excess of the legal limit of 15 per cent of the authorized capital and surplus to any one corporation or person.

Losses Covered Up, Is Charge.

In order not to make it appear that such losses were being sustained by the bank the directors, the bill alleges, authorized book entries reducing by the amounts the loans and discounts of the bank and adding the amounts to the book value of the bank building so that the total assets of the bank would appear the same. The directors are alleged to have gone beyond the established banking practice of limiting loans on real estate mortgages and trust deeds to 50 per cent of the time deposits in the bank. Losses of the bank due to mismanagement, it is charged, aggregate $6,000,000.

The bill also cites the creation of an investment company by Benjamin Kulp, Jacob Kulp, and Mammoser at great length. It concludes stating that the bank was forced to expend sums in the enterprise.

The bill states that the bank employed twenty-seven officers at an annual sum of $180,000. This is held to be $50,000 in excess of officers' salaries in banks of similar size. The capital was then $2,000,000 and the surplus $500,000.

Dividends Outstrip Profits.

From Jan. 1, 1928 to Oct. 21, 1929 the bank profits were $453,394, yet the bank paid in this period $1,061,000 or $607,706 in excess of the profits in dividends, according to the bill. These payments were made, it is charged, to lull the stockholders into security by turning a portion of the receipts of the sale of stock into dividends. The bill asks that all records of the old bank be impounded.

Marquette Park Bank Adds Three Directors

Three directors were added to the board of the Marquette Park State bank at the annual meeting of the stockholders yesterday. They are A. H. Hutchinson, Samuel J. Feinberg, and Dr. William H. Ziervogel. The other directors were reëlected. J. W. Utesch Jr., assistant cashier, was elected vice president.

Verne R. Langdon was elected a director of the Pioneer Trust and Savings bank at the annual meeting of stockholders of the institution. Other directors were reëlected. At a meeting of the board present officers were reëlected for the coming year.

A. B. Leach & Co. Elects English Vice President

John J. English, La Salle street investment banker, has been elected vice president and director of A. B. Leach & Co., Inc., and will be associated with the Chicago office. Mr. English started his career over 21 years ago with William R. Compton & Co., later becoming vice president of that firm in charge of the Chicago office. He also was associated with C. F. Childs & Co. as vice president in the Chicago office.

Form Company to Build California Gas Pipe Line

Southern Fuel company, owned jointly by Southern California Edison company and Southern California Gas company, has been formed to construct a pipe line for natural gas from the San Joaquin valley fields to Los Angeles. The company will expend $3,000,000 on the lines.

STOCKS PUSH ON UNDER BANNER OF STEEL CORP.

pany had omitted its dividend. The omission followed a cut in the Barnsdall dividend yesterday. Skelly ceded some ground but the effects of the directors' action seemed to have been pretty well discounted.

On the whole the speculative element leaning to the constructive side of things found basis for encouragement in the action of the market during the day's session. It had been expected that the rather sharp reaction which developed late in yesterday's session would bring something in the way of nervous selling into broker's hands overnight. But absence of important volume of selling was, perhaps, the outstanding feature of the short trading period.

Bearish professionals sought to extend the reaction at the outset, but such efforts were not eminently successful. Pressure of outside selling was negligible and as the morning progressed offerings dried up completely with scattered coverings finding reflection in a slightly better range of values in late dealings.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Cotton goods were quiet today, production is being cut on printed goods. Further revisions of rayon prices were announced by large companies in keeping with those announced earlier in the week. Business offered to rayon producers is larger. Raw silk was unchanged locally. More samples of new type silks are being distributed. Burlaps were unchanged with a tendency toward easing noted in spot offerings. There was more inquiry for men's wear suitings for spring.

RAW SILK.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—SILK—Raw futures closed steady; sales, 250 bales. Jan., $2.53; March, $2.58; May, $2.54; open market quotations [sixty day basis] Shanghai steam extra B, $2.55; Canton double extra A, 14@16s, $1.80; Japanese crack double extra, $2.85.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 10.—The movement of gasoline from the Ponca City, Okla., refinery of the Continental Oil company to Kansas City through the line of Great Lakes Pipe Line company will commence before the end of January, it is announced. At present all of the pipe between Ponca City and Barnsdall, Okla., has been laid and filled in. All of the right of way between Barnsdall, Okla., and Kansas City has been purchased and less than forty-two miles of line remain incomplete.

Work is also progressing rapidly on sections of the line east of Kansas City. Between Kansas City and Des Moines construction has been completed on over forty-eight miles of the line. Between Des Moines and the Mississippi river all of the line has been finished except eleven highway crossings. The Kansas river crossing near Kansas City and the Missouri river crossing, also near that city, have been completed.

Trade in Meat Improves, Armour & Co. Review Says

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says:

"Continued improvement was shown in most leading meat lines this week, indicating a return of the public's normal appetite for meat. Pork products, both fresh and smoked, benefited by a broad improvement in general demand. While there was no material change in prices, the markets reflected considerably more interest.

"Lamb business, too, proved to be in good shape, with demand quite good and the tone helped by the lighter receipts of the last few weeks. Veal held about steady. The current price levels of other meat items continued to curtail somewhat the demand for beef and there was little change in beef prices. Foreign business was quite good for the week."

REORGANIZATION PLAN FOR STREET RY. IS DROPPED

In a statement issued by Samuel Insull Jr. it is announced that the Midland United company has dropped its tentative plan for reorganizing the Indianapolis Street railway because of the rejection of the Indianapolis city administration of the "service-at-cost" principle. The Insull company offered to become managers and capital providers for the rehabilitation of the system under certain conditions, one of which was the service-at-cost plan.

Mr. Insull, who is president of Midland United, again denied in his statement that the plan offered by the company had been contingent on the firm's acquiring control of the reorganized system. The company will resume its position as a minority security holder in the property. The company has not and will not seek to gain control of the system, he stated.

Export Copper Price Is Reduced ¼ Ct. Per Pound

New York, Jan. 10.—A second reduction of a quarter of a cent a pound in as many days was made today in the price of export copper by Exporters, Inc. Today's cut brought the price to 10.30 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports. This figure placed the foreign price on a parity with 10 cents for the metal in the domestic market, where copper, although nominally quoted at 10½ cents, has been sold by some custom smelters as low as 10 cents a pound.

Weekly Debits Increase, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago for the week ended Jan. 7, 1931, by 225 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the Seventh Federal Reserve district, aggregate $1,432,148,000, an increase of 0.5 per cent compared with a week ago [$1,425,238,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,886,498,000], a decrease of 24.1 per cent was shown.

CHICAGO STOCKS END DAY WITH MINOR GAINS

Bond Market Section Shows Activity.

Leading shares on the Chicago Stock exchange ended the week yesterday with minor gains over Friday's closing prices. Trading, however, was carried on at a dull pace with only 69,000 shares turning over during the session.

A feature of the day's trading was the comparatively heavy dealing in the bond section. Total bond transactions involved issues with a par value of $53,000. Insull 6s led in volume of sales and improved a fraction to 89⅛. Swift 5s on a $4,000 share turnover finished unchanged at 103. Appalachian Gas 6s, 1945, were traded in after a long period of inactivity and were quoted at 75. The last previous transaction in this issue was made at 92½.

A similar wide spread from the previous quotation appeared in Southwest Natural Gas 6s, which were traded in at 64½c., as compared with its last price of 97.

No Action on Market.

Filing of receivership proceedings against Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company did not take place until after the close of the market. The action was apparently unexpected. The issue was traded in in moderate volume around the previous closing price of 8⅝.

The Insull utility issues accounted for a good portion of the day's sales. Final prices in the group in the main were slightly above Friday's last quotations.

It was reported yesterday that Paramount-Publix corporation has made an offer to minority holders of Marks Brothers' Theaters preferred shares to exchange their stock for Paramount shares. Details of the offer will be announced next week, it was stated.

Paramount acquired a 70 per cent interest in the theater company late in 1929. Only 45,000 preferred shares are now outstanding in the hands of the public. On the basis of current quotations the ratio of exchange will probably be one share of Paramount for each four shares of Marks preferred. An odd lot transaction was made in the Marks issue yesterday at 8⅝, a fraction under its previous close.

Stock Values Climb.

An increase of $99,926,330, or 4.57 per cent, in the market value of fifty representative issues on the exchange last week is shown by a compilation of Otis & Co. The fifty stocks had a value at the close yesterday of $2,285,691,110 as compared with $2,185,764,780 at the close of the preceding week.

The same issues had a market value on Jan. 11, 1930, of $2,930,619,212, which was $644,929,102, or 22 per cent, above yesterday's market value.

It was announced yesterday that two seats on the exchange have been sold for $14,000. This is an increase of $500 from the previous sale made a few days ago.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Dillon, Read & Co. heads the group of bankers offering $15,000,000 Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, series of 1971, at 100 and accrued interest. Other members of the syndicate are Harris Trust and Savings, Chase Securities corporation, National City company, Spencer, Trask & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., and Stone and Webster & Blodget.

Formation of Selected Managements, Inc., distributing group to handle the national sale of certificates of participation in Selected Managements, Inc., is announced by Nicol-Ford & Co. and Harris, Small & Co., sponsors of the latter.

A proposal for the reinstatement of the suspended firm of Sutro & Co. of San Francisco and New York will shortly come before officials of the New York Stock exchange. James H. McGean, floor member of the firm, was suspended for three years by the exchange last summer, the action automatically suspending the firm. The charge was violation of the exchange rule governing "wash sales." The proposal for reinstatement is in the form of a transfer of the membership of McGean to Allan B. Lane for a nominal consideration. If elected, Lane will become a partner in Sutro & Co., which then will become active members of the stock exchange.

The national loan commission of Colombia has approved a contract with the National City bank of New York which defers payment of an $8,000,000 loan due the bank from Jan. 15 to July 31. An American banking syndicate headed by the National City bank and the First National bank of Boston has agreed to loan Colombia $20,000,000 additional when congress passes a proposed railroad reorganization act, approves a balanced budget and limits the national debt. Of this amount, to be a long term loan, $8,000,000 would be used to repay the amount outstanding and the other $12,000,000 would be distributed by the government according to national needs.

LEASES ENTIRE FLOOR LONDON GUARANTEE BLDG.

Another indication of the trend of advertising firms to Michigan avenue is shown in a lease signed last week whereby H. W. Kastor & Sons have leased the entire twelfth floor of the London Guarantee building at Michigan and Wacker, for a five year term. The space is to be remodeled for the new tenant, who is planning many unusual improvements.

It is stated by C. F. Drake of Willoughby & Co., who, with A. H. Alexander of the same firm, negotiated the lease, that the lessees will have one of the finest advertising offices in the country. They have been occupying the top floor of the Lytton building, at State and Jackson, for the last eighteen years. For several years they have been considering moving northward from the loop.

President Names Committees.

Mark Levy, new president of the Chicago real estate board, has announced the appointment of appraisal, finance, educational, and home committees. S. Charles Iversen is general chairman of the appraisal body; members of it are Ward T. Huston, William G. Booth, Edward D. Le Tourneux, Frederick J. Phillips, Harry F. Prussing, Grover C. Elmore, and William Kaplan.

The finance committee is headed by Hyde W. Perce; members are Henry G. Zander Jr. and Charles F. Binney. J. Soule Warterfield is chairman of the new home committee, with James J. Carroll and Thomas J. Fleming members. Frederick Bowes is chairman of the educational committee, with members: Harold Newmann, Elmer E. Stults, H. O. Walther, P. D. Angell, Arthur Kruggel, Fred M. Clarke, Harry Cutmore, Hobart Miller, A. Lauren Brown, Fred Babcock, Louis T. Orr, Arthur Hall, and Charles P. A. Peterson.

Lease Floor at One La Salle.

Bryant, Roberts, Hwass & Lewe, attorneys at 105 West Monroe street, have leased practically all of the 27th floor of the One La Salle street building, through L. J. Sheridan & Co., renting agents.

The Vernon Golf club has been incorporated to take over the Vernon Ridge Golf club, a private organization, a mile or so west of Deerfield, on the Deerfield-Highland Park and Saunders roads. The 195 acres, improved with an 18 hole course, will be operated on an annual fee basis. Siegmund Katz heads the corporation. Decker & Golden were attorneys.

A Few Things to Be Considered by Holders of Defaulted Real Estate Bonds.

Committees functioning for the protection of holders of defaulted real estate bonds have found in many instances that it is possible to reorganize the property securing the defaulted bonds, alter the capital setup, and still retain for the bondholder his preferred position with respect to the assets of the issuing company.

In some cases a new loan can be made and the bondholder given part cash and part preferred stock in exchange for his bond. When this plan is not feasible arrangements are sometimes made for the bondholders to accept either bonds issued under a new mortgage with less arduous prepayment requirements and perhaps a lower interest rate or part bonds and part stock.

When the protective committee is composed of honest and capable individuals it is in a position to accomplish much good for the bondholders, provided, of course, it succeeds in getting their support and is not harassed by professional opposition seeking to line its own pockets by creating a nuisance value on small holdings and halting the execution of any plan until it has been bought out at a price out of line with the value of the security held.

When a default occurs it is almost certain to cost the bondholder money. About all that a good committee can hope to do is to see that it doesn't cost him too much.

In view of the present depressed market for apartment and office buildings it seems reasonable to assume that an arrangement by which the bondholders take over the property securing the loan and reorganize the capital setup so that the property can be tided over to a period when the real estate market may be improved is preferable to a forced sale at a great sacrifice.

In considering any reorganization plan that is submitted for his approval, however, the bondholder should see to it that the priority of his claim on assets is properly protected. If a new first mortgage is to be placed ahead of his new paper he should make sure that the funds so raised are necessary and will be used in a way that will improve the value of his own holdings.

Most of the people who hold defaulted real estate bonds are individuals of modest means who have only a superficial knowledge of investment matters and are totally unprepared to decide upon the salvage propositions submitted for their approval. Some rush in to support any plan suggested, good or bad. Others hesitate to participate in any plan and thereby often unknowingly help defeat the efforts of a committee working honestly to protect the bondholders.

COTTON TRADE QUIET

Cotton prices were irregular yesterday with a light trade. Liverpool cables were 1 point higher to unchanged, with spot sales 2,000 bales. The feeling abroad is uncertain, owing to labor troubles. Commission house buying appeared on breaks.

Light rains were reported over Oklahoma, Texas and the southwest generally while the rest of the belt was generally clear with freezing weather over Georgia and the Carolinas. A New Orleans message quoted Carl Williams, the farm board specialist, as saying the south was not planning an acreage reduction to meet the overproduction of cotton and says a crop of over 12,000,000 bales would mean disaster.

At the close futures in Chicago were 4 points lower to 2 points net higher, with other markets 3 points lower to 9 points higher. Spots in New York were 5 points lower at 10.15c, New Orleans unchanged at 9.80c, Galveston, 10c, and Houston, 9.90c. Prices follow:

Profits from the Stocks of Chain Stores

Chain store stocks are now on the bargain counter. Chain store systems have weathered the business depression better than either industrials or railroads. Their stocks should advance in market price and mean large profits for those who buy today.

Our Statistical Department has prepared a booklet describing seventeen leading chains as follows:

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.
First National Stores
W. T. Grant Co.
S. H. Kress Co.
McCrory Stores
National Family Stores
J. C. Penney
Sears, Roebuck
F. W. Woolworth
Childs Company
Grand-Silver
S. S. Kresge
Lerner Stores
Montgomery Ward
National Tea Co.
Safeway Stores
Walgreen Co.

Copy of the booklet will be mailed free on request. Send for your copy today. Get the facts concerning these companies, many of whose shares are now real bargains.

Why did you love Beer?

Every real joy . . . every help remains

SOME people drank beer at mealtime, as a premier aid to digestion.

More drank it at bedtime, as the finest aid to sleep. The esters and aldehydes combated digestive disturbance, the chief cause of insomnia. The hops quieted the nerves. The food properties drew the blood from the head.

But the millions drank it for its sparkle, flavor, foam and zest. The height of hospitality decreed beer.

All those joys, all those helps remain to you in Atlas Special Brew. And they are better than the old.

You Are Not Deprived

Atlas Special Brew is better than our old brews. And we brewed the best.

It is brewed by the same master brewers, in the same exacting ways. It is based on the same fine barley malt, and the same domestic and Bohemian hops.

We use a like process, immensely improved. The product is gradually cooled, then filtered through white wool pulp. The brew is aged, as in old days, for months. The bottles are sterilized before filling.

We treat the water, to match the flavor of famous European brews.

The world never knew a better malt-and-hop brew than Atlas Special Brew, save for the diminished alcohol which we evaporate. Nothing ever served you better as a quieting delight.

Forget the Alcohol

Alcohol in beer was always a minor factor. If you were served Atlas Special Brew, with it and without it, you could not discover a difference.

So the idea that you must turn to home brews, or to other makeshifts, is a myth. All that beer brought to you in delight or help is at its utmost in Atlas Special Brew.

Atlas Special Brew is supplied by over 30,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, so order some now at your store. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. Atlas Brewing Company, 2107 Blue Island Avenue, Chicago, Ill. FOR A GLORIOUS WINTER VACATION IN.. Southern California

$215. A MONTH WHILE HERE

Send coupon for new free Winter Sightseeing Itinerary

THINK of a whole month this winter in sun-drenched Southern California for as little as $215 while here! And this figure is based on a full schedule of activity every day . . . hotels, meals, sports, sightseeing trips daily. (Costs can be considerably less if you don't care to be "on the go" every day.) So much to see and do and enjoy you'll never forget this glorious trip.

Because the Los Angeles area is a year 'round vacation land, with ample accommodations at all times, you escape the "peak prices" necessary in short-season resorts. In fact, U.S. government surveys show that costs of food, rent, fuel and light in Los Angeles County are 15.2% less than the national average. Costs while here may easily be no more than at home.

We have prepared a suggested itinerary for a month's stay in Southern California this winter, describing and illustrating all the things you'll want to do and see. Includes dozens of interesting photographs of California scenes, map, information about routes and itemized daily cost figures. Send the coupon below for your free copy of this remarkable book.

Rest, play, health, stimulating new experience . . . Southern California offers you these and more! For here in this sunny playground centered by Los Angeles, the United States' fifth city, are the elements of half-a-dozen vacations combined in one:

6 Vacations in One

Lazy sun-basking on sandy beaches of the friendly Pacific . . . or sailing over its blue waters to nearby pleasure-islands. Mile-high mountains and pine-fringed lakes for contrast. The winter desert, land of mystery and sunshine. Gay Hollywood, where you'll mingle with famous stars at smart cafes and unique "first-nights."

Sports, of course! All kinds, all winter long. You'll thrill to the foreign "color" of ancient Spanish Missions and nearby Old Mexico. And you'll want to visit Pasadena, Beverly Hills, Long Beach, Glendale, Santa Monica and scores of other interesting places. You can stay six months and do something different every day. Or, if time is limited, even a two-weeks vacation gives you 11 days actually here, from your city.

Don't put off this trip that can mean so much in pleasure, health and new ideas. Send the coupon...NOW!

TEACHER TACKLES COUGH

Doesn't Miss a Day of School

"Right before exams I caught a cough. I just hated to stay home and give my class to a substitute. Another teacher recommended Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup. When I got home I started to tackle my cough with the syrup. In just a few minutes and I was breathing easier, my throat felt better, I was coughing less. That very night I got well. Went back to school next day." Mrs. L. Stone, 915 West End Avenue, New York.

Millions

who walk our city streets

Suffer this "Gnawing" Ailment

It's called

"American Stomach"

YOU see them bustling everywhere on our city streets. People apparently full of eager energy. But in how few faces do you see the unmistakable signs of really good health!

There may be many causes, but you no doubt have noticed one rather growing common complaint. That indisposition or stomach "condition" that people increasingly mention today.

In Switzerland, where thousands go each year to take the rest cure, this condition was noticed so frequently among American patients that it was finally diagnosed as "American Stomach".

"American Stomach" can mean many things. It may mean a "middle-aged" stomach in a young person. Or the feeble digestion of old age in a person in middle life. Or it may mean a "bridge party" stomach, or a "rich food" stomach, a "quick lunch" stomach, or a "prohibition" stomach.

On the other hand, it may be merely the result of fatigue and overwork or nervousness. The condition may not be serious at first, but if neglected may eventually lead to chronic ailments.

In Switzerland

In Europe they confirm that "American Stomach" is due to our national habits of life; the hustle and the bustle; rush eating, irregular eating. And say that after all, "American Stomach" is a "tired" stomach—a stomach that wants a rest.

And our stomachs never get a rest. Because, they say, we seem to know nothing about one very important type of food—namely, a "rest" food.

A "rest" food is one which usually has 3 properties:

(a) concentrated nourishment, (b) digests quickly without effort, (c) has the power to digest other foods you eat.

These properties enable a "rest" food to lift a great burden from the digestive organs and give your stomach a rest.

Over in Switzerland they put "American Stomach" patients on a diet. They give them a "rest" food called Ovaltine. They eat nothing else and they stay in bed. But this is drastic treatment.

So we offer you here a simpler way that anyone can follow. Take 4 teaspoonfuls of Ovaltine (use the coupon below for a trial supply). Mix it in a half glass of warm milk, and drink it at the end of each meal. You will be surprised at the results it brings, the way in which it helps your stomach; rests your stomach. For Ovaltine has unusual powers.

What It Is

Ovaltine is not a drug. It is a food concentrate developed by a Swiss scientist many years ago. Originally it was used to build up sick and convalescent people. For it digests almost without effort, even when digestion is impaired.

Ovaltine also has another unique property. It contains in high percentage a substance known as "diastase"—a food property which has the power to digest the starch content of other foods in your stomach. A glass of warm Ovaltine taken at the end of a meal will digest practically all the starch content of the other foods you have eaten. In this way it takes a tremendous burden from your stomach. (Doctors will tell you that a high proportion of indigestion is caused by undigested starchy foods.) Ovaltine speeds up digestion, and thus not only relieves distress, but actually helps the cause of the trouble.

It also contains a substance taken from eggs called "lecithin", which directly feeds the nerves. This element, plus a high content of Vitamin B, curbs nervousness very noticeably. During the World War Ovaltine was prescribed as a standard ration for shell-shocked soldiers.

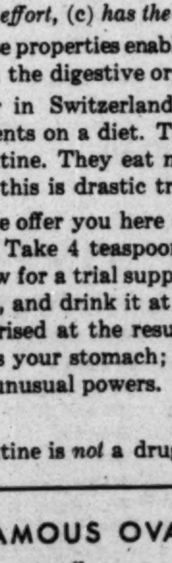
If you are troubled with any of the symptoms known as "American Stomach" try Ovaltine at once. We will be glad to send you a sample tin. Note the good that it does you. If you are particularly distressed, eliminate other foods entirely and drink Ovaltine for a meal or two. It contains all the nourishment you need. Drink it at bedtime, too, for it helps to give you sound, natural sleep.

Please note that if Ovaltine doesn't relieve your condition in a day or two, then indeed you should see a doctor.

Just phone your druggist or grocer for a package today. Or if you like, clip the coupon. We will send a test sample. You can prove for yourself the things claimed for Ovaltine.

(Note) Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. It is also widely recommended by physicians for sleeplessness, nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged.

FAMOUS OVALTINE OATMEAL TEST



Put 3 teaspoonfuls of Ovaltine into a full glass or cereal dish of warm, cooked oatmeal. Stir a few times to mix. Then watch and you will see the oatmeal liquefy before your eyes. You will see how a small amount of Ovaltine digests the entire starch content of the oatmeal in the same way that your own digestive organs should. It is a perfect demonstration of how Ovaltine, if taken with a meal, digests the starch content of other foods in your stomach.

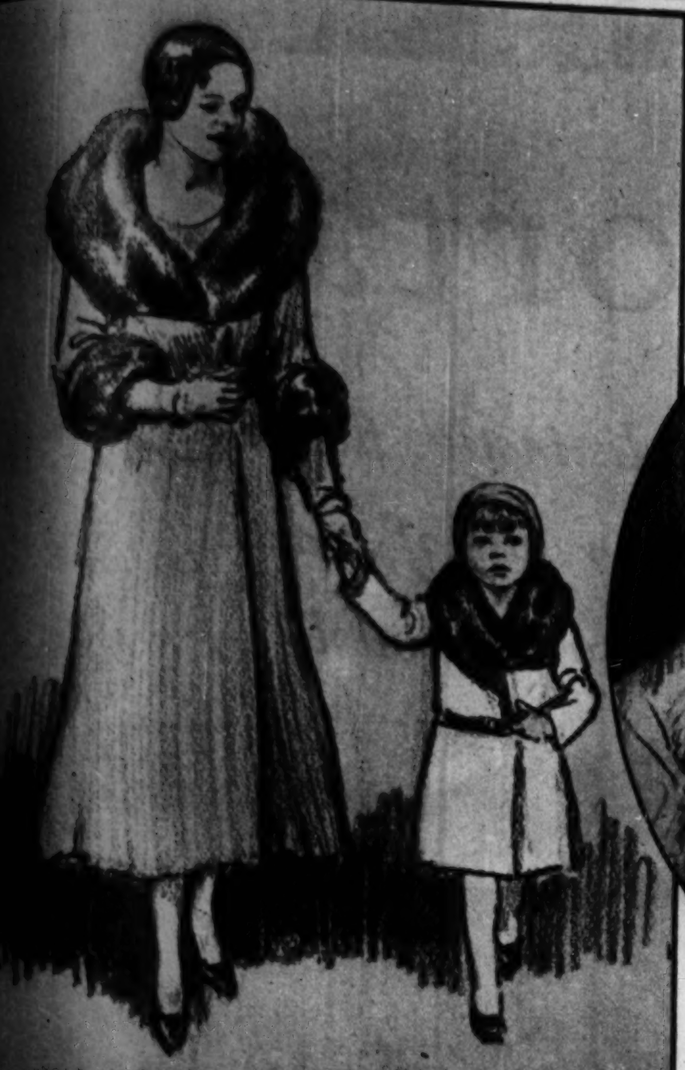
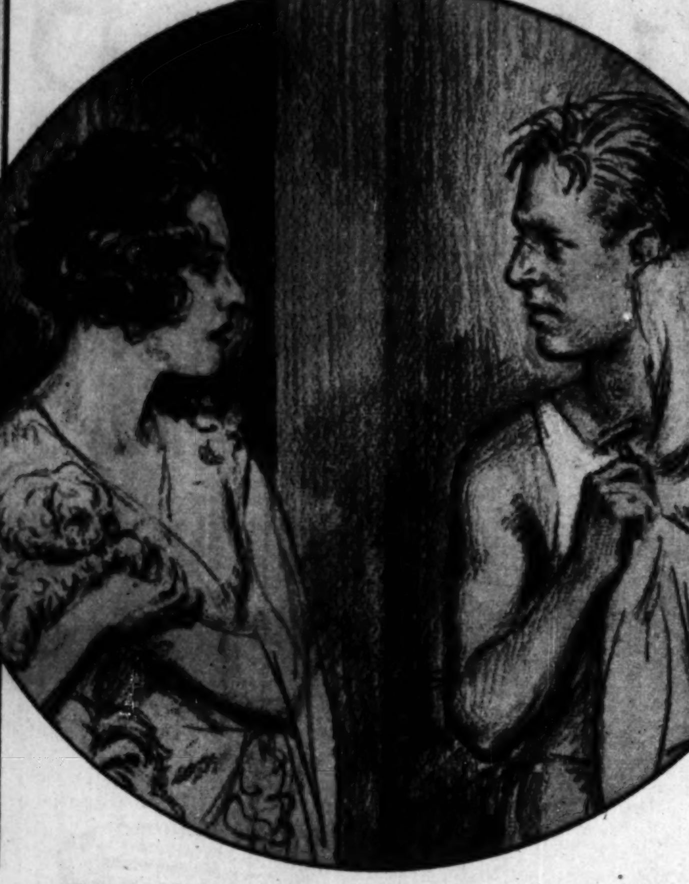
Starting the Day Right

By W. E. Hill

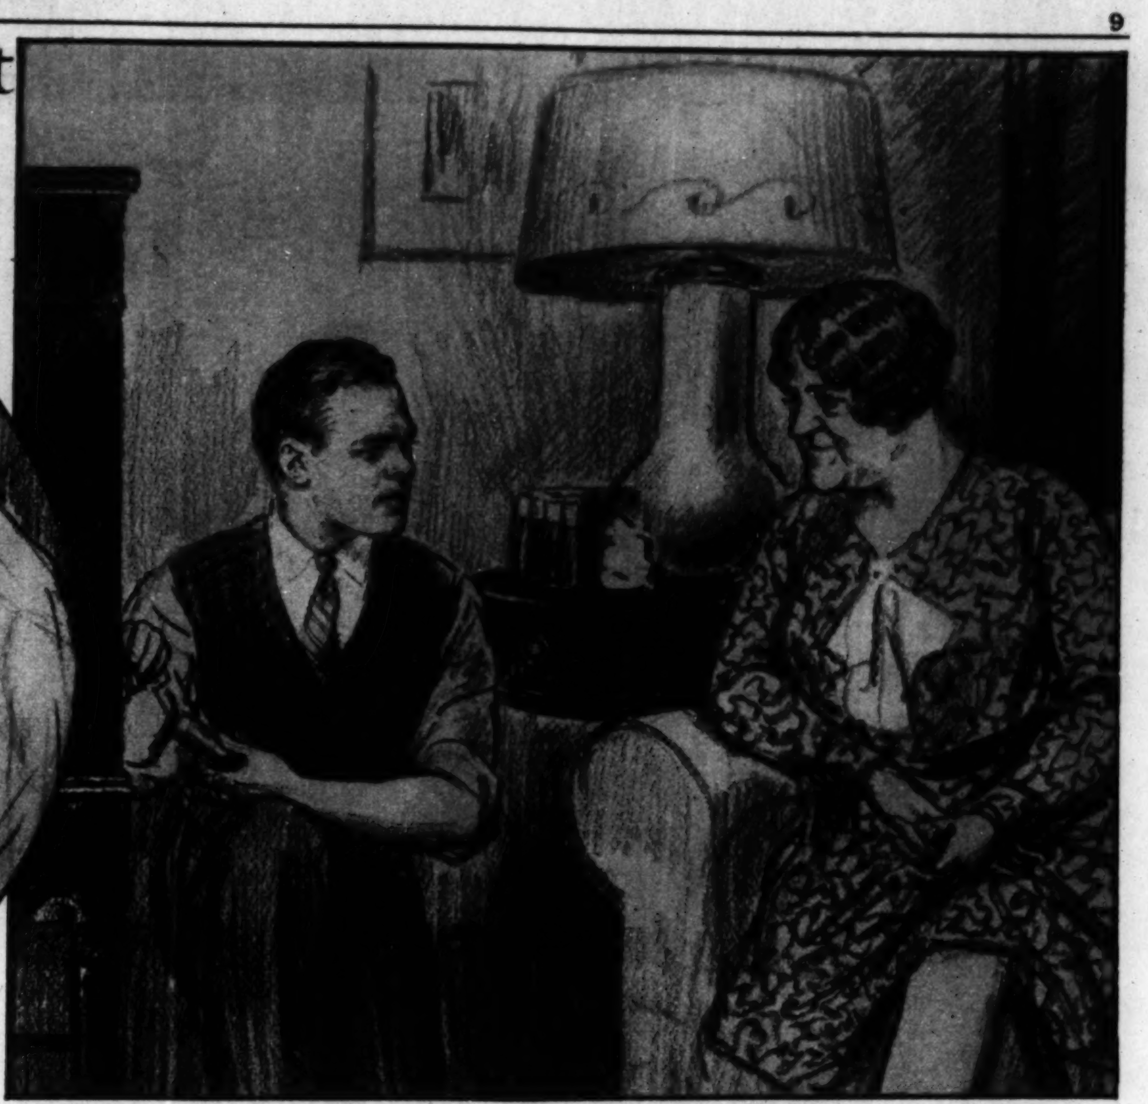
(Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.)



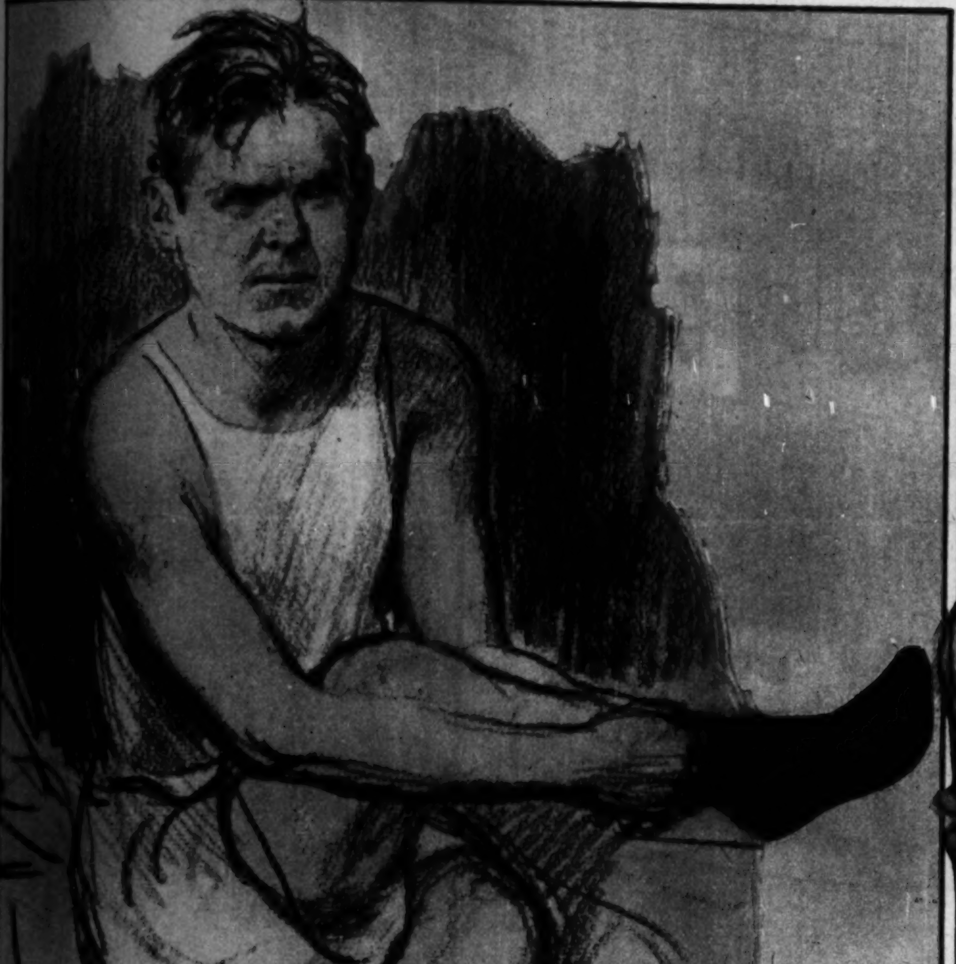
Bright and early, you'll see Janie and her Aunt Margaret starting for kindergarten. Janie doesn't think kindergarten is so hot, although there are some nice boys there. "There's one boy who's awfully sweet, Aunt Marge, he's going to Harvard in about ten years and he's promised me a big college banner!"



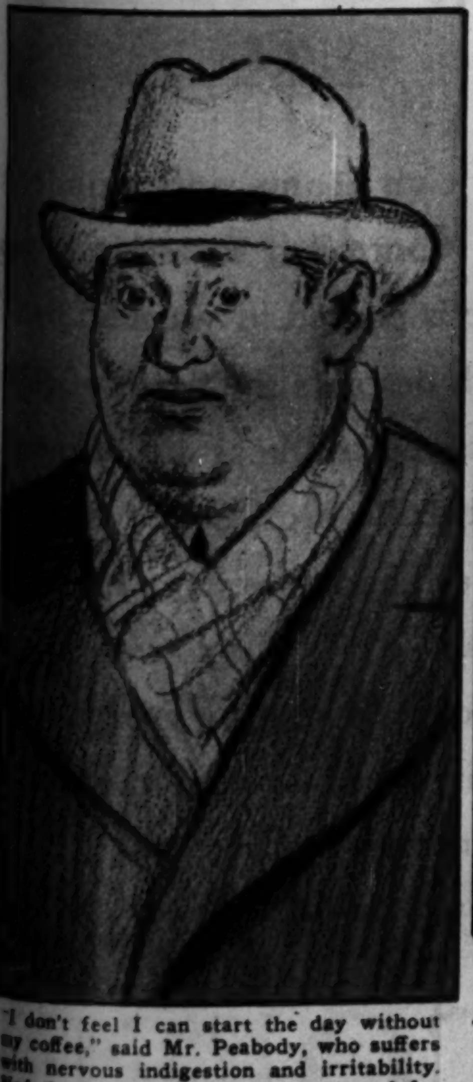
"Ted, you know you must take Mitzi out for a little walk—can't you slip on an overcoat and go as you are?" Starting the day happily for the family pet is an important rite among the apartment dwellers.



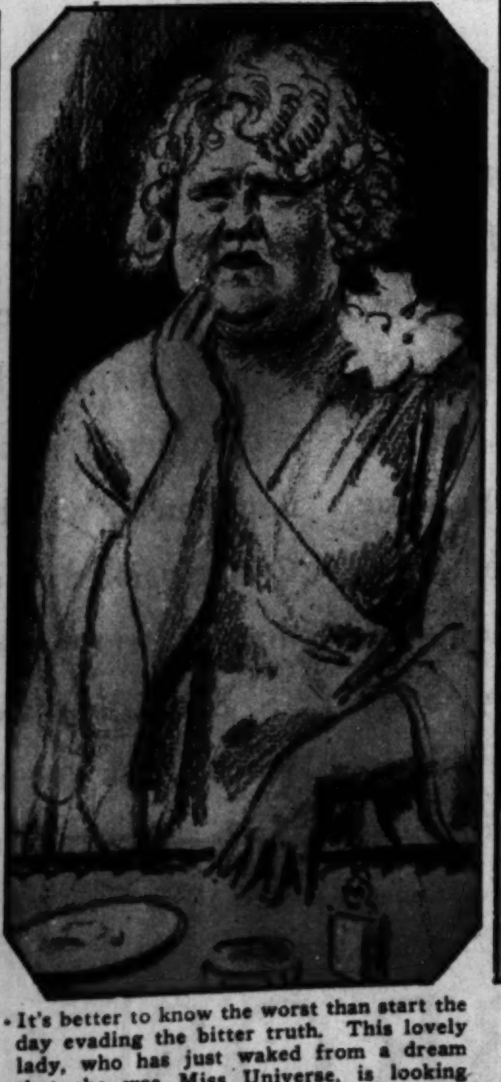
Some people, particularly those ladies of slightly romantic natures, like to start their day aright by having the radio tubes looked over under the personal supervision of a personable radio repair man. (Mrs. Florence Lovewell is asking Mr. Nulty of the Luxuria Radio shop all about his home life, who his favorite movie actress is, his favorite color, and one thing and another.)



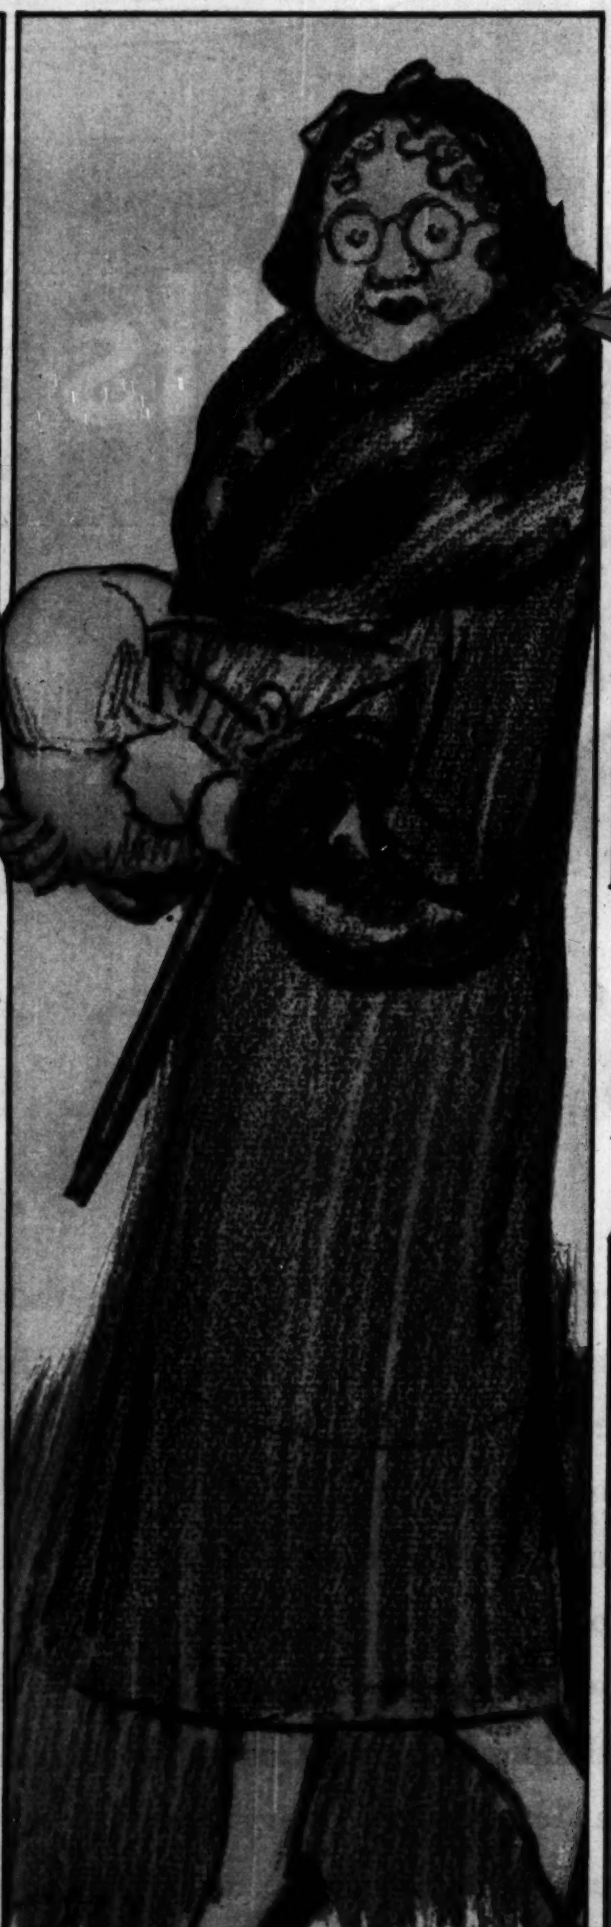
Harold is not at his best this morning, and a little more sleep, say ten or twelve hours of it, would just about make his day for him. He's deciding that he won't bother about his health exercises this morning, and then, too, he's thinking how lucky the unemployed are who don't have to get up in the A. M.



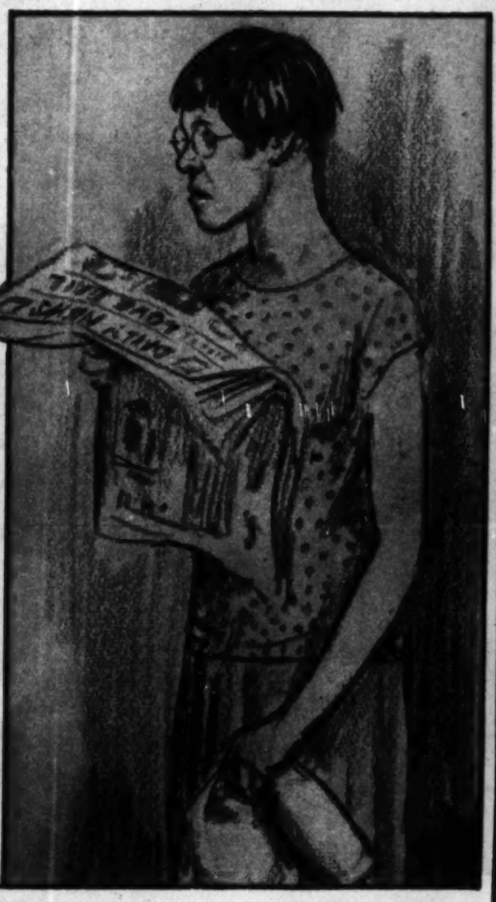
"I don't feel I can start the day without my coffee," said Mr. Peabody, who suffers with nervous indigestion and irritability. Had three more cups than were good for him this morning, as his office force will soon find.



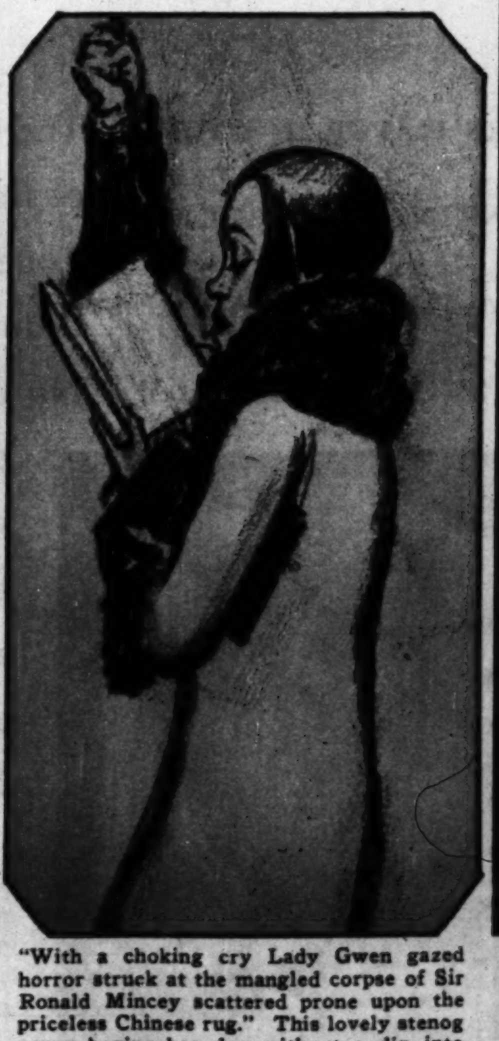
It's better to know the worst than start the day evading the bitter truth. This lovely lady, who has just waked from a dream that she was Miss Universe, is looking over her map in the mirror and deciding her cold cream is no good.



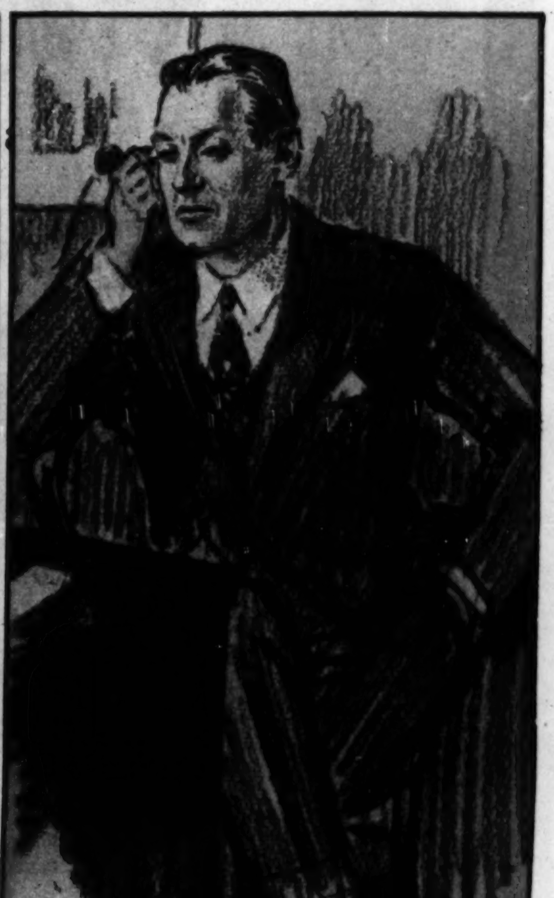
Eight A. M. finds Miss Alys Butterwell, the trained nurse, going to work with only the loveliest thoughts in her curly head about her cross patient. Alys is thinking how glad she is she's on day duty, and how nice it would be if they had kippers for breakfast. (That's her clean uniform in the bundle.)



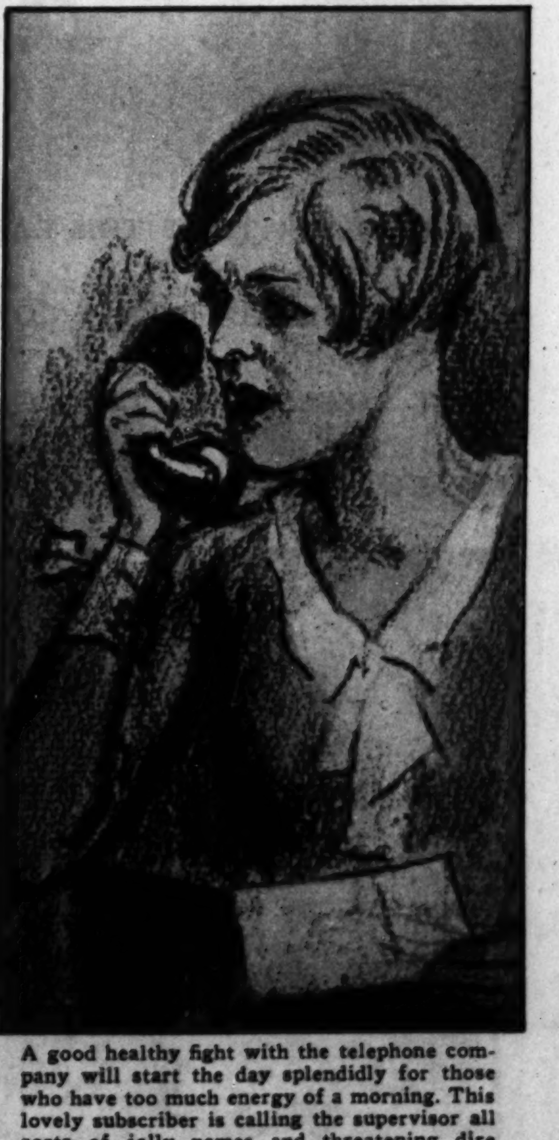
Some persons can't start the day without knowing what's going on in the great world. And this is the right idea, for being well informed is as important as being washed, or being noble and good to one's in-laws. Mrs. Grassmuck is bringing in the morning rolls, the grade B milk and the morning tabloid. "Sakes, alive," cries Mrs. G. "Here's an Englewood society matron accuses her husband of giving her clothes away to girl friends."



"With a choking cry Lady Gwen gazed horror struck at the mangled corpse of Sir Ronald Mincey scattered prone upon the priceless Chinese rug." This lovely stenog never begins her day without a dip into the realms of literature.



This business boy is trying to convince a revenue agent on the other end of the phone that he sent in a 1925 tax report. The revenue man is being pretty cross about it. This is a terrible way to start a business day.



A good healthy fight with the telephone company will start the day splendidly for those who have too much energy of a morning. This lovely subscriber is calling the supervisor all sorts of jolly names and threatening dire consequences because of a mistake on the bill.

No other coffee tastes like Hills Bros. Coffee because no other coffee is roasted the same way. Hills Bros., by their patented, continuous process—Controlled Roasting—are able to roast every berry evenly. Such exactness cannot be maintained by the ordinary method of roasting coffee in bulk.

You get all the rich aroma and wonderful flavor created by Controlled Roasting because Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum. By this process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is completely removed and kept out of the vacuum can in which Hills Bros. Coffee is packed. Housewives to Hold Twelfth Annual Meeting

Take "Home Manager" as Their New Title.

By Roberta Nangle.

LEST we forget that the good old business of housekeeping is holding its own with the newer and more publicized activities of women, the Chicago Housewives league reminds us that its twelfth annual all-day conference is to take place this week. This annual pow-wow, which has been immensely successful in other years, is to be held on Wednesday at 11 o'clock at the Woman's City club under the joint auspices of the Housewives league, which has a city-wide membership, and the foods and markets committee of the Woman's City club.

The scientific and economic knowledge applied to the maintenance of a home nowadays has become so widespread that the old terms, "housekeeping" and "housekeeper," are no longer considered descriptive of a housewife and her job. "Homemaking" and "home manager" are favored by the woman who has a proper comprehension of her status as the guiding influence of a family as well as the keeper of the larder.

"Standards in Household Buying" is to be the topic of Wednesday's conference, and both the United States bureau of standards and the American Home Economics association are coöperating with the league in supplying information on the subject to Chicago housewives.

Help for Budget Makers.

Leaders in home economics and governmental experts will tell of the most recent findings for standardized buying. Through this conference and through its work all the year round the league will spread enlightenment on new developments which will enable the individual homemaker to budget her purchasing just as efficiently as do the managers of large business concerns.

According to Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, chairman of the foods and markets committee and president of the Chicago Housewives league, actual knowledge of quantity and quality is replacing haphazard methods of buying.

"No longer," says Mrs. Fribley, "is the intelligent home manager content to buy the first article she sees without regard to quality or price. We know enough about production and supply and demand to make intelligent as well as thrifty purchases. We are departing from the apprentice system in the home whereby workers learned from others more experienced; we demand accuracy in information before we purchase just as we have learned to demand it in cooking.

Today's Changing Standards.

"Perhaps housewives of former days thought there was 'luck' in cookery. Today we know it is an exact science. The same holds true in buying. This is the first time that we have had an opportunity here in Chicago to learn first hand of the strides which the United States bureau of standards has made in smoothing the pathway of the homemaker. Manufacturers are coöperating with them in a most satisfactory manner."

The speakers at the conference on Wednesday include Mrs. Murry Nelson, president of the Woman's City club, who will make an introductory address; Miss Frances Swain, president of the American Home Economics association, whose talk is titled "The Homemaker's Problem"; Miss Attie Souders of the same association, who is to discuss "Consumer-Buyer's Problems," and Miss Ruth Atwater of Washington, D. C., who will tell of "The New Cannery Law as It Affects Housewives."

Mrs. Fribley will preside at both morning and afternoon sessions. As is customary, a period of discussion will close the afternoon program.

(Further news of club activities will be found in the Metropolitan section.)

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE executive committee had finished a conference on some club details at the treasurer's home and the members were having tea and talk.

"Just think, they're beginning to worry already about who's to be our next president, and the club year only half gone," remarked the recording secretary. "I heard yesterday that Mrs. Goodline had decided to be it."

"She's decided the same thing several times before, but that's as far as it's gone," interposed the corresponding secretary. "She hasn't a ghost of a chance."

"I do hope the club will find the right woman, one who will carry on the good things we and our predecessors have started," offered the president. "We must be very careful in our selection."

"I've been worried a bit about my successor, too," declared the second vice president, who was also the chairman of ways and means. "Mary Denner's friends are dropping subtle remarks about what a fine woman she would be for the job."

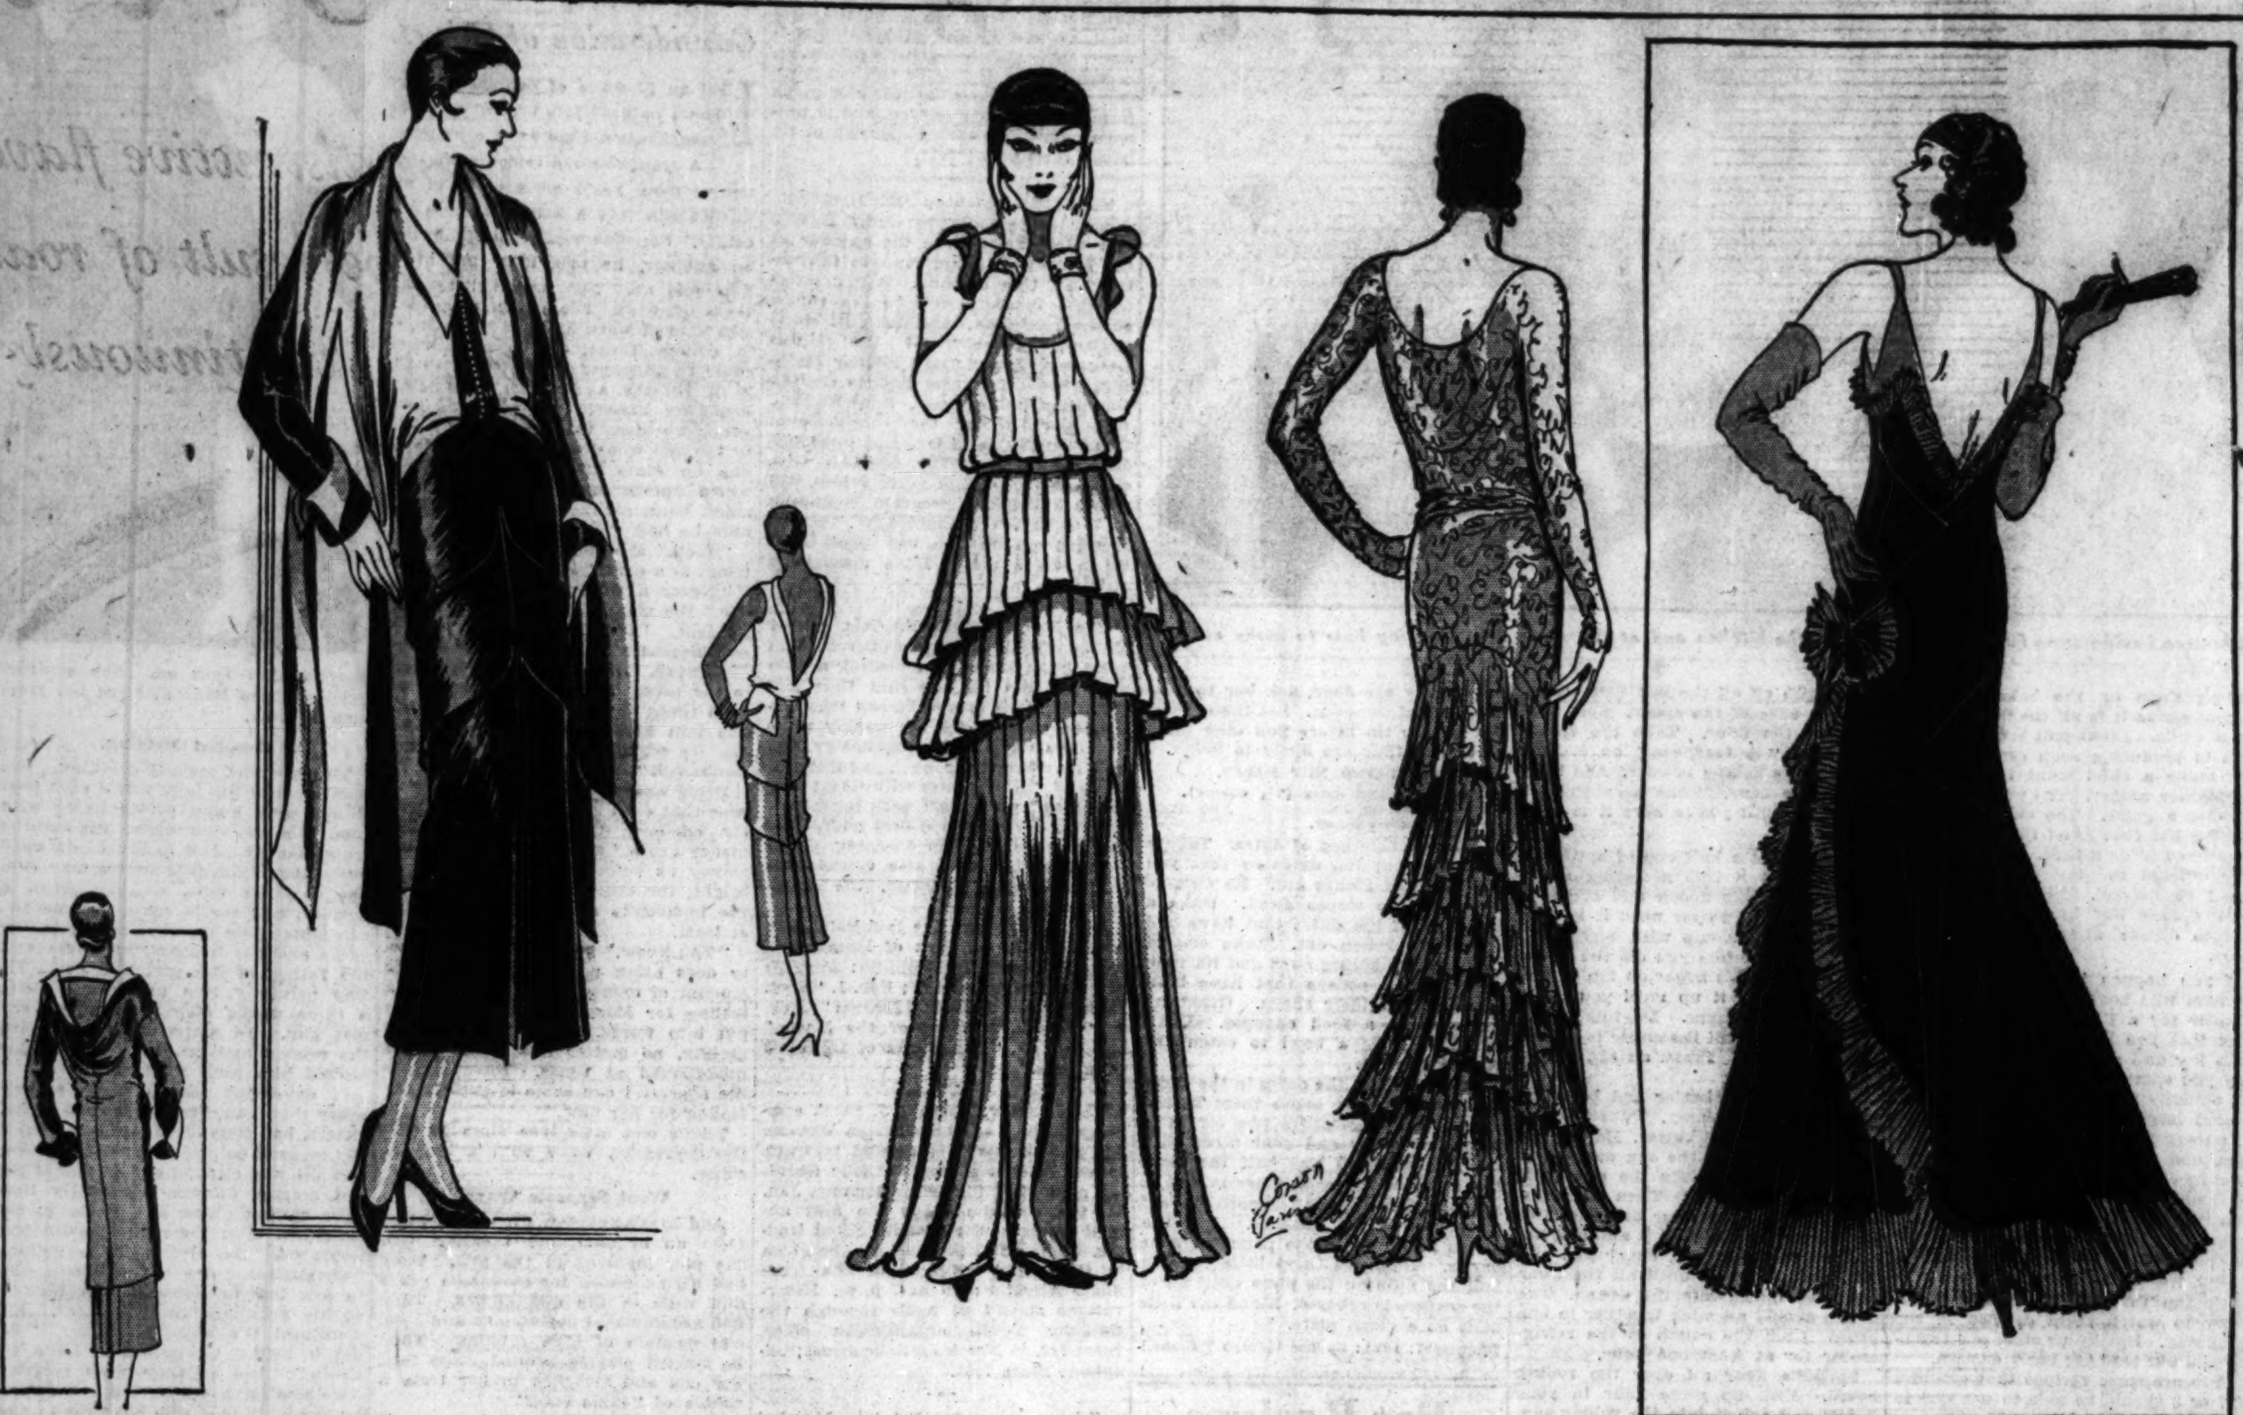
"Mary would make a splendid art chairman, or a music chairman," vouchsafed the treasurer, "and we all know how wonderful she is when it comes to decorating a luncheon or a tea-table, but I've heard her say, herself, that she has no more sense of finance than a ten year old. What would she do about ways and means?"

"Our system of having only half our officers go out each year makes it much easier for the incomers," pointed out the corresponding secretary, "and much better for the club. I remember when all our officers were elected each year and sometimes every last one of them would be new to her job!"

"I suppose it's the natural thing for us to worry about our successors," said the recording secretary, "but somehow, I can't. I guess I've been at the club business longer than the rest of you. Anyway, I've seen officers come and officers go, and sometimes the ones we thought would be the best weren't so good, and those of whom we had doubts turned out finely."

"But we must be careful," insisted the president.

EVENING GOWNS FOR SOUTHERN WEAR



The newest thing in evening fashions is this Patou tailored ensemble in black and white supple satin, shown at the extreme left. Both three-quarters coat and white satin blouse are high necked in front and low in back.

Lelong adds two doublet-peplums to this green triple-georgette evening frock, sketched second, and when the waist-length jacket is donned, the effect is that of the page boy brought up to date.

Third, Worth features the long sleeved lace evening gown, like this, for southern wear. It's moss green in color, and the ruffles at the back of the skirt are an interesting detail.

Last, darkest brown faille silk is made delicate and feminine in this Lelong evening gown by the addition of fluted tulle ruffles of the same tone.

Oak Park Pastor Sees Year of Progress Ahead for Churches

By Joseph Ward II.

(Further church news will be found in the Metropolitan Section.)

"JANUS," and the new year dawns upon the churches and other religious organizations with much promise, according to a statement issued last week by the Chicago church federation through its commission on world friendship. Dr. Ernest Bourner Allen, chairman, reviewed some of the major spiritual achievements of the last year and expressed the belief that still greater progress lies ahead during 1931. Dr. Allen is pastor of the historic Pilgrim Congregational church, Oak Park.

DR. E. B. ALLEN.

"Much advancement has been made during 1930 toward world peace," said the west side pastor. "The people of all nations, brought face to face with an unparalleled business depression, realize that their energies should be turned toward working for the prosperity and happiness of all, rather than conjuring up grievances and preparing for strife. In spite of the hardships of the depression it has had a sobering, ameliorating effect internationally."

Dr. Allen declared that in the face of numerous war alarms and other agitations, the governments are working for amity with greater zeal than ever before in history. This, he said, is bound to bring greater security for the cause of business.

Much to Be Thankful For.

"Locally Chicago has much to be thankful for and much to expect in the future. Economically it may have been an off year," admitted Dr. Allen, "but morally and religiously, 1930 was a time of a 'great awakening.' The city has been aroused as never before to graft and corruption, and is determined that there shall be a thorough and permanent cleanup. What has been well started during 1930 will be carried far forward during 1931, we are confident.

"The churches have played an effective part in this arousement. City-wide observance of the day of prayer before election, scores of civic massmeetings more than a year ago, and the continued agitation through the churches for better government have borne fruit. The demand has spread throughout Chicago for a wiping out of alliances of crime and graft with politics and it bears all the evidence of being a real crusade, rather than a passing flurry."

Dr. Allen further stated that if 1931 really sees a great civic and moral cleanup, it will be one of the greatest achievements in the history of Chicago. It will prepare the way as nothing else possibly can for the coming of scores of millions of visitors to the World's Fair in 1933.

Race Relationships.

"Notable advancement is anticipated during the coming year in the field of race relationships in Chicago," declared the Oak Park pastor. "Splendid achievement has already been registered—sufficient, in fact, to attract the attention of the entire nation. The moral crusade is producing a quickened spiritual life which should mean greater evangelistic effort, increased religious interest and church membership. In the field of inter-denominational relationship there is greater understanding than ever before, which augurs for growing coöperation and a finer community service."

Dr. Allen intimated that greater emphasis should be placed on the important part played by the churches in the unemployment situation. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent for relief work. Active coöperation with the governor's commission and the creating of jobs for many thousands of unemployed men and women has been and will continue to be the work of the church.

"We believe there is a returning consciousness of the indispensable service of the churches to the city and surrounding communities in every phase of their life," concluded Dr. Allen. "This consciousness registers

WE'RE positively panting—no facetious references to today's title, please—over the number of captions for this colm a suddenly helpful public has loosed the last few days. Perhaps up to last Sunday we really hadn't made it quite clear that we welcomed assistance in picking a name for these paragraphs. Anyway, the mail blew up a perfect storm of correspondence, in the face of which we find ourselves drifting away on a sea of indecision. Plagiarism forbids us to steal Harvey T. Woodruff's stuff, but perhaps he wouldn't mind if we bleated "Halp! Halp!" just this once.

Of course, it wasn't the Palm Beach trend, but the brevity of units herein, that suggested today's title to the energetic little Lake Forest matron who signs herself "Sister of Mme. X and Mother of Mlle. X." As such she is widely known to many Chicagoans. Her other entries include "Chic-lets," "Katheteria" (we take a bow), and "Here's How!"

From Logansport Helen Bott submits "Olio," which has us guessing. Isnt' that the start of a good Swiss yodel? Dorothy Pulse of Waukegan thinks our department is so "kindling and warming" (yes, she did) that perhaps "Sundaz-ers" or "Sun-dry Remarks" might fit. Not too dry, though? Mrs. Herman N. Bundesen favors "Cryptograms." Good! Rachel Harris of Sullivan, Ind., sends "Lake Breezes" and others. Ooh, looky! A Cleveland entry—Bertha K. Warren, with "Believe Me." Fred Illeman of Clinton, Ia., forwards "Upson Downs." (Clevah.) Mrs. W. W. Frank of Indianapolis, a homesick Chicagoan, wants "City Chatter." Grab a look at this postmark—Teutopolis, Ill. George P. Telford lives there and likes "Jest Cracking."

Then there's Mrs. J. A. Blomquist of De Kalb, Ill., who submits "Did You Hear?" and "Chatterbox." Gladys Amos of Bucyrus, O. (hello, there), thought up "In the Know."

Miss 1931 Is Both Demure and Feminine; Costumes Alluring

By Antoinette Donnelly.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—This is THE year, girls! As a gay young blade responded, when pressed to tell why he was not getting married: "Not this year, Sister! How could I? Look at 'em! One lovelier than the other! I want 'em all! No, ma'm, I'll have to wait till the styles change before I can make up my mind!"

Watching the "sidewalk show" on a recent festal opening night, the bachelor's predicament is readily understood. There steps on to curb from motor car a ravishing blonde, exquisitely tall, in white from tip to toe except, perhaps, for a floral token of the esteem in which she is held by some one, pinned to her ermined shoulder.

Your breath is hardly recovered when a gorgeous brunette is at her heels, perhaps done up in that startling beautiful blue some of them adopt this season. On her heels again a sun-kissed blonde or strawberry tinted (as you will), or a maid with a halo of burnished gold hurries lobbyward, looking for all the world like the golden princess of fairy book fame.

Yeah, it is a great year for the girls, blonde, brunette, red, raven, ash, or what are you? There hasn't been a year like it for many a harvest moon!

Don't wait till the tide goes out now whatever you do! You never can tell about next year's fashions! They may not be half so devastating. Anyway, your day to be one hundred per cent girl best is right here and now, and how!

The Open Season.

Put on all the trappings and go, Lovely Girl, for all you're worth. It's the big game season for DEARS. So be one, if you want to be rolled off in the new Pumpkin Eight with your 'ansum Prince.

You do not have to have a motor to pull up in for a theater first night. You don't even have to attend a first night, circumstances not permitting. You can turn all of your one hundred per cent feminine ammunition on for the boy who has no more than subway fare and the price of a gallery seat, but prospects. You'll lose nothing for the investment.

There's a line in a play running on Broadway at the moment that goes something like this: "You can always tell when a girl falls in love by her attempts at a new hair arrangement." Maybe that is the first thing you'd better look into. Perhaps, with a new coiffure, if you haven't already fallen in love, you may. Anyway, if your coiffure isn't satisfactorily becoming, look over the latest styles in hairdressing and go at rearranging the locks. Think of them, for dress-up occasions anyway, in relation to the long skirt and the pinched in waistline.

Don't try to make a last year's hairdress do with a this year's frock. You may only have to pull out a wisp of hair over the ear to effect a change. You may, on the other hand, want to try a ringlet or two or, hair long enough, you may want to pin your small knob a bit higher up and into the curve of the neck at the back to give a better head and neck line.

Maybe your ears can come out of hiding. Try a number of things with your head, outside and in. Get some of the better fashion magazines and look over the coiffures that are shown with the dress illustrations. You may gather a good hint thus. Keep your eyes open for first hand observation tips on what can be done with a former but now repellant boyish coiffure. The hair in the scheme of the 1931 Girl Beautiful is awfully 'portant, as a small eight year old close to me calls everything, from her lost pencil to her toothbrush.

Finishing Touches.

I don't think it is necessary in this sermon to talk about the hygienic details that are now considered imperative under any circumstances, such as hair and complexion care and the items that are spoken about in tones of hushed embarrassment and warned about as death to popularity, in advertisements. It goes without saying that the girl, first of all, is one hundred per cent sweetness, cleanliness, and neatness. It's more of the "outer" things I talk today. The things that, added to what you already have, make you lovelier still.

There's the clever scent of perfume that may set the boy to dreaming of a rose trellised cottage, if boys dream of cottages any more. If not of them of the breakfast table for two. Get acquainted with the becomingness and the lure of certain scents for young

Personal Chic of Wearer Seen in Fashions

Women Buy Costumes to Fit Personality.

Paris Snapshots

Two piece frocks with waist of one color and skirt of another are forecast to replace the one piece, one color dress in the spring.

New greens seen in the south are Maggy Rouff's jade, Chanel's dark olive and Lelong's pistache. Bonbon pink is also important.

Organdy and batiste blouses in pastel colors such as turquoise, pink, jade, and yellow are the latest Paris detail for the very smart tailored suit.

Printed silks are in again for southern and spring wear, but they are tailored prints and many of them copy their designs from woolens.

Silk organdy is a material that is being shown in Paris for first spring evening frocks.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Style aristocracy is going the way of all modern life. The best chic is self made, and the real style aristocrats are those ladies who make fashion their own. At Palm Beach, Cairo, and Cannes striking examples of self made chic from Paris-made fashions are seen all around.

The new note supplied by tailormade evening ensembles from Patou's midseason collection looks absolutely right, even to the most critical eye, and the high waisted, shirred satin quaintness of Molyneux frocks looks just as good, because it is worn rightly. One evening coat trails its furred hem along the polished floor of the Casino and another barely reaches to the normal waist line. A third is knee length and most simple. All are worn by women of distinction and self-endowed with Parisian chic.

Chanel's white lace dance dresses are Paris undiluted because they are worn by women who look best in lace, and Lelong's stiff ribbed silk evening frocks in darkest brown, black, and green with fluted tulle borders are thrilling southern evening fashions for the slim, sophisticated modern. There's a world of difference between these two fashions, and that is just the point of chic today—it must be personal, different.

Some women are wearing long sleeves in their evening frocks à la Worth. Others are wearing long gloves or glove sleeves that slip off like gloves (from Martial et Armand). Others are wearing no sleeves at all, and the barest jeweled lines for shoulder straps. It all depends on whether the sleeve, or sleevelessness, can be made your own or not.

Quaintness Is Out.

The quaint, picturesque element in Paris styles gets scant attention at southern resorts this season. It doesn't go with self-made chic generally, as there are few quaint or picturesque females in this modern world of ours. There are, however, a few, and for these the quaint is made to order, but the modern girl must be dead certain that she has such a personality or the style will not become her own and will, therefore, not be chic.

Evening materials that lend themselves best to personality chic this season are the new triple georgette, lace, supple satin, stiff ribbed silk, and starched chiffon. Beaded evening frocks are few and far between, and Parisiennes do not care for lamé, generally.

Evening colors that are worn under southern stars and electric lights are dark as dark or light as light. Black is adaptable to many types, and so is white. Then there are off-blacks and off-whites to make the wearing of these extremes universal. In the off-blacks, crow blue, brown, and green predominate. Ivory, flesh, and the palest tint of blue are just-off-white shades that are being worn at the southern resort. It is natural that green, in springy tones, should crop up in the first spring fashions, and strawberry and raspberry reds suggest the vernal season also.

Silhouette Is Multiple.

The evening silhouette is multiple. It varies from the sheath gown, flared at or just above the knees, to the brief bloused waist and full shirred skirt. The lady chooses her silhouette according to her figure and personality and where she is going to wear the dress. The length of the evening skirt is gauged by the same measure—the measure of fitness for figure and occasion. From Patou's daytime length tailored evening ensembles to Callot's trailing sheath frocks, all lengths are fashionable when they're suitable. If you are to achieve chic it must be self made, because the burden of choosing correctly is on your own head.

Evening accessories do a great deal to make the ensemble chic, this season. A new and charming note is supplied by emerald green accessories with black or white, or their off tones. An emerald necklace with emerald green gloves, or gloves in this shade with a green jeweled belt and no necklace at all, are worn by some of the smartest women. Garnet or ruby red jewels and gloves are just as chic and coral details are also worn.

In each case the accessories contrast to the costume. Flowers that look lifelike are much worn at the front of the corsage, but are never adopted by tailored women. A flower may be worn in the hair, and many women are wearing evening hats that match either accessories or frock in color. Reboux's pearl filets worn with pearl necklace, or bracelets, or both, are smart southern accessories.

Colored scarfs and belts worn with white or black evening frocks, and often matched by slippers are favorite evening accessories. The new tailored evening ensemble is usually worn without jewels, or with simple bracelets at most.

The Tailored Ensemble.

The Patou ensemble shown in the first sketch today is the latest thing for informal evening—the tailored ensemble. It is made of supple satin in black and white. The blouse is white satin and the skirt and coat are black. Patou calls it "diner au cabaret," and suggests that for dining in the public eye we wear our skirts at

The Tribune Cook Book

By Meta Given

Give the Children a Chance to Play in the Kitchen; Their Pleasure Lightens Mothers' Tasks.

Children having some fun and excitement in the kitchen and at the same time learning how to make cookies.

"AS the twig is bent so it grows" applies to children as well as to trees. The unspoiled healthy child is a sturdy twig, throbbing with life and full of energy, ready to yield not only to every external but also to every internal force. Whatever stimulates him physically stimulates him mentally and both his mind and body are coördinated by emotional qualities inherent within him. And this spontaneity is the child's peculiar charm. A repressed inactive child is nothing more than a vegetable. His life is fatiguing, monotonous and insipid. What he naturally craves is excitement. He thrives in an environment that stimulates and he is pleased and interested in anything in which activity results. In other words, he is happy so long as he is kept busy.

Which leads to the question, "At what age does the child cease to be happy when he is busy?" Many boys and girls do not like to wash dishes and do the general household chores. There is surely enough activity in these tasks to keep the child happy. My answer to this question is that the child's nature doesn't undergo a radical change. The reason he doesn't like kitchen work is that he has not had any pleasant activities in the kitchen that would enable him to form habits that would make cleaning and cooking enjoyable tasks.

Habits play a decisive rôle in the weal and woe of youngsters. Fixing effective habits, those into which the occupation of succeeding years may fit without profound changes in the habits themselves is, of course, the reason for intelligent child training. If boys and girls are to get ready to accomplish anything there must be a reasonable division of their time for work and fun.

Privilege Often Denied.

Every boy and girl should have the privilege of playing cook as well as host and hostess in the kitchen. But a lot of children are not given this opportunity. What usually happens is that no attention is given to this question of kitchen work until the age is reached when the mother feels she needs help in dish washing and in the cooking and serving of meals. Then she tries to force an immediate change in her young son's or daughter's habits, and the result is an upheaval in the home. The outcome usually is that mother, herself, has to do all the work. Then she gives talks about the changes that have come over young people in these days. Creating excuses is her defense mechanism.

Habits are not like long trousers or evening gowns, to be put on when boys and girls reach a certain age. They are matters of growth and development. About the only distinction the young child, either boy or girl, makes between play and work is enjoyment. What he enjoys is play and what he does not like is work. And the child will love to cook and do any kitchen task when it is made play.

The toy sets of kitchen utensils which many little girls get for Christmas gifts are a most excellent means of teaching the child that kitchen activities are really pleasant. The utensils in these sets should be large enough to be used in cooking. Then if the child is given some simple recipes written so as to appeal to the childish mind there is just as much fun in cooking when not continued too long, as there is in any other sort of a game. It goes without saying, however, that if the game is to be successful the mother must enjoy it as much as the children. And here is where much of the trouble begins. Many mothers never learn to enjoy cooking a meal, cleaning up the house, doing the dishes, and leaving everything in order themselves and consequently they cannot teach their children that pleasure.

Things to Be Remembered.

There are several things to be remembered in developing the habit of work about the kitchen. First no game, whether it be dishwashing or cooking, should be continued too long. Secondly, the game should not be forced. Suggestion has the best influence and suggestion means planning to produce a certain effect. When glassware is being washed to produce a sparkle, there is pleasure in that achievement. If star shaped cookies are wanted for your children's party and your little boy or girl once learns the trick of cutting them and getting them on the baking tin in perfect shape it is all the fun wanted for a while. Intelligent training consists in producing such conditions as will make a child want to do what the mother wishes. The problem then becomes a game. The children want nothing but fun. And they refuse to be ordered to do a task. If they were ever ordered to play ball the game would be hateful. This is not only child nature but human nature as well to dislike what one is ordered to do.

If you happen to be one of those mothers who bought a set of cooking utensils for a little daughter, let us hope that you bought some that will train her and also her brother in the way you want them to go—some that are actually big enough to work with, a bowl large enough to mix muffins in, an egg beater that will really beat eggs, and so on down the list. Show them how to use each utensil and then let them do their own work and their own thinking. Let them make cookies and pastry, bake cup custards and make cocoa and cook vegetables, too, if they wish.

It's fun to teach children and it's a joy to watch them develop in the right way. But let us start our teaching and our training early enough.

Here are some recipes that children of 7 or 8 should be able to use and to produce food that they will enjoy.

SUGAR COOKIES.

1½ cups flour.
¼ teaspoonful salt.
½ teaspoonful baking powder.
½ teaspoonful vanilla.
¼ cup shortening.
1 cup sugar.
1 egg.

Sift some flour through a sifter into a bowl. Then very carefully lift out the flour with a tablespoon and place it just as carefully into a measured cup. Fill up the cup. Take a spatula and slide the edge across the rim of the cup so that the flour in the cup will be level with the rim of the cup. Empty this flour into a clean bowl. Carefully fill the measuring cup half full of the sifted flour and add this to the first cup.

Take a small measuring spoon that says "¼ teaspoon" on it and fill it up with salt. Take the spatula and again push off all the salt that comes over the edge of the spoon. Spill this salt into the flour. Take the spoon that says "½ teaspoon" on it and measure the baking powder. Add this, too, to the flour. Take a spoon and stir it up until you're sure it is well mixed.

Measure out a half cup of butter or lard and put it into a mixing bowl. Take the mixing spoon and stir and smooth out the butter until it is nice and soft. Fill a cup with sugar and level it off just like you did the flour. Pour some of this sugar on top of the butter and mix it up until you can't see any more sugar. Do this again and again until all the sugar is mixed with the butter. Break an egg into a small bowl.

Take your egg beater and beat the egg until it gets foamy. Pour the egg over the sugar and butter. Be sure to scrape as much of the egg out of the bowl as you can. Mix the egg with the sugar and flour. Then take the bowl that has the flour and salt and baking powder mixed in it and add the mixture to the butter, sugar and egg mixture. Stir this until all the flour has been mixed into the dough. The dough should all stick together in one piece. Chill the dough in the refrigerator for at least one hour.

Sprinkle flour all over the rolling board. Pick up some flour in your hands and rub it into the rolling pin. Cut off a lump of the dough. Put it on the board and roll it out with the rolling pin until it is nice and thin. If the dough sticks to the board or the rolling pin at any time put some more flour on it so that it won't stick. Now, take any kind of cookie cutter you like, dip it into the flour and then cut out the cookies. Pick up the cut out pieces on a spatula or a little pancake turner and put them on a pan that has been covered with a thin layer of fat. Sprinkle a little sugar on top of the cookies. Or else put a raisin or a nut in the middle and then sprinkle with sugar. Use up all the dough for the cookies. The scraps left after the cookies are cut should be pressed together and used as the fresh dough is.

Have your mother put these cookies into a hot oven [400 deg. F.] to bake. When they are done, ask her to take them out of the oven. Let the cookies cool on the tin before you take them off or else they are likely to break.

DATE AND NUT BALLS.

1 package pitted dates [7¼ ounces].
1 cup pecan meats.
2 tablespoonfuls honey.

Take a whole box of dates. Take a knife and cut the dates so that you can take the stones out. Be sure to throw all the stones away. Make a little pile of the dates that have had the stones taken out. Take one of mother's measuring cups and fill it to the top with pecans that have been taken out of their shells. Grind up the nuts in a food chopper. Don't forget to have a bowl to catch the ground up nuts.

Then grind up the dates in the same food chopper and catch them in the bowl of nuts. Measure two big table spoons of honey and pour these onto the ground dates and half the nuts. Mix all these things together as well as you can. Then take a teaspoon and cut off pieces of the mixture. Roll the pieces into balls in the palms of your hands. Then roll these little balls in half the nuts on the plate until all of the surface is covered. Stand the little balls on a clean plate.

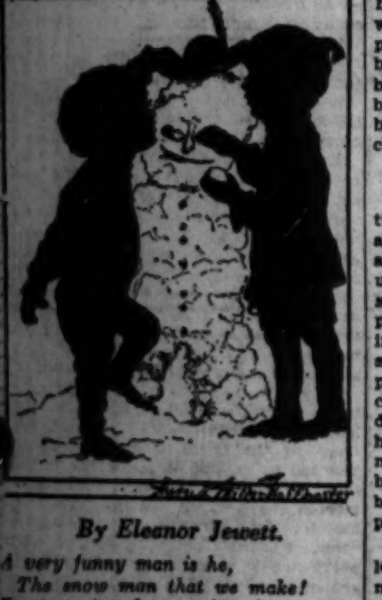
Snow Man



By Eleanor Jewett.

A very funny man is he,
The snow man that we make!
For eyes two lumps of coal we try,
For mouth, a stick we take.

His nose we model out of snow—
O, we have lots of fun!
And then we put a hat upon
Our man, when he is done.

Sometimes we make a fort from all
The snow inside our yard;
The snow man is the hostile foe,
We fight him pretty hard.

But every time that he breaks down
We know what we can do—
We roll some more big snowballs
And we build our man up new.

Bridge by Radio

Four bridge stars of the first magnitude played an extremely interesting hand as the seventh of Milton C. Work's radio broadcasts, heard from station W-G-N last Tuesday. Mrs. Guy U. Purdy, Omaha, Neb., south; John T. Slade, Boston, Mass., west; Mrs. Warren L. Geffcken, Jacksonville, Fla., north; and Mrs. C. E. Traver, Salt Lake City, Utah, east, held the following cards:

MRS. GEFFCKEN.
S.—J, 10, 8.
H.—8, 6, 2.
D.—5, 4, 2.
C.—Q, J, 9, 7.

MR. SLADE.
S.—A, K, Q, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2.
H.—None.
D.—9, 7.
C.—8, 4, 3.

W. E.
S.

MRS. TRAVER.
S.—9, 7.
H.—10, 5, 4.
D.—K, J, 8, 6.
C.—10, 6, 5, 2.

MRS. PURDY.
S.—None.
H.—A, K, Q, J, 9, 7, 3.
D.—A, Q, 10, 3.
C.—A, K.

Mrs. Purdy, south, with a hand on which she planned to bid up to five hearts, opened with one heart rather than a preëmptive four, as she felt that if she bid her hearts up gradually in case spades were bid against her, she might be doubled, which would create the opportunity for a profitable redouble. Mr. Slade, west, bid one spade. He also would have been justified in making a preëmptive bid; but did not do so as preëmptive bids made after opponents have declared usually do not preëmpt.

North and East Pass.

North and east passed; south said two hearts; west two spades. North and east continued to pass, and south and west continued raising their suits until the bid stood at four hearts by south; which west passed. North passed, but Mrs. Traver, east, realizing that Mr. Slade, west, had a very strong spade suit and a hand that probably could take eight tricks, and confident also that he would have doubled the four heart bid had he held the defensive strength necessary, made a deliberate game-saving overbid of four spades. Mrs. Purdy, south, bid five hearts, which the other three players passed.

Mr. Slade, west, opened the play by leading the king of spades. The north hand went down for dummy, and declarer played from it the 8 of spades. East followed with the 9 [the start of a high low signal to partner, indicating ability to ruff the third lead of the suit], and Mrs. Purdy, the declarer, ruffed with the 9 of hearts.

Declarer then led the ace of hearts, expecting that the three adverse trumps would be divided 2-1. She planned to lead two trumps, then the ace and king of clubs, after which she intended to put dummy in with a trump to lead the queen, jack of clubs. This would give her discards of two losing diamonds from the closed hand, and leave her in position to try the diamond finesse. But when west played the deuce of spades on the first heart lead, declarer realized her plan would not work out. To this trick dummy played the deuce of hearts; east the 4.

Makes Small Slam.

Abandoning her first plan of play, declarer, to tricks three and four, led the ace and king of clubs, all following with their two lowest clubs. To trick five declarer led the trey of hearts; west played the trey of spades; dummy the 6 of hearts, and east the 10.

Mrs. Traver, east, was then in a quandary as to her lead. Realizing that a spade would not be effective, she led the 8 of diamonds, hoping that her partner might hold the ace or queen. If south held both these cards, the boldness of the lead might induce her to refuse the queen finesse. But Mrs. Purdy, seeing her contract assured regardless of the location of the diamond king, and wishing to make a small slam, played the queen. West played the 7, and the deuce was played from dummy.

Declarer then led the 7 of hearts from the closed hand; west discarded the 4 of spades; dummy, north, won with the 8 of hearts, and east played the 5, her last trump. Declarer then led the good queen and jack of clubs from dummy, discarding the trey and 10 of diamonds from closed hand; after which she spread her hand, claiming the remainder of the tricks, which adversaries conceded. She scored 48 trick points; 80 for the four honors in one hand; 50 for the small slam.

Tuesday's Hand

The eighth of the season's Bridge by Radio Games will be broadcast over station W-G-N on Tuesday at 3:30 p. m., with four outstanding players participating. Mrs. Georgene B. Pet Recipes

Do you have a favorite recipe that you'd like to pass on to others to enjoy? Address it to "Pet Recipes," Chicago Tribune, and it will be published.

Right Side Up Cake.

4 or 5 tart apples, pared, cored, and sliced fine
1 cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
1 cup sirup or honey
½ tsp. cinnamon or nutmeg
1 cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup sweet milk
2 cups flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. flavoring

Combine water, sugar, honey, and cinnamon and allow to come to boil. add sliced apples and cook slowly until apples become tender. Meantime, cream together one cup of sugar and the butter; add the well beaten egg, beating until mixture is light and smooth. Sift flour and baking powder together and sift a little at a time alternately with the milk into the creamed mixture. Beat vigorously until mixture is light and smooth. Add flavoring.

Pour apples into deep, oblong or square pan; pour cake mixture over the top, allowing a little space all around the sides for escaping steam. Set immediately in moderately hot oven [about 350 degrees F.] and bake about 20 to 25 minutes—until cake is light and golden brown.

Serve either hot or cold by cutting into squares and lifting from pan with a pie knife. Sweet cream, plain or whipped, may be added if desired. Other fruits may be substituted for the apples—pineapple, peaches, berries, etc., varying the amount of sugar according to fruit used, and lessening the amount if canned fruits are used.

I. D.

Icebox Pudding.

2 cups slightly sweetened applesauce
12 marshmallows, cut fine
12 graham crackers, rolled fine

Add marshmallows to the hot applesauce. Stir until marshmallows have melted. Then add the graham crackers, rolled fine. Mix thoroughly, put in a mold, and place in the ice box over night.

Serve with sweetened whipped cream.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Hard Times Reveal Virtue

By Doris Blake

These Current Troublous Days Induce a Forgetfulness of Self and a Kindly Consideration of Others.

IT'S an ill wave of depression that blows no good into human lives, to paraphrase a time worn old adage.

A man who had ridden along for ten or more years on a wave of affluence ran into a bad spell here recently. For nine weeks, one following on another, he saw bills and more bills pile up. Not a nickel to pay them off with. His job in a specialized kind of work brought large profit in affluent times, but in hard times could be dispensed with readily. Finally it became a question of raising bread for himself, his wife and two young huskies. One dark day he said to the girl who'd trudged alongside of him for some fifteen years, the girl who'd known many an anxious moment, hour, night, over a drink weakness he had: "Feeling low, honey?"

"Well," she said, with a brave attempt at a grin, "I have felt giddier!"

"Never a word of complaint from her," the man told me himself of the incident. "Never in all that stretch of joblessness did she once say an unkind word. Never did she refer back to the times when I spent money on good times she did not share. I tell you that kind of thing makes a fellow do some thinking. Women are wonderful!"

Being one of those children of fortune that even hard times cannot hold out on long, the man now is "in money again," as he says. Not in big money as before, but the horizon is bright, the debts are cleared off, and the immediate future is provided for at least.

"You know," he ruminated, "poverty does bring people together as no amount of money ever can. I have a feeling for Mary now that I cannot put into words. I always loved the darling, no matter how I may have misbehaved at times. Reverence is the nearest I can come to explain my feeling for her now."

That's one little true story to rim the depression wave with a halo of cheer.

Went Separate Ways.

And here's another, got second hand from an acquaintance familiar with the pair involved in the tale. They had been married for seventeen years and were in the mid-thirties. They had accumulated possessions and a social position of high ranking. Then he started playing around. She took her cue and attached to her train a couple of "tame cats."

They didn't go in much for quarrels or arguments, these two. They were too self-consciously modern for that. They simply went their separate entertainment ways, sometimes meeting accidentally at this club or that. Often they went to the same affair together, of course, but it was agreed that what the other did was his and her affair. Two years of this and the man fell for a pair of eyes bluer than his wife's. The wife released him on a financial settlement that left her in comfortable circumstances. He married the young thing, in her early twenties.

The wife did not remarry. Curiously enough, with her husband's second marriage she found a surprising interest in the couple of youngsters whose existence for a hectic time had been overlooked. Well, on the first Wall street smash the man went broke. The young second wife didn't marry him for a life of hardship, and anyway there was a second and richer man she had her eyes on. She scuttled quickly off to Reno and got her freedom diploma.

Hospital Meeting.

The husband started drinking. Report reached his first wife's ears that things were going pretty badly with him. She waited a while. Six months more elapsed. And to show how curiously like fiction true stories may run, one day the wife, walking down a hospital corridor to see a sick cousin, ran plump into the love of her earlier years and her husband for seventeen, the father of her girl and boy. He was painfully thin and drawn after a three weeks' stay there where she met him. To make the story short, the woman took her man home. She nursed him back to health.

It developed that she, no moneywiser than countless thousands of her sisters, had committed all but a couple of thousand dollars to an eager broker and she was cleaned out on one of the last market flurries. Presently they were getting closer and closer to the breadline. But the man's health was improved. He, trying to be gallant, apologized one day for not being able to ask her to remarry him because of his penniless circumstances. She dismissed the objection with: "We did it before on nothing. Let's try again." And so they were married. Two small shavers have a dad coming home nights now who has time to play rough-house with them.

Manners Improve.

Another sidelight on the revaluation that may be gained from a spell of hard times: A woman who had served as clerk in a department store section was telling the story of a particularly trying customer she had encountered that day. As the story was told, the customer must have been a holy terror. Some one asked the clerk why she didn't excuse herself on some pretext or other and get away from the crank. The woman responded: "You don't do that when you need a job as badly as I need one."

That led to a comparison of notes among those present on the more courteous treatment generally received lately on shopping tours, the consensus being that the anxiety to extract dollars from customer purses inspired a markedly more gracious attitude from salespeople. In further conversation, the theme broadened to include workers in many different branches, including household help, and how a certain gratitude for having work to do, with so many unemployed, had contributed a pleasanter relationship all around.

It's logical, of course, that when times are good and the purse is full we are inclined to dismiss our blessings as our inalienable right, and pattern our behavior accordingly. Whether we will be on with the "high hat" again when times improve remains to be seen. In the meantime we have a fine opportunity to do a lot of thinking.

For weeks he sighed and worried;
Ev'ry time the market flurried
He would make loud, moaning noises as he read the business news.
He has given free expression
To the chant of grim depression,
And the things he said would happen threw the household into blues.

Now, today, he comes home singing,
Five new business contracts bringing

The Obstreperous Child

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

Mother of Youngster Who Creates Havoc in Household Writes for Advice

A Mothers' and Fathers' Litany, signed by Mrs. Bevans, will be sent as her greeting on receipt of a 2c postage stamp.

THE wreck of the Hesperus is nothing compared with the wreck that an innocent toddler can make of two husky parents.

This letter I am sure you will read with the same mixed emotions that I did. And since this writer's sense of humor hasn't failed, even in such a plight, I'm sure she won't mind if in the midst of sympathetic reading we have to laugh a little.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: I hope you have a long time ahead of you in which to read this letter, because I could write a month and then not have presented all my difficulties to you. We have a charming little 3½ year old son, and, speaking of problems, every eighth of an inch of him is a problem. This all reflects on me, and I am ashamed I have turned out to be such a failure.

"Both my husband and I realize that a child's misconduct is all due to the training parents have given, but we are at our wits' end to know what course to follow. Please don't censure me for what I have done, because I know that everything I do is the wrong way to handle him. All through his life I seem to have done the wrong thing, out of ignorance. He is a normally healthy child; we are normally conscientious, intelligent parents.

"Now that you have the background, where shall I begin? Let's start with his waking hours. He awakes about seven thirty in a beautiful mood, laughing and singing, radiant with the beauty of babyhood, dimples, and innocence. Things go smoothly until breakast time, then 'No, mamma, I won't eat my cereal [or whatever the breakfast is]; you feed me.' We've tried to overcome this meal problem by following every plan I've ever read or heard of, but nothing has helped.

Friction All Day Long.

"Well, some way or other breakfast is gotten over or gone without. Then, 'No, mamma, I don't want to get my clothes on to go by-by,' or to kindergarten, or wherever we may be going. I've tried to do away with the friction by story telling, coaxing, giving him extra time to get used to the idea of getting his clothes changed or wraps on, or what not, by punishment, by promises, by threats, by reward, but nothing has worked. Every day it's the same struggle.

"When we start home it's the same thing over again. With lunch there is another fight, the afternoon nap is a nightmare, the afternoon exercise or play is still another combat, the evening meal is a horror, with food flung high, wide, and handsome, and all of us ending with indigestion.

"Then comes a few minutes of quiet while we have a story telling or reading hour, then the preparations for bed start the war again. He crawls out of bed a dozen times, and when the sandman finally succeeds in dragging the little dear to dreamland daddy and mamma sit down to gasp a few minutes before retiring to dream dreams of all our problems, mistakes, shortcomings, and anguish.

"Now, as to how I've tried to overcome these problems. Honestly, I've tried so hard and read your column ever since we expected our young hopeful and every other book on child training and management we could lay our eyes on, besides the fact that I was more or less trained in such at school, and we have tried every possible suggestion, expecting each one to succeed, until weeks later we realize it has failed, as everything else has done.

Some of His Faults.

"As well as I am capable of boiling things down in my tired and befuddled brain, it seems to me that his biggest trouble is contrariness, then comes stubbornness, then destructiveness, and disobedience, which of course is the result of these other things.

"He is a high strung child, with a superabundance of energy, and a quick, alert mind. People have told us he is over developed mentally, that this is one factor to all these problems. But I am honest enough to know in my own mind that the reason he knows a lot of things a 6 year old child is just beginning to learn is because we have spent so much time teaching and reading to him, and talking to him as one grown up person to another, and not because of an over bright mind. Because he is so bright and reasons so logically, his behavior is more puzzling to me. This theory about following example may have something in it, but I am sure he has never seen either of us fight like a tiger, or fling our food on the floor, or do any of the other wild animal acts he does.

"From the letters that are written to you, you seem to be able to help so many parents. My problems are all combined into one, made up of all the things every other mother has confronting her, yet never once has a single suggestion worked with us that has worked with other parents. I hope you have some concealed tricks up your sleeves. I shall watch your column, hoping to get some valuable information."

There Aren't Any Tricks.

If I only did have some tricks up my sleeve! How gladly would I pass them out!

But there are no such tricks. The managing of children is based on either a conscious or an intuitive understanding of them. Yet how often I wish there were tricks! I heard a consulting psychologist say, the other evening, that the people who come to him in mental and emotional distress think he can give them some sort of a "psychic pill." And he went on to say that he could not give such "psychic pill"—that he could not cure them from the outside—that they must work out the cure, themselves, from the inside.

So it is with child management. The thing has to come from within the parents. Of course, I realize that the bewildered writer of this letter was only joking—and yet I know that the many mothers who write me similar letters wish there were a magic potion they could take or tricks from some one's sleeve that would give them the power they long for.

It may surprise you when I say that many letters comparable to this, extreme as it may seem, have come to me in the course of the last few years. But they have. Each one I have answered. But it is difficult to diagnose at long distance, without being able to see or hear or even ask the one question that might be the crux of the matter.

In some letters I have been able to see the cause of the complete unruliness of the child. Sometimes the cause has been friction between the parents, sometimes it has been repression of the children, in some cases extreme nerves on the mother's part, in some coldness, in some punishment and severity at one time and over-indulgence at another.

Excess of Attention.

In this case cited the only cause I seem to see which bears up under many rereadings of the letter is a frequent one in such situations; namely: a great excess of attention.

It looks to me as though, with the best intentions in the world, the young heir has been made to realize that he was the hub of the parents' life—the center of their universe. Now, I don't object to the fact that he is—our children are the hub of life to most of us. But I do object to the fact that he knows it. And I think this intelligent, lovely child has become a little tyrant—first, because he has been given so much attention, and second because, by continuing to be a little tyrant, he can keep that center of attention.

He has found that if he refuses to eat, mother and father are worried and do everything to make him eat—giving him all their attention. If he won't get dressed, if he objects to getting undressed, if he leaps out of bed—mother and father are concerned, upset, worried, talk to him and coax, cajole and threaten—but give him what he wants; namely: the center of the stage!

Mother Becomes Tense.

This young mother has drawn a vivid picture giving her background and her mental equipment for the task of motherhood, and without, perhaps, realizing it has sketched in her emotional reaction, too. Also, she has written between the lines that she is so intense that she becomes tense in her effort to do her job well.

It seems to me, then, that this is what is wrong with this picture—that all these factors have led her and her husband to give an excess of attention to the little boy. Tomorrow [Monday's] article will take up the subject further and suggest a possible approach to a cure.

Wrap-Over Effects and Circular Skirts Give These Frocks an Air of Smart Simplicity.

A STRIKINGLY smart dress—just right for general daytime wear—is shown in pattern No. 2673. It is the slenderizing wrap-over type that is easy to slip into, and not too difficult to make. The belt is adjustable and leaves the front in panel effect—this has a tendency to give height to the figure. This belt ties in a pretty bow at the left side—the jabot rever on the right side just meeting it.

Upper and lower sections of this dress are cut separately and joined under the belt. The skirt is circular, and will ripple beautifully all around. For size 36 the bottom of the skirt measures about 4½ yards.

The back of the bodice is quite plain, and the front is cut in two parts with the jabot revers sewed to the front edges. A straight collar is sewed to the neck across the back, and to the revers as far as it goes. Directions that come with the patterns will show just how.

The sleeves are full length and close fitting, and the straight trimming bands are bowed—matching the bow on the front of the dress.

Be careful how the skirt is handled while making, and let it rest on a table as much as possible. In stitching the seams together, see that the skirt doesn't hang over the edge, for it will stretch. Don't finish at the bottom until it has hung for several days. Then even off and finish with a bias binding.

Black Canton crêpe, with white or eggshell silk crêpe for the jabot, will be smart for daytime wear. Black crêpe satin, using the reverse side for the jabot, or sheer velvet in black, or a rich wine red, will be lovely lace trimmed, for formal afternoons.

Any young girl should be delighted to have a dress made by pattern No. 2694. It is of French origin, and particularly smart for classroom and general daytime wear. The round neckline, the band extending down the front of the bodice, merging into the hip yoke, and the cuffs are of a contrasting material, or of the dress material cut on a "true" bias, so as to produce a smart contrasting effect.

The skirt is circular in cut, and there is nothing difficult about making the dress. It will always be a help to carefully transfer all marks to the material before removing the pattern, and follow the directions closely about putting together. All these patterns have clever sketches of the various pieces, showing clearly how they are put together.

It isn't an easy matter to hem the bottom of a circular skirt, for it necessitates little plaits being laid, and unless these are put in just right the hem will twist. A bias binding always finishes prettily, if it isn't too wide. It should be put on by hand.

A featherweight tweed of diagonal weave, showing cinnamon brown tones, rayon novelty crêpe, wool challis prints, and wool crêpe are smart suggestions.

A brown ostrich tweed of reddish cast will surely appeal to women of discriminating taste when choosing material for pattern No. 2708. The tucks on the front and back of the bodice add a decorative touch and are becoming, and the surplice closing, showing a small vestee of a contrasting color, meets the well fitting hip yoke. The pointed outline at the bottom of this yoke gives a slender effect to the figure and is flattering to the larger figure.

The cascading tunic effect at the front of the skirt is decidedly chic, and, best of all, the dress isn't a difficult one to make. Black Canton crêpe, with an eggshell shade of crêpe for the vestee, is another good choice.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Invalids Who Are Without Adequate Financial Support Would Greatly Appreciate Your Help, Large or Small.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

DURING the last few months we have concentrated our efforts almost entirely upon the business of finding jobs for the men and women who, because of the general depression, find themselves drafted into the army of the unemployed. It would seem that perhaps we'd forgotten the other unfortunates whose crosses come under other classifications. We haven't, however. We've been waiting for the opportunity to ask you to help them, too, as you've helped so many others.

Chief among them at this time are the ill, the maimed, the crippled, and the bedridden—the invalids who have been denied the means to provide for themselves, are unable to earn a living, and have no income. It's distressing enough to have an affliction, but when it comes accompanied by poverty, suffering is necessarily augmented. The woman who wrote this letter had just such a person in mind. She says:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: One of the most pathetic cases which has come to my attention is that of Mrs. M. P. An automobile accident following arthritis has left her permanently relegated to the wheel chair. The limbs twisted and the hands unable to perform their ordinary functions make life and its problems a difficult matter. She has tried to solve these by selling small articles of women's wear, Christmas cards, etc., but this field is so covered by those active in the pursuit that her returns are meager.

"Yet she faces it all with a sweet, undaunted smile. To me she is a wonderful woman, a roy of sunshine, and instead of feeling blue and depressed after calling on her you feel light hearted. I feel she is a most deserving case and should have any help you can give her. MRS. F. Q."

There aren't many of us could remain cheerful and smiling under such conditions as this. This woman is not discouraged, either, when things appear to be too much for her, but is ever hopeful. Perhaps you'd like to do something for her to help relieve the worry, anguish, and distress that are her constant fare.

Other invalids, too, need your help—help that a great many who have had illness in their families can give. The young man in the tuberculosis sanitarium, bedridden, and in need of an air cushion would be grateful for the one no longer needed in your home. And there's the woman who is unable to walk and would find such happiness in a wheel chair. Perhaps you can supply that or one of the many other invalid comforts or supplies our needy ill have written for. If you have such an article to give, write me a note about it and I shall be glad to tell you of some person who will be made happy and comfortable with your gift.

Collection of Magazines.

"Do you think one of your readers would like to have a quantity of magazines I have been accumulating? I'd be glad to send them to a shut-in.
"J. D."

The ardent reader will find a great deal of interesting matter in this collection of magazines. If you'd like some of them, write me; please do not telephone.

Mother of Five Asks for Aid.

"Mrs. A. K., whose husband died a few months ago, is the mother of five children. The boys are 18, 13, 11, and 7 months; the girl is 9. The eldest boy, the only one in the family able to work, has not had a job for some time and cannot find anything. She would be thankful for food and clothing. Can you do anything to help her? W. W."

Here's a widow whose situation is apparently a desperate one. With five children to care for and no way to feed them, she is almost distracted. What can you do to help her?

Request for Baby Clothes.

"My husband is working only one day a week and we have hardly money for food. I worked all summer and we paid for our furniture, but were unable to save anything. I am expecting a baby in about a month and have nothing ready for it. I would appreciate any baby clothing you could get for me. MRS. E. K."

Surely this expectant mother's burden is a heavy one. Can you relieve her of part of her worry by donating the baby things she will need soon?

Picks Up the Parsley.

The most economical woman I ever knew always took home the sprig of parsley from her plate regardless of where she was dining. She was wealthy, too. I was much surprised to see a bunch of green fall out of an expensive bead bag after a luncheon one day. Her friends said she boasted that she never bought a garnish.

Takes Advantage of Sales.

My pet economy concerns the buying of my clothes. I wait until after Easter in the spring and after Thanksgiving in the fall. Then I can buy a better quality than I could afford a few weeks earlier. There is less range of choice, but I usually feel well repaid for the delay.

A year ago I purchased the same coat I had looked at three weeks earlier for $10 less. I bought a hat for exactly half the price it had been earlier in the season.

A Telephone Can Be Help or an Annoyance

It Depends on Manners of the Caller.

Miss Bartlett will be glad to answer questions on etiquette when they are accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

By Helen Bartlett.

TO a few of us the telephone, with its jangling bell and its attendant "Hello," which is sometimes gentle, sometimes anything but that, is always disconcerting; to the majority of us it is only disconcerting when one or another species of the telephone pest is at the other end.

It's downright amazing, the amount of rudeness which prevails around telephone calls. There are the practical jokers, the loud of mouth, the long winded, the "Who is this?" callers, and—a real plague in the business world—the "remote controllers," whose switchboard operator, office boy, and secretary must coöperate on every attempted phone call and whose "Just a moment please, Mr. Brown calling," makes the person on the other end want to tear the telephone out by the roots.

Since the telephone is essentially a time saver and a space shortener, it's probably to be expected in this topsy turvy world that the most familiar telephone pest is the idle caller—the person who thinks the telephone method is ideal for small talk. Maybe we're wrong, but we're inclined to believe that women are the worst offenders in this regard. And maybe such calls are not such a trial to persons whose time is their own, but we do know that to the person in business they are a veritable plague.

Monopolizing the Phone.

It is good manners, as well as common sense, to remember that the person at business simply cannot take much time for personal calls in the office. The girl or man who monopolizes an office telephone is as rude and inconsiderate as the one at the other end is thoughtless.

Heaven knows the cartoons and comic strips have commented long and sharply on the silly conversations that go on for what seems ages while a sufferer waits for a phone—the lovers' quarrels, the coy discussion of dates, or perhaps just Mrs. Parent talking to another Mrs. Parent about the cute thing little Willie said this morning—but nothing seems to help. We venture to say that wires are as loaded as ever with just such long drawn out nonsense.

The joker has probably the most unwelcome voice in all the world. There are few forms of humor lower than telephone impersonations. Hanging up is the only effective method of dealing with a person so misguided as to attempt them.

The simplest, most sensible and therefore most correct way to answer a telephone is to give your number. A telephone rings. The person who answers it says, or should say, "This is Superior 1000"; the person at the other end, if Superior 1000 is what he dialed or asked for, says, or should say, "This is Mr. Jones. May I speak to Mr. Brown?"

"Who Is This?"

The person who makes a telephone call should not, when the telephone is answered, say, "Who is this?" He certainly does not deserve to be told. We suggest that he be asked, coldly, "What number are you calling and to whom do you wish to speak?"

To be rude to a telephone operator is to take an unfair advantage and in most cases, to make oneself out pretty silly. Nine times out of ten, if the ratio isn't even greater than that, the telephone operator is right. At her command she has every facility for getting a call through properly. She doesn't know the caller from Adam and she has no reason in the world for being "ornery" to any individual. What's more, if she's at all human, she probably doesn't crave bringing wrath on her head; she can't answer back. And where's the fun in that?

It is, of course, distinctly annoying to both parties when, for some reason, a wrong connection is made. The person who is making the call should apologize. The fault lies on his side of the telephone wires. His enunciation may have been faulty, his operator may have erred or, if he used a dial phone, he made the mistake himself. The person who answered may have done so with great inconvenience. So the caller is obliged to apologize. And this apology, by the way, is not met with a growl; it doesn't help and it is rude.

Kept Waiting.

It is distinctly rude to make a telephone call through a second and perhaps a third person and then keep the person you have called waiting while you do something else. The rule with business men ought to be "one call at a time." It is infuriating to answer your phone, be greeted by "just a moment, please" from the caller's switchboard operator, then a silence and then a switching and finally a "This is Mr. So and So's secretary. Hold the wire, please." It seems a long winter until you finally get to Mr. So and So. And all this time you feel pretty injured. He made the call—why should he keep you waiting?

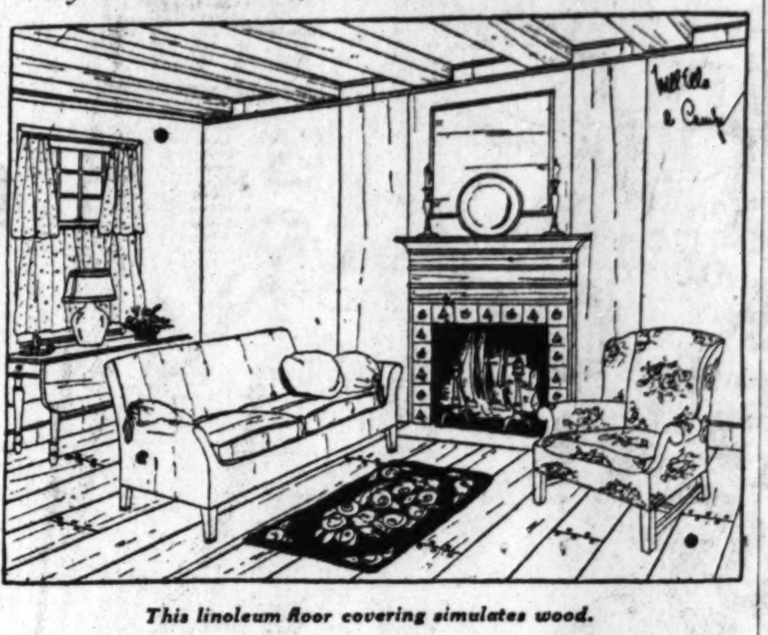
Rejuvenating Floors

By WillElla de Campi

Plain and Patterned Linoleums Cover Up Scars and Lend Brightness to Your Rooms.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



This linoleum floor covering simulates wood.

NOW that the process of manufacturing linoleum has been so greatly improved, it is a simple matter to revivify floors which have become unsightly or drab. The scars occasioned by hard usage are quickly and permanently hidden, since the linoleum goes right over the floors, hiding their shortcomings forevermore. In addition to being less expensive than many other types of flooring, inlaid linoleums are exceptionally durable, because the patterns can't wear off. They are not merely printed on the surface, but are an integral part of the linoleum itself. This is an excellent medium, too, for adding color notes to the room.

The myriad patterns available now are suitable for use in many types of rooms from the ultramodern breakfast room to the stately interior which is done in traditional period style. There are luxurious marbled effects for use in formal interiors. A fine assortment of plain colors and jaspé stock in two toned colors are delightfully adaptable. Then there are the tile and embossed tile designs, which may be so fittingly used in sunrooms, kitchens and other informal rooms.

Especially planned for floor covering in the early American type of room is the linoleum shown in the accompanying illustration. This faithfully reproduces the wide plank flooring used in colonial days, even to the rich brown coloring, wood grain effect, and square pegs which join the planks. It makes a seemly and harmonious background for small, colorful hooked rugs.

The furniture in this room is all of pine and maple. Walls are plastered and tinted peach color. Window curtains are of calico in a small multicolored floral pattern on a light blue ground. Henna colored rep, large flowered glazed chintz on a peach ground, and striped linen, combining henna, blue, brown and cream color are used for cushion covering and upholstery.

In a sunroom, where there should be a suggestion of outdoor freedom and indoor comfort, pleasing informality and gay coloring are successfully achieved by means of an embossed tile linoleum. The pattern shows alternating plain and marbleized squares with heraldic insets in a rich, reddish copper tone, with veining in cream and black. Each tile is sharply raised, giving the effect of a hand laid floor, though it is much less expensive than actual tile would be, and more comfortable because of its resiliency. The same pattern may be had in shades of green, or in a combination of blue, cream and taupe.

Contrasting nicely with the red copper floor are walls of cream colored plaster, and woodwork painted blue green. Stick reed furniture is painted the same blue-green with accents of black. Cushions of striped sunfast in two tones of old gold are finished in blue-green piping. Venetian blinds are painted reddish copper, and draperies match the striped cushions.

For covering the floors in children's playrooms and nurseries, linoleum meets every requirement. It is sufficiently colorful to suit a child's fancy, durable enough to stand hard usage, and it may be easily and thoroughly cleaned as often as need be. Its resiliency and quality of warmth further recommend it for use on these important floors.

One nursery which is particularly alluring has a floor covering showing a small irregular tile pattern in soft green and rose. Because of its small pattern and good coloring, this type of linoleum maintains a tidy appearance even under the most adverse circumstances. Walls in this room are covered with washable paper displaying prim, rose colored flowers with green leaves on a pale gray ground. The woodwork and furnishings are painted green and rose colored chambray bound in green is used for window curtains and bedcover. Several braided rugs combining rose, green and black are placed at strategic points on the linoleum covered floor.

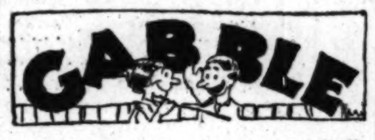
Back here in Chicago Estelle Petroski sketched this kind of an idea:



Artist Don Quinn took his facile pen and typewriter in hand, first to release such a deplorable idea as "Spare Ribs" (but we don't intend to do any ribbing) and later with this result:

We'd give the boy a hand except that he seems to think this is a feminist department. By no means. Paraphrasing the restaurant window sign, "Gentlemen Invited."

This being that, we're a bit stunned to discover that not a single individual flattered us with a vote for any of our own modest efforts! Come now, public. What shall we do with all these promising entries? Vote early and often, care this column, or nominate your own inspiration and see how we like it.

Proving that fame is largely geographical: A traveler tells of being in New York recently when somebody in the street called, "Here comes Al," and people crowded to the edge of the sidewalk to crane their necks toward an approaching automobile with its Derby hatted occupant. A few days later he was in Chicago. Somebody called, "Here comes Al," and everybody ducked for cover.

AL.

Which recalls Edna Ferber's favorite story about herself. At a dinner one night the guests were telling their childhood ambitions. Miss Ferber confessed that since she was a little girl she'd always wanted to be an authoress. The lady across the table, politely interested, inquired, "O, and do tell us—did you ever write anything?"

There are shoe clerks and shoe salesmen. And then there is W. T. Kelley, assistant head of the shoe department of this city's largest store, who sells to a truly exclusive clientèle—and by appointment only!

Every one entertained to date at the Electric club in the Civic Opera house comes away raving about the restrained elegance of the old English interior. Primarily a luncheon club for the 300 members, all of whom are connected with power and light companies, the institution naturally makes the most of electric power. All cooking is done by electricity. Do you suppose if one were offered a cocktail there he'd find it shocking?

Walter Trohan, who doesn't often effervesce about things, grows lyric when describing the country home of the Charles Walgreens at Dixon. Adapted with much artistry from an ancient barn on their land there, it incorporates every comfort and convenience without destroying the rustic appearance of the edifice. An old contractor, a fellow guest, looked up at the great beams of the present living room and inquired of Mrs. Walgreen, "Are you going to leave that big nail up there?" Mrs. Walgreen said she was. "Well," said the old contractor, "I remember driving that nail there fifty years ago to hang some harness on."

But the slickest idea to date in such renovated dwellings is credited to Paul Harper, son of the late president of the University of Chicago. He lives near Libertyville. A silo standing at one corner of his house was annexed to the dwelling. One floor makes the Harper library. Beneath that is stored the winter coal and beneath that is situated the furnace. Shoveling in the coal is merely a matter of releasing a chute above. That's inventive genius!

"O-o-o-h, it's nice!" said ANN CURRAN

● age 7 years

● "And now I know the easiest way to make children take cod-liver oil," said Ann's happy mother

WOULDN'T YOU like to discover it, too—the way to banish your children's "ughs"—the way to make them take their cod-liver oil willingly? Listen!

A few weeks ago the Scott's Emulsion reporter walked into Mrs. Edward Curran's cozy living room at 232 Greenwich Ave., Stamford, Conn., where her little daughter, Ann, was playing with her doll.

We asked Mrs. Curran if she'd let Ann try Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil. Since Mrs. Curran appreciates how children dread plain cod-liver oil, she consented gladly.

Ann, pictured here, then took some Scott's Emulsion. But instead of frowns, she was all smiles. "Oooh, it's nice. I like it!" she said.

Pleasanter to take—but that isn't all!

Pale, thin, run-down children—they need cod-liver oil. Give it to them the pleasantest way—give them Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion hasn't that strong "fishy" taste. It doesn't upset even delicate stomachs. It brings you purest, Norwegian cod-liver oil in its pleasantest form—a perfect emulsion. Easier to take—easier to digest. Almost immediately, the body absorbs the health-giving vitamins—and the assimilation is complete. You get more good out of Scott's Emulsion and you feel the benefits quicker.

Scott's Emulsion is rich in vitamin A, the growth-promoting vitamin that helps prevent disease. It is rich in vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin that prevents rickets. It also contains vital mineral elements that aid in forming sound bones and teeth. This gives Scott's Emulsion a special advantage for growing children, infants, nursing and expectant mothers. Get Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil to-day at your druggist's. Watch cheeks grow rosy. See youngsters gain new weight.

women. Learn how a little is better than a lot, how a teasing scent is better than a "smell."

If your eyes could be brightened, or if you think they might be more starry, or balmy, or fetching, or whatever eyes should be to lure the other half of the eye-world on, try out some of the witching shadow pastes that, aptly chosen, lend depth, light, and glory to an orb. Try the green and blue shades, the blue-green and the green-blue shades. They're young and applied delicately are sometimes entrancing in effect.

Look into the cheek and lip coloring more "learnedly." It isn't enough to own a pot of paint and a lipstick. This year the girl in the adorable long dress of white or pastel shade cannot play with makeup hand the sophisticated, hard-boiled rough-neck of a defunct chemise-frocked-period. It's not in the picture.

And more to the point, the real reason for this dissertation is the change in manner that marks our best 1931 Lovely Girl Models. To be sure, the 1931 girl has a manner of her own, though her dress may be strongly reminiscent of the 1880 period. She is no shrinking violet, this current one. She is too self-assured for that. She knows her value. But she doesn't shout it. She isn't aggressive, loud voiced or wise-cracking.

She Aims to Please.

Her aim is to please. Being so, the right of others to inhabit her earth is recognized—others including parents and all elders whose conduct is deserving of courtesy. She makes her entrances and exits with less personal ballyhoo than characterized a predecessor of hers known by the now extinct term, flapper. She sits more prettily, with little more than a foot and ankle to substitute for former knee exposures. She walks more gracefully.

Her dance floor demeanor is finer, every way. If she was "spifflicated" last night she's not doing much talk about it, as that line of conversation isn't so good this year. And the smell of cigarets she finds isn't so agreeable clinging to her long white gloves. She's a pretty nice person, this model we're talking about, when she is smart enough to jump right on to the '31 wagon. Admirably sure of herself, but without "taunt" to others.

She's the eighties' girl-model brought up to date with an appreciation of her own worth, also with a brilliant understanding of how she can lift her very personal self above the ordinary with the pictorial aids that surround her. She is the flapper model with all the rough edges planed down and redressed to disguise resemblance to a type notoriously lacking in ability to stir up romance.

That's your pattern now, girls, if you haven't learned to cut and fit it already. Better be at it while you may for, as hinted already, we never know what the future has in store. Who knows but next year or the year following a pants epidemic might break out in style centers! You never can tell! Then where'll you be as heart wreckers!

BY AIR

By Charles J. McGuirk

To Emily, a Little Bored with the Position of "Extra" in Her Married Sister's Home, Turning On the Radio Meant Romance—in Person.

EMILY LANE'S thick blackish-brown hair, with a streak of white in it running from her high, wide forehead to the crown, was brushed back to lie close against her head and was secured in that position with good old fashioned hairpins. The effect was not prim, because Emily was not the type who could be prim. It was disapproving. It was meant to be. Emily was annoyed.

Her cheeks over their high bones were not flushed, but they were a very pronounced pink. And her mouth was "set." The rest of her small, compact body followed her broom into corners.

My! What a mess!

There had been a poker party here in the dining room last night because it had been Wednesday night. And on Wednesday nights Stanley and George had to have their friends in for "poker with roudles," some crazy modern game or other. Sarah, their mother, insisted on it. And when Sarah insisted on things—— Sarah was a good deal like a broom herself. Emily ought to know, who was her sister and had "minded" her before she could walk.

Sarah would decide, at their requests, that the boys should have something. And Emily, or Mary and Alice, their sisters, would argue against it. Sarah would smile patiently and hardly speak a word. She never argued. But finally the boys would have what they wanted.

Cigar butts and cigaret stubs! And small plates on which they'd had their sandwiches. And glasses. Those glasses! Emily suddenly picked one up and sniffed it. She was right! They'd contained something stronger than ginger ale.

Well, she sighed, it's a man's world. Even in spite of Evan's position in it. Evan Hustead was Sarah's husband and the children's father and her brother-in-law. And he was a chameleon. Wasn't that the little thing which fitted so effectively against any background that he practically disappeared?

His complexion might be a help in that. It was sandy—neutral. So was his personality, neutral and gentle. His eyes were a light blue, his height was about five feet four, and he ate and slept and pottered about the house without anybody hardly realizing he was there.

Not that he was hen-pecked. Indeed not! In the first place, Sarah was not the kind to hen-peck and in the second place when he felt like asserting himself you became very much aware that he was there and as big as a giant. It was just that he lived in a world of his own. You could almost feel him marveling at himself for gathering about him such a fine, large family. And Emily was sure "the family" included her in his thoughts.

He didn't play poker. He didn't have something called "card sense." He would sit in and watch for an hour or so after the players had arrived and then he would go quietly off to bed. He worked just as quietly in the city. Had his own business; not a tremendous business, but his own. Evan was that kind.

This home of theirs was his. Her position in it was peculiar when you came to think of it. She wasn't a housekeeper, because Sarah did as much as she did. She was kind of a "working sister." She had come to him with the package that was Sarah. She got her salary every week, just like any one who works in any field. Her "field," she supposed, was the house and the children and Sarah and Evan.

The room was beginning to look like something at last. The dishes and the glasses had been piled and removed. The sweeping had been done—practically. Everything would be neat when Sarah and Mary returned from their marketing.

Maiden Reflections

She suddenly realized she was tired and she sat down and fanned herself with her house apron. It was a warm spring day and queer, disconnected thoughts went through her mind, like flashes of a motion picture.

Emily wondered why she hadn't ever married. It wasn't that she couldn't. Only, other things had always come up to intervene. Sarah's marriage and then the coming of the children. Not but what she had not had enough and to spare of love in her life. She had certainly had the love of all the children. Had it yet for that matter.

Stanley, the oldest, had always been a sweet child. She still, when talking behind his back, called him "The Little Feller." Mary arrived two years after him. A beautiful tow-head with a tongue on her and a brain as quick as a minute. George had had a hard time as a baby. He was the kind that "took" everything from teething rash to measles. My! They'd all had a time with him. Alice was ushered in to the strains of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Here she was a full grown woman and it seemed only yesterday Emily was hemming up her baby dresses.

Emily, very secretly, began to count up how old she was because she hadn't admitted a birthday since she was thirty. Thirty—thirty-one—well, never mind.

She was old enough to know better, but she couldn't help speculating about the feelings existing between a man and a wife. Not the physical feeling, because that was nature at her most obvious. It must be right because it handed down children from father to son and from mother to daughter. She was not the kind of woman to rail against it because it was all right if it was handled right. It wasn't the physical side that intrigued her. It was the spiritual feelings, the tiny antennæ which reached out, even over the whole world between a man and his wife, or a woman and her husband, or a parent and a child.

There must be a great part of love which is not physical, just as there is a great part of the world which is not physical. Or, if it is physical, is so refined and delicate and tenuous that it seems spiritual to us. Like the radio, for instance.

Whoever would have thought a few years ago that a man or a woman could speak or sing in London and be heard just as plain as daylight as far away as Los Angeles? You could even hear the tap or shuffle of dancers' feet. And she was reading only this morning that now they were sending pictures with sound over the radio. Wouldn't be long before you could sit down in front of a little box and see things happen instead of reading about them in your newspaper or seeing them at the movies. Something in the air did it. Some force. They thought it was electricity, but they didn't know. It was something physical, but didn't it act like those supernatural miracles they had back in the Old Testament times? Why, anything could come out of that radio of theirs right in front of her.

She looked at the radio, as a new thought occurred to her, with her head on one side. She knew one thing, she'd wager, that would come out of it. Dust! The radio before her was two-natured. It was a cabinet with a very ornate front of dark wood all full of scrolls and flowers. Behind, it was just nothing. When you turned it around it was a common, ordinary box, containing a mass of metal and some tubes. Out of it hung a cord which attached to a switch socket in the wall. You turned the dial in the ornate front and you got anything from a sermon or a household hint to the latest wicked jazz song.

Halted by a Voice

Emily turned the cabinet around. Yes. There was the dust, squatting in the level spaces, banked against and around the tubes. She dusted it vigorously and flecked the wall behind it and turned it right side before again.

She wondered what she'd get if she switched it on and gave the dials a turn. Maybe it would be a clergyman giving out a life lesson; or a famous beauty specialist advising young girls of all ages the kind of cream to use on their faces. Or almost anything. The reason she didn't turn it on in the morning generally was that it distracted her from her work. She turned it on.

It took something like a minute for the radio to "warm up" and she had almost forgotten about it and was on her way to the kitchen when she was abruptly halted by a compelling, resonant but modulated voice. It was most meticulous about its accent. It pronounced "him" so that it rhymed with "seem," and it carried a suggestion of the silent vowels on the end of words like "take." It flicked the air lightly but effectively as she flicked the dust off furniture—as though it was removing cobwebs from the minds of its hearers. It said:

"Of course, you use tea. And coffee. Buttah. Shugah. All the staples and the condeements. And I assuah you any recognized brand, packed and sealed and carrying theah packah's names, must be all theah handlahs claim foah them.

"But what I want to bring to youah attention, Deah Madam, is that a fuhm's honah and a fuhm's romance—foahty yeahs of it—two generations as men's lives go—are put into every package of Guirmack's products.

"Think of it! It's stupendous. Think of a family's honoah, its romahnce, its honesty going into the quahtah-pound package of buttah which comes fragrahnt and unsullied, to yuah table!

"Think of the imagination, the intahprize, and the investment which has sent it theah. And think of the splendoah of the imagination of men that has made it possible to ship Guirmack's—and othah—products ovah the length and breadth of this great land of ouahs."

Emily sat down with a small shock and tried to think of the marvels of transportation. She also wondered how butter—a quahtah of a pound of buttah which came fragrahnt to her table—would taste if it were tangibly flavored with Guirmack's honor, romance, imagination, enterprise, and investment. Of course, that was silly of her. You only ate the butter, itself, from a cow. But how that man could talk! And such authority! He must be a great big man. Way over six feet.

While she was thinking of his size and the romantically flavored butter he stepped—grandly, she was sure—away from the microphone to make way for a sister singing act. That was the way of radio broadcasts. They gave you three ounces of entertainment for every ounce of truth on the theory that truth was hard to take. So Emily sat there to listen and to wait for him to come back. Neither the sisters nor the song disturbed her. The sisters, she imagined, were nice, pleasant girls and the song, "Two Little Toes Are Pattering on My Heart," was one of those tinkling melodies which couldn't disturb anybody.

She wondered how the radio companies, powerful and rich as they were, ever could attract a wonderful big person like him. And what a chance a remarkable man like him had to do good in the world. He had already done her good, and she was only one of millions. And then she realised she wasn't half as interested in the Guirmack products he was recommending as she was in his voice and the way he talked.

There must be a way in which a person in her circumstances could meet a man in his. After all a radio announcer was a servant of the public and she, as an assistant and a sister of a housewife, was most certainly a part of the public. She would wait here and find out his name. They always gave the names of both the particular and the general announcer of every program. Then one wrote to them in care of whatever station they broadcast on.

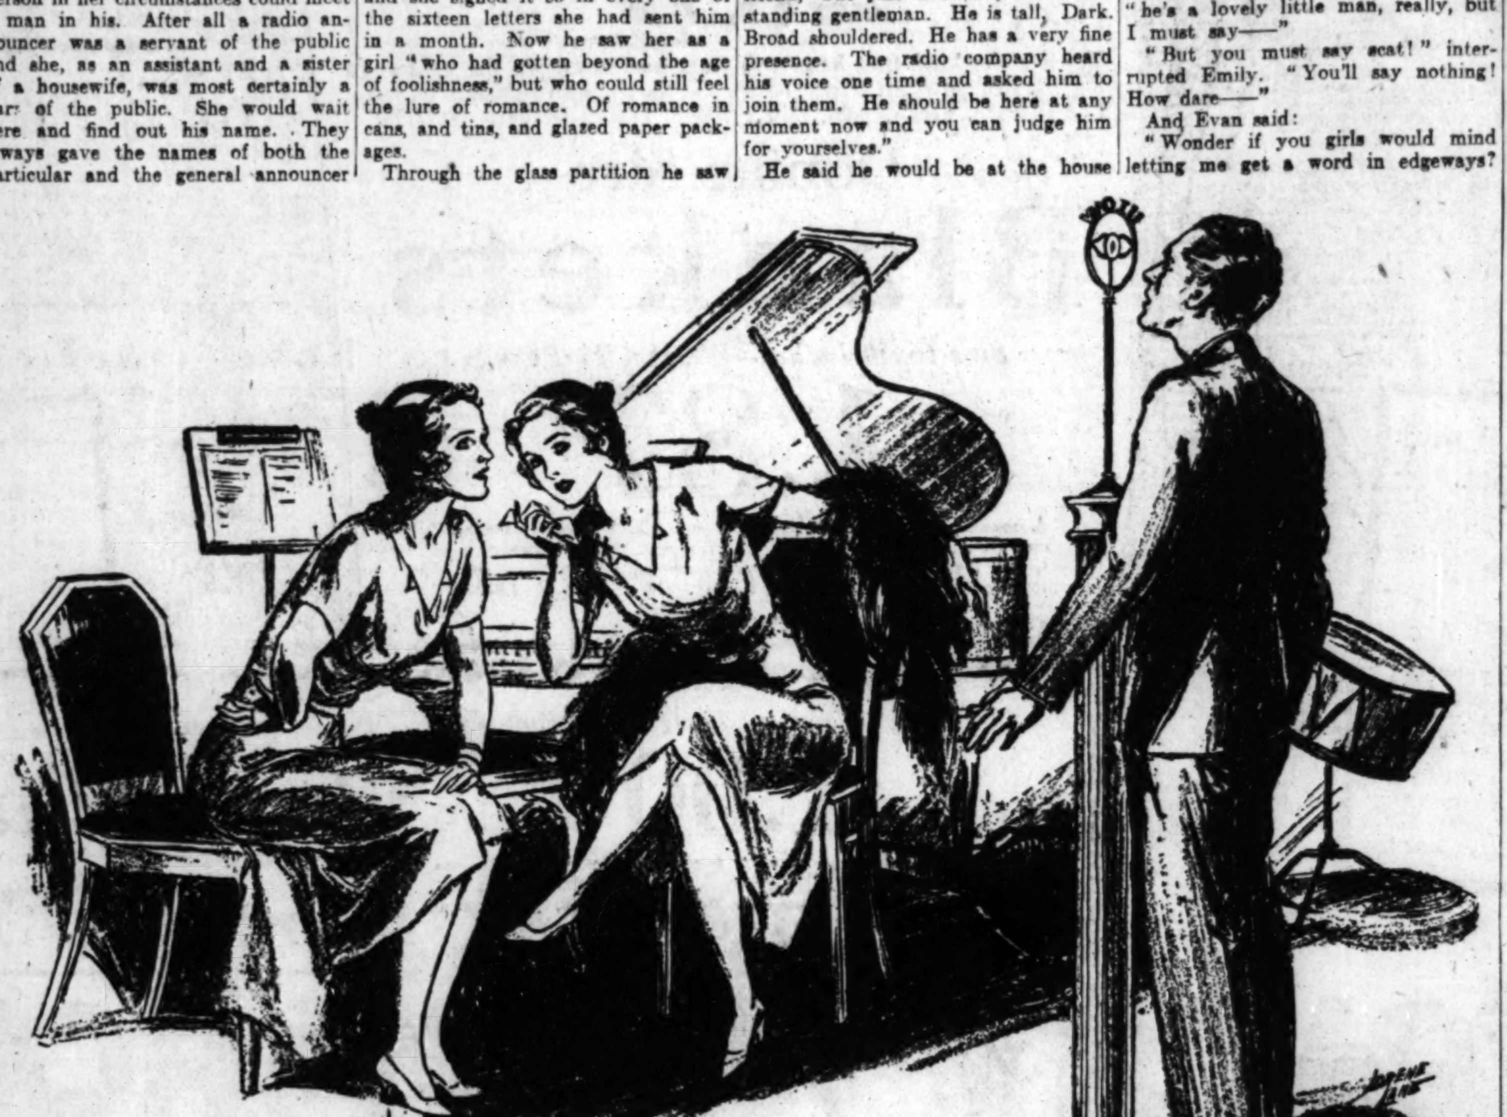

ILLUSTRATION BY LORENE LANE.

"Sis, did I or did I not tell you that he was a hell of a swell guy?"

His name was Harold Endicott of station WOIU.

Small But Complete

In one of the glass, soundproof studios of the WOIU Broadcasting company Harold Endicott was talking into a portable microphone. He was standing beside a desk and the microphone was on a high stand which looked like a Greek column and had just enough top to hold the instrument.

He stood poised like a bird about to take flight. And this is no poetic simile. His body was straightened and leaning forward. His head was thrown back and from his throat poured forth "raw" sounds which would be transformed and softened by the alchemy of the ether to go out to his large, unseen audience.

He stood that way because he had to "reach up," so that his voice would hit the microphone. Harold was a small man. Small but complete. So complete you would never suspect he was under average height if you saw him walking or standing alone.

He was striking in his way. He gave out the atmosphere of a superior person, like a banker or a connoisseur of things artistic, or a tremendously successful bootlegger. In dress he affected one of two colors, blue or gray. He was gray himself, not in the disagreeable stage of "turning" or not in the whiteness of old age. Sort of steel gray. His skin was of a very dark ivory. His teeth were small, even, and his own. His eyes were grayish blue or bluish gray. His mouth was mobile, as are the mouths of all superior articulators.

His affectations? Well, his neckties were always spots of color. His hats, straw at this season, were rolled and sufficient of brim, and they were worn at exactly the "right" angle, which is almost but not quite rakish, a very slight tilt over the right side of the head and an ascending angle from back to front. Always, except in evening and night dress, he wore a boutonniere. And always carried a stick. He was saying now:

"——think of tea! The fragrant tea leaves, selected with loving tendahness and packed by young guhls with the strictest regahd for every law of cleanliness. Pictuah them, clad in spotless white linen frocks, theah hands in rubbah gloves. They are handling the aromatic leaves whose attah you will inhale at youah tea table. Tea from lovely sun-drenched Ceylon."

The Lucky Man

Embittered by her wealth, she found that giving it away involved a heart problem which needed no gold for its solution. . . . A dramatic short story by Elisabeth Sanxay Holding.

Next Sunday

And, though he was talking to thousands, he saw only one woman. And she was a woman he had never seen. That, if you stop to think of it, was even more wonderful than the men packing their "honoah" in butter packages.

Her name was "Miss Emily Lane" and she signed it so in every one of the sixteen letters she had sent him in a month. Now he saw her as a girl "who had gotten beyond the age of foolishness," but who could still feel the lure of romance. Of romance in cans, and tins, and glazed paper packages.

Through the glass partition he saw Morgantheau, the general announcer, approaching and a quick glance at his watch told him his time was up.

"——remembah the name," he said into the little black disc. "Guirmack—standing for taste, quality, and romahnce! Good day."

He took grave, courteous leave of the artists awaiting their turn at the "mike." His bow to Marie Lennon of the Lennon Sisters act was the model of fourteenth century grace. He donned his hat—at the correct angle—picked up his stick and sauntered out. And when he was gone Marie said to her sister:

"I don't know what you think, Sis. But what I think is, there goes a hell of a swell little guy."

He was looking forward anxiously, he admitted as he strolled down Broadway, to his meeting tonight with Miss Emily Lane. She inspired him. He had never before met a woman who seemed to understand him. But then women didn't take time to understand a grocery clerk in a small town. More liable to laugh at his "pretensions" to education, courtesy, and the romance of things of the table.

That is why he was a "late success." He never would have been one at all had it not been for the radio, though the soothing quality of his voice over the phone which made him such a good order clerk foretold it. It was while he was temporarily out of a job that he had obeyed an impulse and walked into a broadcasting station for an audition (pronounced, he told himself, o-dis-eon).

Then, out of a clear sky, he found himself wondering about the feelings existing between a man and a wife. Not the physical feelings, because they were nature at her most obvious. But the spiritual feelings, the tiny antennae that reached out, even over the whole world, between a man and his wife, or a woman and her husband, or a parent and a child.

Emily Receives a Guest

It was 7:45 by the big clock that Evan's parents had given them for their wedding present. Emily was already dressed in her extraordinary best under her house apron. And she hadn't yet told a soul. She was afraid to. They had finished dinner and were still sitting around the dining room. And then Stanley, the smart aleck, did notice.

"Well, Aunt Emily," he said, "you're all dressed up either for a wedding or a funeral. What's the idea? Got a boy friend coming?"

"Yes," said Emily with a firmness caused by nerves. "I have a friend, a gentleman, calling this evening. Any objections?"

There was the usual silence that would be caused by the explosion of any bomb. The children's mouths were open and their eyes were glassy. Sarah, after a slight start, rolled a too-lazy eye around at her. But Evan, the mild, never blinked. You would think he had known it all along. Then the storm descended.

"Well, for Pete's sake!" "What is he, a traveling man?" "Aunt Emily with a beau!" "O, this is slaying me!"

"Children," said Sarah, annoyed.

"Shut up," decided Evan simply, with ice in his mild tone. And there was instant silence.

"His name," Emily informed them, "is Mr. Endicott, Harold Endicott. He is a radio announcer. Maybe you've heard him."

"What's he look like?" "Is he young and handsome?" These eagerly from Mary and Alice.

Emily suddenly realized she hadn't the slightest idea of what he looked like. She had to tell them something. They'd think it peculiar. So she told them what she thought he looked like.

"I have never noticed whether he was handsome," she told them a little tartly. "I'm too old for such foolishness. This gentleman is not a 'boy friend,' but just a friend, an understanding gentleman. He is tall, Dark. Broad shouldered. He has a very fine presence. The radio company heard his voice one time and asked him to join them. He should be here at any moment now and you can judge him for yourselves."

He said he would be at the house at 8 o'clock. He was, of course, on the minute. The doorbell rang.

"I'll go!" The wild-eyed offer came from Mary and Alice so simultaneously they might have been Siamese twins.

"I'm going!" Emily announced with wild calm and, saying, went, shedding her apron as she did so.

"Whom did you wish to see?" she asked, disappointed, of the impeccable little man at the door. Big men were always late. They moved slowly.

"Miss Lane, if you please, Miss Emily Lane. Will you say that Mr. Endicott is calling?"

"O!"

Well, if that wasn't the queerest thing! He looked little when you first glanced at him, but when he spoke you could see right there he was over six feet.

"I'm Miss Lane, Mr. Endicott. Please come in."

Their hands were clasped and their eyes shyly found each other's. She thought: He's nice! And he thought: Just as I expected! A lovely, sensible woman!

Just a Little Wild

As he stepped in beside her, so courtly and old worldly, the collective family, save Evan, already groggy from one blow, went, as they say in the prize ring, out on its feet. Stanley thought: Did this guy shrink on the way here? George didn't think. His brain was wont to move slowly in a crisis. Mary thought: What a charming little man—and Aunt Emma, of all people—do you suppose they'll be married—where did she ever contrive to meet him—how long has this been going on? And Alice thought: That little old baby has "it" and I do not mean perhaps. Sarah's eyes rolled, but she managed to give Mr. Endicott a charming smile. And Evan, very calmly and quietly, said:

"Have a cigar?"

"Noah." Mr. Endicott refused most apologetically. "I smoke a cigaret once in a while. Of tobacco I buy and have rolled myself. Boyhood dream of mine to smoke my own tobacco. I have known this chahming family for a month now, though I've never met any of you before. Even Miss Lane. We've known each othah by ayah. And that proves that romahnce did not go out a century ago. I think it is the most romahntic thing that could have happened to all of us. Don't you?"

Sarah didn't. She thought it was terrible! And her sisterly eye, lighting on Emily, apprised her of the fact. And Emily, receiving the eye, didn't give a darn what Sarah thought. She felt a little wild, as though she might whoop. But Evan's voice calmed her. He said:

"Yes, sir. Life's marvelous, if you don't expect too much of it."

The children, all of them, were awed by Aunt Emily's prowess and, after a while, Emily got hold of herself and became sensible. They had some cake and "what-do-you-think," a wild drink of Emily's own invention. Nobody but she knew what it was made of, but there were oranges and lemons in it. Nobody went out. You couldn't have pried them out of that house with a crowbar. This was better than a movie.

And both Emily and Harold began to get a hint of how a husband and a wife feel about each other, the spiritual feelings, the tiny antennæ which reached out. Emily started to suspect that it was a feeling of awe that one man could be so nice and know so much. And wouldn't she just love to ruffle his hair, lying so close and clean against his well-shaped head! And it occurred to Harold Endicott that a good, sensible woman, just by listening, made a man grow a foot and a half in his own estimation and to tempt him to talk his fool head off.

"Emily," began Sarah after Harold Endicott left with the promise that he would come to that house often, "he's a lovely little man, really, but I must say——"

"But you must say scat!" interrupted Emily. "You'll say nothing! How dare——"

And Evan said:

"Wonder if you girls would mind letting me get a word in edgeways? Look here, Sarah. Knowing Emily well's both of us do, you don't think for a second she'd do anything foolish or wicked, do you? Course not. And even if you did, you'd never think that gentleman, Mr. Endicott, would ever be capable of any but the most honorable actions. Why, any meanness would hurt his artistic sense.

"Emily, I'm speaking to you now for both Sarah and myself. I want to acknowledge a debt we'll never be able to repay you. You did as much as both of us together to raise our family to be the fine sort it is. You've been closer to our boys and girls at times than either of us. Why, you've encouraged me when you didn't even know I was low and blue. You've pretty near given your life for the six of us.

"Now any friend of yours, man or woman, is more than welcome in this house. Never forget that it's as much yours as it is ours. If I die, you'll be provided for same as the rest of the family. And I think Harold Endicott's a fine gentleman. And I'm mighty proud of you for finding him—though, how you did it's beyond me!"

"Evan!" said Emily, beginning to whoop. "I got him—by AIR!"

Nearly two months flew past.

They were gathered in the Hustead living room which was so worn and mellow with living, Emily and Harold Endicott and Sarah and Evan.

Evan, after fifteen minutes' deliberation, moved a red "king" a square forward. Harold advanced a black "man" three squares away. Evan immediately moved another "king" into a position to jump two of Harold's "men." And Harold sprung his trap and swept the board. Evan glared at him and Harold said apologetically:

"That play was shown me by an old chap, Jed Tollivah, when I was a boy leahning the grocery business. It's a coahkah, isn't it. Only foah it, you had me."

Evan sadly folded up his board.

"Harold," he said, "you certainly can play checkers. I thought I was good, but you're better."

Accepted with Alacrity

Emily, beside them, sewing a dress for Mary, calmly agreed with Evan. Harold could do anything. Funny, she thought, how the family had adopted him. It was as if she had enticed a stray thoroughbred into the house and fed him friendship and sympathy and respect. And he had responded, opened up the shy secret places of his heart to them. She wondered, a bit impatiently, when he was going to propose. It was obvious enough he loved her. The children already called him "Uncle Harold." She wished she was one of these modern women of whom she had heard but never seen. Then she'd make him.

Harold had already decided that matter. It was to be tonight. And it happened in the time between Sarah's and Evan's departure for bed and the children's return from the movies.

FALSE TEETH
KLING Holds Them Firmly
Dentists agree the one sure way to make false teeth comfortable is to keep them firm. Just sprinkle a little KLING on the plates. This improved powder holds the plate so snug, it cannot rock or slip. You eat, laugh and talk as well as you did with your own teeth. A large package of KLING only 35c at Walgreen's or other druggists. Gives you months of unbelievable comfort.

"My deah," he began without warning. "I am suah you know what my feelings towahd you have been since long befoah we met. (She watched his mobile mouth whence came always the perfectly formed words. She wondered whether its beauty came from his tender care of every word he spoke.) I am not a great puhson. I am one of the wuhld's 'little people.' My careeah has been uneventful, but it has been clean. My futuah looms unspectaculah but respectable, with enough in it of monay which will accrue from tahsks done as well as it lies in my conscionce and capabilities to do them. I believe theah is advahncement befoah me. I have been able to offah cuhtain suggestions which have been received with approval by the WOIU Broadcasting companee. I feah that a lady of youah chahm may take my proposal lightly. Nevahtheless, feeling as I do, I must beg you foah the honoah to become my wife."

"Why, of course, Harold." Emily accepted with such alacrity that she frowned on herself for forwardness.

He held a diamond solitaire in his hand so that she might slip her finger into it.

"I gambled," he said with a shy smile. "My very deah!"

Love, Emily learned when she kissed him and rumpled his hair, was warm waves of tenderness engulfing her. And a fierce wish to protect him. And a knowledge that this small man was part of her forever and forever. Wasn't his mouth gentle!

Love, Harold Endicott, found out, was a miraculous wonder that this tender goddess should care for him!

Love, WOIU Broadcasting station found out next morning, was a force that almost shattered the wheels of commerce and industry to discover a new radio star.

His Song of Joy

At 11 o'clock that morning in his glass soundproof room of the WOIU Broadcasting company, Harold Endicott, in blue double breasted suit, tan oxfords, black socks, white shirt and collar and red tie with blue flecks, stood before the microphone, poised like a bird about to take flight. He was starting his morning broadcast on the merits of Guirmack's food products. And, though he was talking to thousands, he saw only one woman. He would never see another but her in this world again. She sat, he knew, in front of the radio in the living room. He began:

"The Guirmack foods are the foods of taste and quality. They come to yuah table from the ends of the e'th. In every tin and can and package of Guirmack's is packed honoah, industree, and obejence of the laws of health.

"I digress heah to pay with wuhd of mouth my heaht-felt gratiteude to Guirmack's and to Station WOIU because, through them, I met the woman I love above all things. The ladee, my wife——"

The digression expanded to become the main theme. The theme was the average man's love for his average wife. There was nothing heroic about it. It was made up of everyday affection, and simple duties a man did for his woman without even thinking they were duties. It breathed of tenderness that the speaker never guessed. It painted a portrait of a wife as great and as simple as is Whistler's of his mother.

Its artistry was so sheer that one forgot the artist because the artist had forgotten himself. The great voice was timbred like an organ under a master hand. It thundered. It became tremulous. It played the simple aria of a married life so happy that it was not conscious of its happiness. And the words dropped through the air like jewels in iridescent melody. Its effect!

Nathan Guirmack, the man whose "honoah" went into every package of his food, tuned in, as was his custom in the office every morning because he liked to hear how good his own food was, and because Harold Endicott's pure English hypnotized him.

"Goot! He nodded, his hands over his vast paunch. And then Harold Endicott digressed.

Nathan's mouth dropped slowly open and a flush of anger covered him like a rash.

"Ach! Vot is it! [illegible] Ganif—" He grabbed the telephone. "Get me de WOIU," he thundered. The deathless love song poured out to him. He relaxed. He thought of Rachel. The good Rachel who had borne his children. He should give a mink coat to a worthless little blonde! What he should give was Rachel a handful of diamonds. He grabbed the telephone again. "Nefer mind WOIU. Get me my home—is dot you, Rachel. O, mine heartsen—sure papa lofs you—am I listening to dot man now—"

Down on Tenth street in his own speakeasy, Micky Hannigan boredly dusted off the bar while he impersonally watched a helpless drunk writhing in alcoholic torture. How did a guy get like that? His idle eye fell on the radio. Guess he'd have a shot of jazz. A golden voice poured out and told him of the love he bore his wife. Micky started to switch him off, but held his hand. The golden voice was telling how wonderful Katherine was. Well, she was at that. He paused, listening, and thought of the day he married her. She was a beauty. No kiddin'. The belle of the district. He went to the telephone and dropped a nickel. "This you, kid—what the hell are you cryin' about—sure, I'm listenin' to him right now—sure it's the way I feel about you—and that mouse I hung over your eye last night is out—sure, I'll buy the kid a scooter. I'll buy him a goat if you say so—"

Morgantheau, the general announcer for that period, heard Harold Endicott start his rhapsody and hurried to stop him. But he hesitated as he thought of his own wife, Hazel. He really didn't appreciate Hazel half enough. He wasn't really giving her the best kind of a break. He ought to take her out more to shows and things, quit playing so much poker himself. But how did that little wart know how he felt, or ought to feel about Hazel?

Marie Lennon, of the Lennon sisters, broke into tears.

"Sis, did I or did I not tell you that he was a hell of a swell guy! Listen to him! He's a canary singin' like an eagle! Gee! I may take Johnny up on his proposition at that. Married life must be wonderful."

Within two hours the startled station was swamped with telegrams and special delivery letters and the telephone operators were threatening to quit. Stratton, the station manager, never knew how many housewives and grateful husbands there were in the world.

The messages were coming from as far west as Pittsburgh. They wanted to know all about Harold Endicott. Who was he? Why hadn't he broken out like that before? Could they get his picture? Could they meet him? Would WOIU ask Mr. Endicott to tell (about fifteen thousand women) how to get her husband away from another woman?

And the only one who wasn't surprised was Emily. She was thrilled. Certainly! Wasn't he talking to and about her? And wasn't he the grandest man in the world? And to think he came to her BY AIR!

You've heard Harold Endicott, of course. If the name doesn't mean anything to you, he's WOIU's "HAPPY HUSBAND" and one of the highest paid radio artists in the world.

Pretty good, isn't he?

DON'T BE A "COLD FIGHTER!"

DON'T "make war" on a cold, as generations before this have had to do. Don't upset your stomach—fighting and dosing a cold!

Instead . . . soothe it away . . . with the new "Pineoleum" oil spray treatment!

For this modern way of treating a cold acts directly at the seat of the trouble—the passages of nose and throat. It clears the air passages, soothes the angry membranes and rids you instantly of that stuffed-up feeling. "Pineoleum" bathes the inflamed membranes in a spreading, penetrating film of healing oil that protects the tissues and also inhibits the growth of germs.

And this now famous "Pineoleum" oil spray method not only soothes a cold away—it will help protect you against colds! Use it for the children, too—before they start for school. They like it—it's not like "medicine." All drug stores carry it.

Some New Card Tables

By Edith Weigle

The Modernist Likes His Card Tables as Simple and Unpretentious as the Games He Has Taken Over from His Grandparents.

LAST Sunday we talked about bridge tables of patrician quality. One was a valuable antique and others were quite elaborate. Today we have more bridge tables, but they are modern, and one is a novelty.

Never have the stores showed a greater variety of tables for games. There are the popular ones for backgammon, for instance, which are fascinating in design and workmanship. One of these is a folding table exquisitely hand painted in Chinese yellow, red, or green with an antique lacquer finish. It comes complete with all accessories which are concealed inside when the table is closed. Another in Sheraton style is of mahogany over-painted in various colors and decorated in gold. Two flat leaves open like a book, disclosing the gaming board and forming extensions at either side of the table. Both of these tables are small and can easily be moved from place to place.

There are other models in natural wood finish and there are special four way gaming tables in period design, inlaid and engraved, for backgammon, checkers, poker and bridge. You buy one table and you play four games!

For the lover of contemporary decoration there is the extremely simple and smart modern table, illustrated today, of metal and bakelite. It is shown at the January style show at the American Furniture Mart and is attracting much attention. The table legs are tubular metal with a chromium finish and the shiny black top is impervious to burns and stains.

The accompanying chairs are also of metal with comfortable upholstered seats and backs covered in a new striped silk material that won't fade. This gay little group would be ideal for a sun room, or for the porch or terrace, next summer.

Natural rattan and stick reed, the two most favored mediums for out of door or sun room furniture, are to be seen in a variety of new models emphasizing comfort and brilliancy of color. Among these is a rattan breakfast or bridge table with under shelves, and four chairs of simple, smart lines that fit comfortably under the top. This is one of the cleverest sets I have come across. And the durability of rattan is remarkable. Weatherproof cushions make it ideal for use in the little pent house terrace, or in the common, or garden variety of back yard.

The furniture industry's gift to solitaire players made its debut at the furniture show at the mart, recently. A picture of this convenient little one woman table is shown today. The top rests on the arms of a chair and the one leg is adjustable so that you can get any angle desired. Could anything be nicer than this for Canfield, cross word puzzles, jig saw puzzles, reading, or drawing?

If you're like one of the young marrieds I overheard at lunch, the other day, you'll eat your lonely noon meal on it rather than sit at the dining room table in solitary grandeur. And a newspaper man I know, who received a table like this, for Christmas, thinks it is one of the most convenient things he's ever had. When not in use it folds up and takes up no more closet space than a board.

There were ever so many novelties and interesting pieces of furniture at the show, but more of this later.

A solitaire table, convenient and practical.

This group is ideal for the sunroom or porch.

Needlework

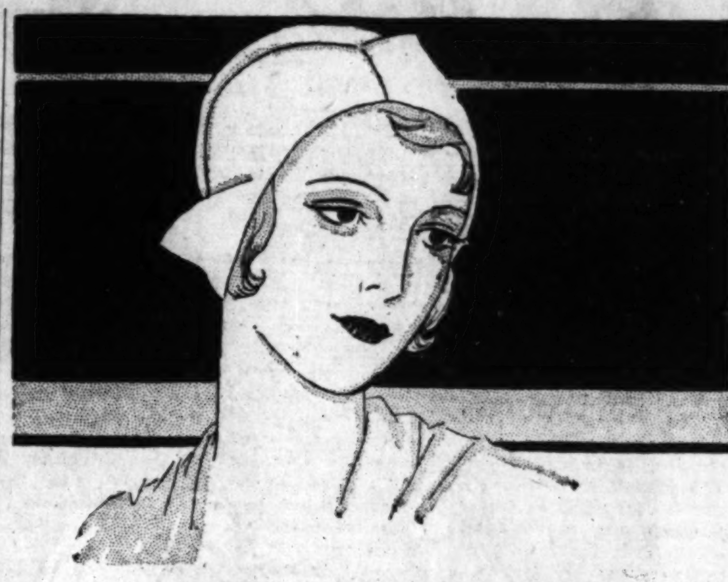
Among Hat Styles, Paris Recommends the All White and the Beret Fashioned from Flat Furs.

THIS season has brought so many interesting new things in millinery that it is a pleasure to have the opportunity to let the readers in on them. We will take the all white felt hat, so popular now, first. In the past, when the luggage was being packed for the summer sports season or for the southern resorts it was not complete unless there was an all white felt hat in it. This could be worn with the all white costume and would also be appropriate for wear right with all the pastel shadings and the strong colorings of other costumes.

This season the all white hat stands out alone. The promotion of the all white hat is particularly important since Paris reported early in the season that the all white hat was repeating its summer's success and was being worn with black frocks trimmed in white.

Some of the shapes show a brim folded back from the face with a small flat bow of black galyak set on the right side. Black glycerin ostrich contributes a contrast to another white felt model.

The next startling millinery news is the all fur hat that is so popular this season. The hat shown is an all fur Russian tricorne turban in black galyak. Galyak and caracul are the two flat furs used in making either bicorne or Russian tricorne. Cut ermine or Lapin is used more in the beret style, as it is a deep fur and is too bulky for use on a fitted hat.



In many respects, types for the young child or junior follow the tricorne and bicorne styles, also the Russian modes now being worn by women. The strong colorings of that cold country are brown, dark green, and white, combined with bright red and vivid blue. These color combinations are often used in plaids for children's costumes.

Personal Chic of Wearer Seen in Fashions Decreed by Paris

daytime length. The blouse décolleté is daytime in front and evening in back, bordered by a tailored collar of self-material. Two flaps of white satin at the waistline in back suggest masculine coat tails, and the double tiers of black satin at the top of the skirt divide in back to further this illusion. The lower skirt is plaited at front and back.

There is a three-quarters length coat that has a shawl-and-scarf-in-one collar in front, which curves into a draped décolleté in back, adding surprise and chic. This draped back décolleté is held firmly in shape by a white satin band across the top of the shoulders and back of the neck. The tailored evening ensemble of this type is the most important new Paris evening mode, and a tailored simplicity controls many formal evening frocks, as well.

An example of this is Lelong's nile green triple georgette evening ensemble, shown today. The blouse and double peplum of this model are made of narrow bands of georgette, caught under like the medieval doublet on the two peplums. The skirt is box plaited at the top and falls in unpressed folds below. The narrow standing circular ruffles at the armholes are a new detail. With this frock there is a waist length jacket of the same material, with a capelet of georgette bands and a standing collar of the material. It is shown in the small sketch.

Period Styles Modernized.

This Lelong ensemble shows how the period costume may be completely modernized to suit the woman of today, and the Worth lace evening gown shown elsewhere illustrates another manner of doing this. This frock is made of moss green lace and its long, tight sleeves and high front, low back décolleté are new Worth features. The silhouette is princesse in front and ruffles across the back suggest the line of 1880. The simplicity of this Worth model is the new simplicity that fashions are going into this coming spring.

Lelong's latest evening gown, shown in the sketch, is of darkest brown ribbed silk, trimmed with fluted ruffles of tulle in the same color, and one of the most successful southern resort evening gowns from Paris. The standing ruffle below the tulle shoulder yoke and the side movement of the ruffles on the skirt are particularly interesting features of this smart frock.

MERCHANTS INTERESTED IN STONE MAKE FROCKS ARE INVITED TO WRITE THE LA CROSSE GARMENT CO., LA CROSSE, WISC.

The SIGN of the NARCISSUS by HENRY C. ROWLAND

The Story So Far:

Narcissa Vandersee's father is a wealthy contractor with an estate at Peekskill on the Hudson. She notices a plane flying twice daily over the estate, and learns from a published photograph that the pilot is John Flint, Princeton graduate, who runs an air taxi for Tammany politicians between Manhattan and Albany. She has the gardener design an enormous narcissus, to be seen from the air. The pilot sees the flower and comes down to pay his respects. He tells Narcissa he is planning to start a tourist air service between Miami and the Bahamas. On her twenty-first birthday Narcissa asks her father for his old yacht and plans a trip to the Bahamas, with Capt. Hank Broek as navigator and Greta Tietjens as companion-secretary. The captain doesn't think much of the idea.

INSTALLMENT II.

Up in the Air.

CAPT. HANK managed to struggle to the main rigging, grip the shrouds and hang to them, panting. But he was a strong man with arteries still elastic, and after a brief struggle mastered the paroxysm. Narcissa rose and stretched herself, leaning back with long, round arms extended, hands clasped above her head. She looked like a beautiful and capable nymph guardian of the Rheingold, or a Lorelei about to dive off her rock and shove the head of a swimmer under. Her strong white teeth came together with a click.

"Well, I must be shoving off, old dear. I've got lots to attend to."

"I have a notion to attend to you. With a rope's end."

"Start it and see where you finish." She swung toward him, lithe as a sea otter. "That would be overboard, and then I'd hand you over to Master at Arms David Jones, A. B., and that jimmy legs would stow you in his locker."

"And to think it was me brought you up aboard," Capt. Hand wailed, "when you were crawling round the decks on hands and knees with a lanyard to you, so you should not get over the rail when my back was turned. O, dear, what a bad job I have made of you. It is enough to drive me to drink."

"It doesn't need that. 'Reading maketh a full man.' You read too much collateral history. You are getting fat. The tropics would have been just your dish, to reduce. But it's too late now. You've resigned."

"I have not. I said only I had a good notion to resign. But now it is impossible. What could I tell your father?"

"Just what you've been telling me. That your billet is as yacht captain, and not head keeper of an insane female member of the Vandersee family on her private floating retreat."

"That would be no more than truth."

"Tell him also that the time has come when your life must be devoted to your art. That the pen is mightier than the belaying pin. History has called you, and you must go."

"O, dear, are you trying to make fools of me?"

"No, not even one. Nature beat me to it. Then you haven't resigned?"

"No!" the badgered mariner shouted.

"All right. Then you're fired."

"I am not. There are still some things that even a spoiled baggage of a modern American girl cannot do. Firing me, Heinrich Broek, master mariner, is one of them. I have sworn off."

"Off what?"

"Being fired. There has been too much of that nonsense. Whenever I am firm, for your own best good, somebody tries to fire me. Once it was your father, and once your Aunt Wilhelmina, and now it is you. Next I suppose it will be Greta Tietjens that tries to fire me."

"I'd say she had done that already, in a different way. The way you fire a tar barrel."

"So. It is insults now." Capt. Broek drew himself up with dignity. "I have nothing more to say. What are your orders?"

Narcissa threw back her head and gave a laugh. A circling gull laughed back at her. The girl swooped on the sturdy avatar of an earlier Dutch mariner who had sailed up that majestic stream, threw her arms around his neck and, still laughing, kissed both of his hot, brick red cheeks.

"Get her alongside the yard wharf, darling, and stand by to take on cement, and iron rods, and bricks, and water, and stores, and bricks, and your Finns and Laps and Letts, and bricks, and bricks, and bricks."

Capt. Hank nodded. "So," he said gloomily, "in brief I am to get everything we can beat out of the Vandersee Construction company."

"That's the idea, samples of all their stock. If I like it I may put in a big order later on, accompanied by a check."

"The check," opined the captain, "will come when you father gets back from Europe."

Not So Sure

Narcissa shook her tawny head. "Not so sure. He has always complained about my lack of inherited Dutch thrift. He says that I am destructive rather than constructive. I want to show him that he is wrong. Every big plant has a lot of waste product, and that is what I want to use. I don't care if the iron is badly rusted, and the cement old, and planks knotty and sappy, and the bricks chipped, and the Finns and Laps and Letts and things a lot of dumbbells. I am not building for posterity. We moderns build for prosperity."

She looked expectantly at her sailing master, waiting for him to say something. Then, as he did not, she observed in a gentler tone: "Since you wisely refrain from asking me what it is all about, I'll tell you. I am going to start something new."

"I believe you," said Capt. Hank. "What?"

"An idea. We are on the threshold of a new age, which is the age of the air. We have been living and moving about in two dimensions, but now we are going to live in three. Up to this time our aspect of things has been from in front and from behind and from the sides. Our viewpoint of externals has been from the same plane, so we build accordingly. Houses and villages and towns have been planned to stand inspection from their own level. Do you follow me?"

"Of course. I am not so dumb."

"From the outside of a house," Narcissa pursued, "we think only of how it looks from where we stand. If those proportions strike the eye as right, then it is all right. We don't know anything about the ground plan or the roof or the rooms inside. But when we are inside one of the rooms, then the three dimensions of that has to be right, too, because we are aware of them. And if we are directly overhead, then the plans of the building and its grounds have to be right because we are aware of them, too."

"So that is it," said the captain. "You want to build your camp to be looked at from a plane. An airplane."

"Right, Cappy. Not only the camp but the whole cay. Not only in form but in color scheme. Like a flower. The cay is nearly round, but that does not matter. Flowers are not all of geometric design. Some of the loveliest are irregular, like a rose, or an iris, orchid, or a ladyslipper."

Capt. Hank was getting interested. "But they are regular in color," he objected.

"Good for you, old dear thing." Narcissa's eyes sparkled. "But what about some that are variegated in one blossom. Nasturtiums, marigolds? Anyhow, you get the idea. I am going to build my camp and lay out that little dab of sand to be looked at from in front, behind, sideways, and from above, so that it will be like a lovely multicolored blossom floating in a bowl of pale blue water."

"Perhaps you are not so crazy as I thought, Narcissa. But who is going to look at it?"

"Hendrik Hudson might have asked himself the same question the first time he sailed up this river. But it wasn't so long before a good many people were looking at it."

"By gum, that is true. Only from fore and aft and sideways, like you say. It is only in the last few years they begin to look at it from aloft."

"There you are. Now this cay is nearly on a direct line of flight from Florida points to the Windward islands, and if there was something worth looking at they would swerve to look at it. When the times comes I'll give it publicity. Put colored photographs in the hotels and airports. 'Fly Over Miraflora Cay,' and underneath, 'The harbinger of the future. A pioneer beauty spot of the building to come, offered for your inspection by the Vandersee Construction company. Narcissa Vandersee, art engineer.'"

"Hooray," burst from the throat of Capt. Heinrich Broek. "Come, let us be getting alongside."

An Orange Flame

The sun's "lower limb," as navigators say, kissed the horizon that was ruled straight across a sky that was soft but clear. There poured out from the incandescent sphere an orange flame that was invisible until it found a brilliant reflection in objects opposite, as far as the sky and as near as twin moles on the little cay ahead, and the deep laden schooner yacht approaching it with a faint breath of air in her ruddy sails. A flight of flamingoes drifting toward their lodgings for the night were like crimson firebrands against a pale blue zenith.

To these birds the sturdy "brick barge" may have resembled a delicate insect of brilliant hues crawling over an opalescent shell, the inside of a flat pearl oyster shell of which the matrix split the solar spectrum into hues of infinite delicacy and variety. Such air as still stirred was fair and aloft from the surface of water that seemed too thin and light and rare to support so ponderous an object as the yacht. To the enraptured girl she seemed to be gravitated and suspended in a clear, transparent plasma that intensified rather than veiled the bright fine sand under it, with coral heads of delicate tracery and gleaming shells and a sea garden of multicolored flowers over which hovered bright, birdlike fish.

Narcissa could not have viewed her island under lovelier auspices. From the distance it rested as if floating there, in need of anchoring lest it drift away. There were the rosy golden beaches, and the sort of fantastic rocks and ledges that Turner loved to paint, and greens that were not the greens most people know, but suffused with complementary coloring, and the whole of the mass was swept and brushed with sensitive chromatic notes that were not of pigment, but of glamour.

Yet Narcissa felt depressed, less from the heat than from a sudden realization of the bizarre departure from all the othodox, civilized effort that she had set in motion. She was faced suddenly and appallingly with the difference between the projection of an idea and its actual undertaking. It was one thing to study charts, draw plans, elaborate an artistic fancy in words and in sketches, and another to take a desolate patch of rock and sand and scrub set down in this lovely waste of waters as a thing of wild and natural beauty and mold it into something of striking artificial beauty.

Here now it lay before her like something in a dream, the like of which she had never seen elsewhere, and that scarcely any person of her sort and class had ever seen at all. Early voyagers had seen it, profited by its strange abundance of outcropping sweet water, and so had later fishermen and spongers. But who else really was ever apt to see it at all, even when she should have wrought it into something of rare artistic beauty, a sort of bibelot on a titan scale? Would she really live to see aircraft flying over it and their passengers looking down with wonder and a good deal of awe at the lovely model of what promised to be the architecture and landscape gardening of the era into which civilization was entering?

The very remoteness of the place had appealed to Narcissa because she had desired to work undisturbed and free from curious prying to carry out her idea. Then, if successful, it might burst on the eyes of an astonished world as a prodigy, an exemplar, an archetype. Flights would be made merely to survey this delicately and exquisitely beautiful piece of human artistry that was to be a chef d'œuvre from any point of view possible to human observation.

She had taken her design from a spray of hibiscus and a spray of yellow narcissus with their buds and leaves laid on a piece of green moss, the whole floating in a bowl. This she had then blocked out in squares, to scale. It was now her ambitious undertaking to execute in building and in landscape gardening in such a fashion that from an altitude of even two thousand feet the floral design would be easily distinguishable, a spectacle of beauty and of wonder. From the same plane, that of the sea, the buildings and terraces and gardens would from so limited a viewpoint be revealed merely as charming, with a picturesque irregularity.

Misgivings

Her first intention had been to build merely the bungalow and its immediate surroundings on a floral design, geometric perhaps, like phlox or aster, but of variegated colors, like sweet william. Then, carried along by her enthusiasm, she decided to elaborate it to include as much of the island as possible. She argued that the bulk of the effect might be achieved in terracing and gardening. It was not necessary to build a Luna park to describe a floral picture seen from the sky. The camp buildings, large and small, could be built in the form of the hibiscus and narcissus, roofed in brilliant red and yellow tiles, and graduated to deeper ones for shadowing. Coral paths would serve as stems, and the leaves could be done in bright green of any growing sort. At any rate, it would be gorgeous fun to try.

But now as she beheld the island in its soft natural beauty and setting, Narcissa's heart misgave her. What she proposed seemed like painting the lily and perfuming the rose. She thought of the labor gang engaged, the building and grading and terracing. A sort of panic seized her. It was merely the dread lest it all be for nothing. Like erecting a palace in a wilderness. Chart or no chart, she was suddenly oppressed by the sensation of being in the middle of a desolation of softly smiling water. Rainbow Cay, that she had planned to rename Mira Flora Cay, seemed to be a single tiny patch in the middle of a world composed entirely of sky and sea. There were other islands all about, she knew, one of them at that moment easily visible, but she ignored it. From the moles on her cay half a dozen lovely islets were all about, and she ignored them, also. It seemed to her that this was the only region of the earth where no people ever came or were.

It was at this moment of that sort of appalling sense of being poised alone in space that is at the antipodes of claustraphobia when it seemed to Narcissa that not only was there a wonderful vibration of color all about, but that it had sound as well. Up forward the hands were clearing the anchor, after lowering the headsails. A moment later the foresail came slithering down. But it was not these familiar sounds that had caught the girl's ear. A far-distant thrumming filled it. She turned and said to Miss Tietjens: "Am I going coo-coo, or do I hear a plane?"

Her secretary laughed. "Call it telaudience—prophetic hearing into the future. I was just wondering if really anybody ever has flown or ever will fly over this beautiful emptiness. The chart looks like a piece of overworked flypaper right here, but it really looks like the fortieth day of the flood."

Narcissa looked straight up. High in the zenith was a bright tiny spark, an incandescent ember from which streamed away rosy wreaths of vapor. The sun, now under the horizon, seemed to shoot this drifting mote with the focussed force of its submerging strength, and it stabbed to earth again a dazzling point of light.

Narcissa gave an involuntary sob. She flung up her long beautiful rounded arms in sudden impassioned appeal. It was a gesture of Andromeda chained to the rock at her first glimpse of Perseus' flashing blade as it heliographed its message of courage and of rescue. Here, just at this zero moment of her discouragement, despondency, dread of a solitude, however sweet, that seemed to threaten permanency, came in the high heavens this sign and portent, this harbinger of what was yet to come. The sea might be vacant in that place, but the sky was alive.

"O, come down—come down," she cried.

Capt. Broek's rough sea voice called forward: "Leggo your anchor."

The sand hook splashed over the bow and the chain cable clattered out through the hawsepipe. Narcissa cried again: "O, dear, come down."

Then, as if in answer to her invocation, the prodigy occurred. The gleaming speck appeared to vanish utterly for an instant, and the next to reveal itself as a broader flash of rosy flame. It described an arc drawn downward in a swift and beautiful curve. Again it seemed to vanish, except for the tiniest glittering point, and then it spiraled again.

"By gum, he must have heard you," Capt. Broek said. "Or maybe he got your radio."

Narcissa could not answer. Thrill after thrill went through her, and her eyes were wet. Not only her augury appeared, but it refused to pass her by; was not deaf to her appeal. It would not pass her by. Invisible lines stretched between them. This falcon was coming to her lure. Whoever that pilot might be, whatever his condition or estate, Narcissa knew at that instant that she was destined to love him. It was impossible that there could be any reason or obstacle against her loving him. He would be young and tall, and keen as a questing osprey, that pioneer of the Bahamas high air. Here was a lover and a comforter coming straight down out of the lofty arch of heaven just when she had been most of all her life in need of encouragement and comforting . . . and perhaps a lover. Perhaps it was the hour striking for that latter that had first inspired her to attempt this mad thing.

The plane spiraled down, still flashing and glittering at every sweeping arc until suddenly it dropped under the planet's curve and lost the sun that was well down in its swift tropic setting. Then it became, like the yacht, a thing of man's devising, a fabric of artifice and of art. Its gold had turned suddenly to gray, and its glory to utility.

But Narcissa was no longer thinking of the vehicle itself, but of the soul to animate it. She watched it breathlessly, a pink color in her face that was not of the brief afterglow's making. The plane soared away from them, turned, rushed toward them directly like something swift and without substance. Lower it came until its sleek body appeared to glide along the smooth opal surface as if it were ice. Then a skimming splash and it took the water with a sort of joy, like a gallant, tired bird.

It taxied up under the schooner's stern and stopped. Narcissa's eyes were all for the pilot as he pulled off his hood and showed the black hair, lean, tanned face and aquiline features that she had expected. His smile, with the corners of a wide mouth tugged down a little from fatigue, was just as she had known that it would be.

Then at his words Narcissa could have hugged him to her heart, for they, too, were prophetic, just like all the rest of him, his being there.

"Well, well," he said in a singularly pleasing voice, "so here we come by sea and air to put these Bahama islands on the map."

Glad of the Dusk

Later, as they sat on a big boulder and watched the moon slide its great orange colored disk up out of the sea, Narcissa asked him just what he had meant by that introductory remark. She did not tell him how it had voiced her own thought, and given it a ring of prophecy.

"I was beginning to think I was wrong about anybody but spongers and turtlers inhabiting these islands. Then I sighted your schooner and I saw through the glasses that she had the lines of a yacht, but seemed to have a deckload of bricks. That suggested a settler."

"So you dropped down to see what it was all about?"

"No, not exactly that." He gave her a puzzled look. "Usually I stick to my own business. We were going on to Long cay for the night. I felt that we were being hailed, for some reason. That must have been a gregarious instinct."

Narcissa was glad of the dusk. She stifled the impulse to say, "O, but you were, with all that was in me." Instead she asked: "Do you think that we are pioneers of others to come?"

"It's certain. A wide flung archipelago of lovely islands like this right on our shores can't be neglected much longer, now that we've got the ideal means of access to it. Think of it; we could get up tomorrow morning at sunrise and have breakfast at the Royal Flamingo in Miami."

"You make my long voyage sound like my great-grandmother's adventurous wedding tour, the length of the Erie canal in the director's boat de luxe."

"The Florida beaches looked like this place then," Flint said. "And what about them now?"

"Will you fly over my cay?"

"Smack. And drop your mail and papers when you're here."

This would give her six months, Narcissa reflected. Her hibiscus and narcissus ought to be in bloom by then. Red tiles and yellow, varying in shade, and vivid green ones for glossy leaves. Other features might be added; dewdrops represented by cloches, the bell jars under which primeurs are forced in France. Even a brilliant insect, a butterfly or demoiselle dragon fly. Fresh inspiration kindled in her at the idea of an audience, marveling eyes looking down on her work from the sky. She thought of the senseless sophistry: "If a tree falls in the desert where there are no ears to hear, it makes no noise." Just so, if a sea garden bloomed on a desert island where there were no eyes to see, it bloomed invisibly. This misgiving was what had dismayed her. Art for art's sake was all right, but not when you did it with shiploads of bricks and tiles and faience, and a crew of Laps and Letts and Finns and thirty Bahama niggers.

She felt that she could not bear to let this source of strength fly away from her the next morning. Every word he spoke, the very sound of his soothing voice was like vintage wine. There was a fate in him. He was her own particular god from the machine bringing her a full, deep draught of what every girl most craves, a fullness of self-expression, a claim on the great world's consideration.

Not a Coincidence

Flint was silent for a moment, then said: "You haven't needed to come to the Bahamas to be a pioneer, Narcissa of the Sea."

"What do you mean?" Narcissa's heart began to pound violently.

"What does all of it mean?" Flint's voice had a vibration that was harsh. "For six months I was a pair of wings for Tammany heelers, and some of the big Democratic June bugs, too. Night after night I flew over your place, and that bright lotus shone up at me like a mystic symbol I could never read. I never wrote to ask the answer because of a feeling that some day or night it might unfold and show the answer, on the heart of it, if flowers have hearts."

"O, they have," Narcissa answered trembling.

"And now, no sooner do you get to this man-forsaken wilderness of water and patches of coral sand than I fly over you again, and you tell me that I am apt to keep on flying over you indefinitely. Like Polaris rotating in about two and a half degrees over the pole. What's it all about? There are limits to coincidence."

Narcissa said in a smothered voice: "It's not coincidence."

"Well, what then? I never knew there was a you until last June."

"Now that you do know, what do you think?" Narcissa asked.

"Opposite coincidence is destiny," Flint said. "It looks as if I were destined to hover over you, towed round wherever you go, like a kid with a toy balloon."

"Don't take it so hard, John Flint. There's no string on you."

"There is, though," he said irritably. "An invisible one. There's no string on that planet over there, but it circles us like a ball swung round your head, with a string it's tugging at. I'm beginning to believe that you hauled me down out of the sky a couple of hours ago. I felt a tug."

"And what if I did?"

"I don't care much about being hauled down that way, even by you," Flint said shortly. "I've always thought that I was footloose and wing free and going to stay that way."

"Well, why not?" Narcissa rose, so that he might not hear the thumping of her heart. "You can keep on flying over me indefinitely. You don't have to light."

"I didn't have to light tonight, but all the same I did."

She had moved a step away from him on the big flat rock as he sat with his hands clasped round his knees. Flint had not offered to rise, and he looked up at her with a frown.

"And what am I to you?" Narcissa asked.

"You are the biggest thing in the universe. An irresistible, attractive force." He rose slowly and stood facing her. Narcissa was like a shaft of marble fashioned by the moonlight into a feminine figure of sheer beauty. "And now that I have met you, the air is never going to be free for me any more. The tug of gravity is nothing to the tug of you."

"I shall never tug at you, John Flint," Narcissa said.

"You can't help it, Narcissa of the Sea. You glow up at me like that flower you made, and draw me as if I were any other insect buzzing round in the night over a road light."

"That's not my fault."

"Of course not. There might be something to do about it if it were, It's not mine, either."

"What are you going to do about it?" Narcissa asked.

"Fly away at dawn. If I stayed here another day I should never want to leave."

Narcissa nodded. "It's not yet time for you to stay with me. We've both got an awful lot to do."

"Yes, it's easy to become a lotus eater instead of a lotus builder. Are you going to make me one to look at when I fly over here?"

"That and more."

Valiant Dignity

"It will be enough beauty if I can look at you." Flint was looking at her hard in the growing moonlight. By day Narcissa's physical exponent was an ardent vitality that revealed itself in rushes, bursts of tremendous energy that alternated with pause that was contemplative, almost drooping. At such moments her head, shoulders, full round arms were apt to sag. With all of her tremendous vigor she overran her strength, then had to wait for it to catch up with her.

But now the moonlight described her differently, attenuating the robust symmetry inherited from early Netherlanders, lighting her as she stood straight and slender with a sweet profile brushed upward as to chin and lips, and the tip of her dainty nose looking up at Flint. There was a valiant dignity in Narcissa's soldierly pose, shoulders back, bosom thrust out proudly and arms hanging with the slight crook at the elbows that tells of strong muscles tonic in repose.

"You can look at me whenever you like, and as close as you like, John Flint," she said. "I know what you're thinking—that you are a commercial flyer trying to start on your way, and I am the only child of Cornelius Vandersee."

"Isn't it true?"

"Yes, so far. My father is still a Dutch father, and he already has his eye on the man he wants me to marry. With an alternate or two."

"That's natural. Some day I may hate to see my daughter and accumulated millions falling for the first buzzard that flops out of the sky."

"Don't try to be flippant. You know as well as I do that there's more in all this than chance. We've both got an enormous lot to do. We've each got to prove the ability to organize and run our own shows."

"What is yours, Narcissa?"

"To show my father that I am not only his daughter, but the child of a long line of early voyagers and builders, and able to stand on my own solid legs."

"Would building a bungalow in the Bahamas do that?"

"There's more to it than that. I shan't tell you now. There are two things I want you to do for me, now you're here. Then I'll refuel and provision you and you can fly on your way."

"Whatever you like, in the line of service, Narcissa."

"Tomorrow when the sun is high I want you to take me up to look down on this cay from 1,500 feet altitude, and photograph it. Then I should like to have you take Capt. Broek to Nassau. He is going to bring down another cargo of material."

"And leave you women here on the cay with that black labor gang you're expecting?"

"They'll have their cheffy, and we've got four good men, one of them a Russian giant who's been a soldier and an officer, we think."

Flint frowned. "Well, I'll ask them at Government house to keep an eye on you. After all, this is the B. W. I. Laws are enforced, and quick."

"You can fly the captain over and come back," Narcissa said. "You don't know it yet, but we are going to be partners one of these days."

"Yeah?" Flint's voice was dry, a little bitter. "When you manage to convince Cornelius Vandersee that you really don't need his backing to build for yourself, and I show him that the firm of Flint & Co. is in a way to crowd coastwise touring traffic back into the hinterland."

"Well, why not? You've got your covered wagon, and I've got an island and a new idea. You wait and see."

"There's already an air service from Miami to Nassau," Flint said. "Been operating for three years."

"Yes, and the B. & O. was running trains in 1825. But there's been quite a lot of money made in railroad transportation since." She laid her hand on his arm. "You've got vision, John, or you wouldn't be here now. Don't you see what's to be done with all this raw material? Hundreds and hundreds of islands in a smooth, shallow, lovely sea? It can be made the rest and recreation ground of a great continent. You are riding the brim of a big tidal wave of development."

"Gosh, I'd like to have you talk to a board of directors."

"I expect to, when the time comes," Narcissa said, calmly. "I'm not a Vandersee for nothing. The first decent houses in Nieu Amsterdam were built with the bricks of my ancestors up the Hudson."

"Yes, and mine paddled along the shores with flint-locks resting on the canoe spreaders. Maybe one of them told a Vandersee girl about the wonders of Niagara Falls."

"So here we are again," Narcissa said, and her lovely face shone at him in the reflection of the moon like the glowing narcissus flower in which her nascent idea of the building for the future had first exfoliated.

Flint tried hard to resist this fresh tug. Hitherto he had told himself that there was not yet time in his busy life for love, and now there seemed less time for it than ever. This was the building hour. As Narcissa swayed toward him his hands fell on her two strong shoulders and he held her at arm's length. It was like an allegoric gesture.

"First we've got to build," he said.

Narcissa smiled. "John Flint, was there ever anything built, even this earth we're standing on, that wasn't built of love?"

There was nothing to say to that. Flint's arms slid lower and drew her close to him. Narcissa's bare, cool ones slipped around his neck. The first idea of the world laid the cornerstone for this newest one, which was to build for the celestial viewpoint.

From the Air

Flint took her up when the sun was high, to study Miraflores cay from the sky and to photograph it.

From the air Narcissa observed two details of the cay that would prove valuable to the execution of her work, and the photographs should record them sufficiently for her to carry out the design, from her mental notes. In the first place, she saw precisely where to place the dominant salients, and she discovered that from the shore near these positions there ran out into the shoal water, of which the bottom was distinctly visible, thin, curving coral ledges. These, she perceived immediately, could be utilized in striking fashion to delineate the continuation of the flower stems into the clear blue water.

It looked to her also as if it would prove far less difficult than she had feared to get the desired effect. Through an atmosphere that was bright, while soft, even such color notes as existed naturally glowed out with exquisite radiance. Her brilliant tiles properly shaded could not help but depict a floral design that must be indescribably lovely and amazing, especially as observed on that wide expanse of topaz water where there would be no distraction to the eye.

Narcissa was swept by a burning desire to get immediately about the work. She had no longer any doubt at all about her artistic ability to accomplish it. Her studies of flowers in both oil and water color had taken prizes and been awarded honorable mention in different exhibitions, and she had sold a number of them through dealers. All that was now required was to make her final design in color, square it to scale, and then elaborate it as closely as possible in building and landscape gardening.

In this fresh access of creative ardor even her self-admission of the fact that she had fallen suddenly in love was submerged . . . possibly to serve as an invisible foundation for her artistic engineering effort, like the concrete caisson work of the Statue of Liberty. But where previously Narcissa had been thrilled at the uncertain prospect of showing her idea to random tourists of the air, her ambition now focussed on the delighted thought of presenting it to the astonished and englamored eyes of John Flint—if those cool, steady, analytic eyes could be englamored. At least they had seemed to her that way for a few rapturous minutes in the moonlight.

When they came down, Narcissa said: "I'm going to do more than I'd first planned, John, and do it quicker. The governor's aid at Nassau suggested a black labor gang with their boss and he's right."

"It will need some heavy labor for terracing. What about water?"

"That's plentiful and constant here. Ships used to call to fill their casks at all seasons. John, I can make a prodigy of this patch of rock and sand and coral reef."

"I'm the one to benefit, Narcissa. It will be the feature of the flight."

"If my plans work out, it will be worth flying over from Florida just to see. I chose one of the islands your red line went through on the chart because I don't want my sea rose to blush unseen."

"No fear. May I use it in my publicity campaign?"

"Yes, when it's finished. That ought to be before you start your service. The autumn rains should put my gardens in full bloom at Christmas in this climate. Shall I see you before then?"

He shook his head. "After this reconnoissance I'll be close to the job at the factory. What about that first flight? Can you be in Palm Beach New Year's eve?"

"Can do. Perhaps I can lure father down. He would never fly for pleasure, but he might for business."

"Perhaps we can put it to him on such a business," Flint said. "I've got an idea about that."

Illinois Mother Knew Best . . .

WISE mothers find the things that keep children contented, happy, well. Most of them have learned they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The best proof that this method really works comes from the fact that mothers who try it once continue to use it for years, when its help is needed.

The experience of Mrs. P. H. Reser, 5642 Division St., Chicago, is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Betty Lou and Mardeau for more than four years. Whenever they're the least bit constipated or restless I give them a little. It has them comfortable, happy in a jiffy. Their splendid condition proves I knew best when I decided to use this wonderful preparation with them."

For three generations, California Fig Syrup has been the choice of knowing mothers. Physicians endorse the use of this pure vegetable product whenever a child's bowels need help. It contains no harmful drugs; cannot form any habit. Weak stomach and bowels are strengthened by it; appetite is increased; the digestion and assimilation are assisted. So weak, undernourished children usually gain in strength, weight and energy; become happy, buoyant, rosy by its use.

Seven million bottles used a year speak volumes for its effectiveness and merit.

Cinema Alley in Gotham Does Big Business

And Maybe Good Films Explain It.

By Tom Pettey.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.— [Special.] —Business along Cinema alley, sometimes called Broadway, is picking up with the new year. It never was in the sad condition of some of its neighbors, but there were dull November and December days. Right now, however, you could put on a pair of blinders and stumble into almost any theater in the district and find a splendid show. The movie industry is like that. It's just one of Mr. Talkie's whims to feed his public on choice morsels for a period and then suddenly switch them to a couple of weeks of potluck.

Chief among the money grabbers of Apple lane these rainy January days are Douglas Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon"; Ronald Colman's "The Devil to Pay"; "The Man Who Came Back," and "The Royal Family of Broadway." At the theaters where these pictures are showing new records for attendance are being reported daily.

Players Draw the Crowds.

There is an odd thing about Fairbanks and Colman. This observer has repeated in the past that people do not go to shows to see individuals, but because of some certain thing in the film. Maybe we were all wet, for both the above mentioned stars have broken box office records at the two theaters where "Hell's Angels" previously played, and "Hell's Angels" was a spectacle rather than a star picture. O, well, maybe we have been wrong lots of times and did not know it.

Just a word about the Fairbanks picture and we will leave this reviewing business to the authorized reviewers and go on with our knitting. Mr. Fairbanks does wonders with an old story with old treatment. To see Doug in modern clothes is good box office bait, but we had rather see him in picturesque garb. Somehow it is a bit brain taxing to think of the bouncing, dashing Mr. Fairbanks as a market operator of magnificent riches. And then on top of it all, try to imagine a fellow with all that money who has never taken a drink nor loved a woman! It is all wrong, but Fairbanks carried it off better than any one else could have.

Musical Films.

"The New Moon" is an operetta with a Russian princess and a lieutenant who makes love and sings before a lot of soldiers well drilled in quartet work. It is a stable vehicle for Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett. Mr. Tibbett in his Gypsy song is a bright spot in the picture.

Marilyn Miller was available for the pictures, so First National reproduced "Sunny." The dancing is good in the picture, but just because "Sunny" once played on Broadway does not make it hot stuff for the films.

Now then, for some news. Paramount is going to make "Twenty-four Hours" here in the east. The cast has not been selected, or if it has we have not been informed. George Abbott will direct the screen production of the Louis Bromfield novel. If you have not read the book it can be told briefly. The twenty-four hours took place in Manhattan and concerned the lives of a group of a dozen or more individuals, most of them being guests at a dinner party and at least one of them getting killed as the hour hand crawled.

It has been hinted that Helen Morgan will have one of the leads in "Twenty-four Hours," but that is just studio conversation. The production will be started before March.

Back on the Stage.

Eddie Cantor, the famous movie actor who used to be on the stage, is back on the stage and the pop-eyed comedian has smashed a whole box office full of records at the Palace, New York's only straight vaudeville house. When Mr. Cantor stepped out

Trial and Error Methods Find Music Public Wants to Hear

By Edward Moore.

HOW fast does a permanent répertoire accumulate? Or, a little more accurately, what is the ratio between the total number of new musical works that are tried out and those that find enough favor with performers and audiences alike to become permanent items?

It is a by no means uninteresting question for those who are in the business of presenting new music to the public. It is an expensive question when those purveyors happen to be on the operatic side. For once a new opera is mounted in the lavish style necessary for operatic novelties and then proves to be a failure, the history of the undertaking is at once written in the uncheery aspects of red ink, and the figures are not small.

There is only one way to find out, and that is by the trial and error method, and if the errors happen to be many, it is just too bad for all concerned. No one is able to predict in advance, and when the participants get into the problems of preparation and presentation, their sense of proportion grows steadily less than it was before they started.

Success May Be Temporary.

It is worse because a musical work may have a huge success at the start and then die suddenly and permanently. Every one remembers when all the violinists were playing the Meditation from "Thais" and all the pianists Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C-sharp minor, to take small examples. Or, to take a somewhat larger one, when Dr. Stock last season set his audiences on their toes with Ravel's Bolero, and started them ever so unavailingly trying to remember the quirks and twists of that uncommonly tricky tune. But where are those tunes now?

A chance remark, the other night, brought up the idea that an analogy on operatic répertoires might be gained from an orchestral répertoire. It can be only an analogy, for several reasons. Many orchestral pieces are too short to compare with orchestral scores, and none of them can compare in expense with the mounting of a new opera. However, the records were at hand and provided a none too intricate calculation of what novelties Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra have been giving the public during the last twenty years.

This period was chosen for several other reasons. For one, it is as good a cross-section of history as any. For another, during the first half of its existence the orchestra had been fairly busy making up a répertoire a century and a half old of works the musical world admitted should be permanent.

Checking Popular Pieces.

If my addition is correct—I do not guarantee it—during the twenty years between the beginning of the 1910-'11 season and the beginning of the present one, Mr. Stock introduced something like 786 works that the orchestra had not played before. Of these 203 were considered good enough to be repeated later; a little better than 25 per cent.

No person can be as dangerous as the statistician who believes in his own figures, and I do not in the least believe in these. I am certain the ratio is far too high. A single repetition in a later season is by no means a proof that a work belongs in the répertoire or will get there. Besides this, it is certain that the next ten years will, by unanimous consent, put plenty more compositions into the permanent silence. This was only an ef-

John Barrymore Ill in Bed with Tropical Fever

Dolores Jr. Keeps Him Amused.

By Rosalind Shaffer.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — [Special.]— Intimate moments in the lives of Dolores Costello Barrymore and her famous husband, John, were talked over amidst friends at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cawthorne recently. It seems that John, who at present is trying to fight off a tropical fever of the malarial sort, has to spend a lot of his time resting in bed and the baby, Dolores Ethel, likes nothing better than to crawl all over her famous father, who is described as being "too playful for anything."

When John has a phone call that he can answer from the bedside phone, young Dolores Ethel does her best to get the phone away from him with tugs and chuckles. A bad omen, one might say, with the child seeking the center of attention so young, but John thinks it's cute and a lot of his friends stand and listen to the goo-goo declaiming of Miss Barrymore over the phone while John looks on with a rapt expression.

The gift of Dolores to Mrs. Joe Cawthorne, known in her stage days as Queenie Vassar, was a rose silk robe and cushion for Mrs. Cawthorne's chaise longue. It was quite a dainty, lovely thing. And one evening when the Cawthornes came home from the theater the big police dog of the family was sound asleep with his head on the cushion and the robe in a ball beneath him. Now he's getting along with the adequate but less luxurious furnishings of his dog house in the back yard.

Mrs. Leslie Carter Popular.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, she of the flowing auburn tresses known so well on the stage of a generation ago, was among the guests at the Cawthorne party. She wears her auburn crown, unmarred by any white hairs, braided in a coronet. She boasts of the absence of "even a single white hair," but only God and her hair dresser know the truth for, at her age, if this be true, she would be a freak of nature. Real hair, and blonde hair at that, does not last in its gorgeous coloring past youth without artificial aid. That's what the scribe, Antoinette Donnelly, says, so pardon is invoked if it should prove otherwise.

Mrs. Carter appeared in black and white with a wrapped turban of black and white setting off the flaming

Mei Lan-fang Pays "Debt" of American Tour

Chinese Star Says Visit Was Worth $80,000.

By Ernest K. Moy.
[Of the Kuo Min News Agency.]

SHANGHAI.—[Special.] — To repay what he calls "a part of my debt of gratitude to the American people," Mei Lan-fang, the Chinese actor who charmed American audiences last season, opened a four weeks' engagement here to remove an $80,000 deficit sustained by the group of his countrymen who financially backed his tour of the United States.

He was under no obligation to undergo such an ordeal, for none of the financial supporters of the American tour expected that Mei, traveling half way round the world to present so foreign and almost incomprehensible an art as ancient Chinese drama, with a company of more than twenty actors and musicians, and a carload of costumes and properties, would succeed in producing enough revenues to meet the expenses.

These supporters were prepared to meet a loss twice as large, since they had subscribed $150,000 to finance the trip. But the soft spoken, modest Mei insisted that any financial loss must be regarded by himself as a binding personal debt.

Ecstatically Happy.

In reply to my question as to why he decided to travel from Peiping, the old capital of China in the north, to spend four weeks in an engagement which no one required, he asked:

"Do you suppose that after all that the American people did for me—all that they did to make four months of my life the happiest within memory—I could allow any person or group of persons to pay for that?"

I reminded him that the original understanding was that he was to play in America without compensation, and that if any loss were to result he would not be accountable for it.

"But we went to the United States," he countered, "merely to learn, and to express our friendship and admiration for the American people. We were not prepared for and I did not go with the remotest expectation of the honors which they so surprisingly, so generously and graciously heaped upon us. They overcame me with the most delicate courtesies; they made me ecstatically happy when my purpose was to seek knowledge from them. Could I allow any one but myself to pay for this, if money can pay for it?"

"Am I to understand that you regard this as an effort to repay a debt of gratitude to the American people?" I asked.

All for Sentiment.

"No," was his direct reply. "There is nothing I can do to repay an unrepayable debt that is beyond estimation in material terms. I shall play here so that no one shall have lost any money because I enjoyed an experience which shall never, never be forgotten."

He was putting the final touches to his "make-up" and seemed to heave a sigh of relief. "All this arduous and repeated labor for the sake of a sentiment!" I ejaculated.

"If it will make you feel happier," he smiled, "I shall agree that this is being done to pay a part of my debt of gratitude to the American people. Some Americans called me an 'ambassador of good will.' If that means that our visit has helped to increase the mutual esteem and understanding between America and China, the performances I am giving here to make up the cost of that trip are indeed an insignificant contribution to so desirable an end."

Tabloids Get Razzing in Two New York Plays

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—The tabloid press was figuratively taken for a ride in two of the new plays this week. In "Five Star Final" the picture papers were shot full of holes and thrown, so to speak, from a fast moving automobile alongside a distant dump.

In "Midnight" they were bitterly chided for the part they play in publicizing murder, assault, and other deeds of blood letting in the major crime centers of the country.

The "Five Star Final" attack, written by Louis Weitzenkorn, at one time managing editor of the Evening Graphic in New York, is the more savage of the two, apparently because of the bitterness its author feels toward the tabloid on which he was employed. The basis of his indictment is the exhuming of a twenty year old sensational murder story, which drags back into the limelight the lady who did the shooting, but who has since devoted her life honestly to the rearing of the illegitimate daughter she sought to avenge.

To Boost Circulation.

As the story runs, the Evening Gazette in New York is losing circulation. Its editor and proprietor, an elderly and flabby hypocrite, decides to dig up the story of Nancy Vorhees and run it as a serial, with accompanying pictures of the principals and scenes of the crime. Miss Vorhees, seduced and deceived by a prominent Broadway playboy 20 years before, had shot her deceiver dead. Tried for the murder, she had been acquitted and, after her child was born, had married a young bank clerk named Townsend and sought to live down her past.

For twenty years she is successful. Her daughter, ignorant of her origin, is a lovely girl and about to be married to the son of a socially prominent family. The day of the wedding the religious editor of the Gazette worms his way into the Townsend house. The Townsends, thinking him an assistant rector of their church, give him the daughter's latest photograph and all the details of the approaching marriage.

Two Suicides Result.

When the story breaks, with pictures, with features, with lurid headlines, with the parents of the was-to-be groom protesting their son can never marry the illegitimate daughter of a murderess, Mrs. Townsend, unable to bear the scandal, kills herself, and Mr. Townsend, unable to bear the loss of his wife and his job, which threatens because of the scandal, also drinks of the lethal cup.

Hearing the results of this particular circulation campaign, the managing editor of the Gazette drinks his fill of speakeasy liquor and imagines himself a murderer.

In that earlier newspaper play, "The Fourth Estate," written by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford, the conscience stricken editor killed himself because "he was tired of living a life of prostitution." The executive tells his chief what he really thinks of him and of the Gazette and quits his job for the good of his soul. The young people, however, decide to go ahead and make a match of it, and that much is salvaged from the wreck.

A. H. Woods, who made the production of "Five Star Final," has arranged a three part stage which permits the rapid changing of scenes and views of various sections of the Gazette office alternating with those of the Townsend home and the speakeasy. This helps to keep the excitement stirred up, and by the end of the play your typical New York audience is quite excited.

Supported by the Public.

Years ago, when W. R. Hearst introduced what was then known as yellow journalism into America by capitalizing the crimes, passions and frailties of humanity, and immediately found a huge public eager to read reports of them, the New York public was the first to respond. Later, when the picture papers came in and were variously and often cheaply imitated, they gave life to what had previously been more or less dead type stories, and an even larger public rose to the tabloids.

Without the activities of this New York crowd the so-called sensational journals would have nothing to report, and without its feverish support they would die. Its excitement, therefore, over the alleged exposure of its own debasing influences is at least typical.

Arthur Bryon makes a good job of the managing editor part and an effective cast includes Merle Maddern, Malcolm Duncan and Helene Sinnott.

Crime Reporting Criticized.

In "Midnight" the crusading is against the picture papers only, incidentally. The general journalistic custom of exploiting crime stories is here attacked with vigor and a few convincing arguments. This play, too, was written by experienced newspaper persons. Claire and Paul Sifton are the authors. He is now a department editor of the New York World and she a contributor to magazines. Both were graduates of the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

It is the Siftons' idea that crime and the impulses back of crime grow on the thing on which they feed, which is the sort of crime orgy that follows a sensational murder and all its attendant publicity. One good murder trial breeds another, they say, and one gang killing calls for two. It is a vicious and ever widening circle for which the press publicity is largely responsible.

The case example cited is that of the Weldons. Edward, the father, has been foreman of a jury that has convicted a woman of murder in the first degree and she is to be electrocuted the night of the play. Because Weldon, being an honest citizen, was by report largely responsible for the jury's action, his home is besieged by the reporters and he is pressed for a statement.

For weeks, all through the trial and the approach of the last day in

Talking About Plays—Good, Bad, Indifferent

Such as 'Sea Gull,' 'Bad Girl,' 'Jonesy.'

By Charles Collins.

ON THIS Sunday morning a professional observer of the theater in its varying moods and tenses might speak of:

"Bad Girl"; a play that prattles about such serious matters as love, marriage and childbirth. A sociologist would make note of the fact that here, for the first time, the viewpoint and the tone of "confessional" periodical chroniclings have manifested themselves in the drama.

This naïve opus is merely a dramatization of amateur biology. It contains no story that cannot be told in the sentence: They met, they mated, they begot. It reveals certain intimacies of these conditions that are matters of general knowledge, and it deals with them in hushed and trepidant tones, as if to say: "If we speak these lines out loud, the police may rush in and stop the show."

There is really no plot in "Bad Girl"; it is merely a formula in physiology. Certain large hearted critics have called it "human"; I term it unnecessary repetition of a well known laboratory experiment. As I see "Bad Girl," it deals with the female rabbit named Dot, and the male rabbit named Eddie. These characters are hardly as attractive and animated as rabbits, but the comparison will serve to identify them.

In order to construct the semblance of a dramatic plot the play makes Dot so stupid that she cannot understand Eddie, and Eddie so mentally defective that he cannot understand Dot. This failure of comprehension naturally brings about quarrels; hence the alleged plot of "Bad Girl."

Two zeroes are added, subtracted and multiplied in the hope that something will come to this arithmetical juggling. But the result is inevitably zero. The tag of the play is a tasteless joke about a baby that served as the excuse for a burlesque sketch in the "Follies," or some other revue, in the year 1916 or thereabout.

I submit, therefore, that the adjective "human" is not in order when the merits of "Bad Girl" are under discussion. This play is merely a dull case out of the medical text books.

In the lobby of the Apollo theater there are framed placards which quote these words from the sobbing bosom of a New York columnist:

"'Bad Girl' comes closer to the heart of the nation than ten plays staged by the Theater Guild."

Speaking of "Jonesy."

Speaking of plays that "come close to the heart of the nation," what about "Jonesy," at the Playhouse?

Every one, including its authors and actors, knows that "Jonesy" is not a great play. It is just an amusing contraption. The learned and aesthetic directors of art theaters will never knit their brows over "Jonesy," wondering whether or not they should add it to the repertory as a part of their duty toward the American drama.

Nevertheless, "Jonesy" has its merits. While such plays exist, the stage will be able to hold its own as a means of popular entertainment in competition with the cinema. "Jonesy" is to the drama what the comic strip is to the graphic arts.

It deals with plain Americans in comic but human attitudes. It is as sexless and absurd as a high minded politician in his campaign literature. There are laughs in "Jonesy"—good sound, muscular American laughs. It is healthy, unpretentious bourgeois comedy which holds, I suspect, closer communion with the spirit of this realm, this earth, this middle west America than the raw, worried sexiness of "Bad Girl."

Among the plain people of "Jonesy" one may feel at home. Among the plain people of "Bad Girl" one feels that he is attending a session of ex-Judge Lindsey's court of juvenile delinquency. I laughed at "Jonesy"; I groaned at "Bad Girl." I could ride with the theater through a lifetime of "Jonesies" without losing my patience. But after a few more "Bad Girls," coming as successors to "Young Sinners," I will be ready to retire to the more intellectual occupation of chess and checkers editor.

Russian Classic.

Now we come to the latest offering of the Goodman repertory theater—"The Sea Gull," most famous of the handful of plays that have given Anton Tchekhoff rank as a leader of modern Russian drama. It is a masterpiece in its vein; it has the essence of survival in its quiet, melancholy scenes. It is not acted in Russia now, for the soviets have banned Tchekhoff as a spokesman for the old land owning régime; but when the pendulum of Muscovite history swings away from the delusion of communism, it will return to the stage of the Moscow Art theater, where it was born. Meanwhile, it is being acted occasionally in translation all over the world. It is a standard item of Eva Le Gallienne's repertory theater in New York.

Tchekhoff is an acquired taste for American audiences. They find his stories too slight, his characters too moody and frustrated. Even dramatic critics of long experience, who should have acquired a cosmopolitanism of taste, often confront a play by Tchekhoff like jeering baseball fans at a cricket game. . . . Well, cricket is a good game, too, if you have patience and sportsmanship enough to learn the rules.

Nothing of brisk importance happens in a play by Tchekhoff—nothing, that is, until the young man commits suicide or the heroine's heart breaks, in the last act. But the steady throb of life, as the Russians used to see it, pulses through the apparently aimless

Authentic List of Operas.

The figures become worse when one contemplates an authentic list of operas. While I was at work on "Forty Years of Opera in Chicago" I happened to find a copy of a book now out of print, a Dictionary of Operas by the late John Towers, a strange person who had devoted years of his life and almost all his eyesight to the collecting and listing of all the operas ever written. By 1910, when his book was printed, he had accumulated about 34,000 names, the product of some 7,000 composers.

It would take an encyclopedia to get all these into a history, instead of just a catalogue. It would have to include the story of Gretry, of whom it is told that he once was caught in a collapsing building and hit over the head by a falling beam, and who, after being dragged out and patched together, wrote some seventy-five operas. So we reach the somewhat disturbing conclusion that an architect's error had its influence on the development of grand opera.

But look at the grand procession of 34,000 operas and observe how many, or rather how few, make up what is considered a permanent operatic répertoire of today. The Chicago Civic Opera company will, by the end of the present season, have given some thirty-three or thirty-four or thirty-five different operas. It gave about the same number last year, and the number represents just about total capacity working at top speed with an uncommonly alert and experienced company. And plenty of these works are repeated season after season.

With two of the novelties the company can claim rightful success, "Die Meistersinger" and "Die Verkaufte Braut." They are by no means new works as far as years are concerned, but they represent new attempts by the company. They are fine things of their own kind, and they have been put on with a spacious lavishness that means true operatic imagination.

Wherefore, the Chicago Civic Opera company has increased its permanent répertoire by at least two.

"Opera in English."

From an interview with Mary Garden, written by René Devries in the Musical Courier:

"Yes, indeed, I am a patriot. I want to hear, as well as to sing, opera in English, but no translations—real American operas with the librettos as well as the music written by Americans."

After which, there is genuine emotion in the thought of "Camille," by Hamilton Forrest of Chicago, sung in French at the Civic Opera house with Miss Garden in the name part.

The first performances this season of Thomas' "Mignon" and Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde," and the debut of Mario Fiorella as Silvio in "I Pagliacci" are the features of the coming week, which will be the next to the last of the season of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

"Mignon" will be given on Tuesday evening and "Tristan und Isolde" on Thursday evening. The other operas of the week are "The Bartered Bride" on Monday evening, the double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci" on Wednesday evening, the double bill of "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame" and "La Navarraise" at the Saturday matinée, and "Lohengrin" on Saturday evening.

The cast for "Mignon" will include Margherita Salvi as Philina, Coe Glade as Mignon, Tito Schipa as Wilhelm Meister, Chase Baromeo as Lothario, Jenny Tourel as Frederick, Desire Defrère as Laertes, and Eugenio Sandrini as Jarno. The ballet will take part, and Emil Cooper will conduct.

In the cast of "Tristan und Isolde" are Frida Leider as Isolde, Maria Olszewska as Brangaene, Theodore Strack as Tristan, Rudolf Bockelmann as Kurvenal, Alexander Kipnis as King Marke, Eduard Habich as Melot, Giuseppe Cavadore as a sailor's voice, Octave Dua as a shepherd, and Antonio Nicolich as the helmsman. Egon Pollak will conduct.

Germany Portrayed by Wigman.

After the Americanized dance art of Angna Enters, we in Chicago are now to have an opportunity to confront the Germanized dance art of Mary Wigman, who will appear at Orchestra hall next Friday evening.

The contrast would seem to be fairly complete. Miss Enters, with what looks like an American impatience with slavish technic, maintains just enough of it to carry through her wise and witty pictures of womanhood. From what can be learned in advance of Miss Wigman, though she represents in herself the state of mind of modern Germany as expressed in the dance, maintains a technic that holds experienced dancers spellbound, and from this is built up what she expresses.

Her slogan is "Every one can dance." Her manner of the dance is so apparently simple, though in reality so intricate, that the student sees it as something fairly easily learned, and forthwith desires to enter a Wigman class. They say her art invites participation rather than contemplation.

Dancers know she is Germany's apostle of the modern dance. Even the German audiences grow hysterical with delight when she appears. It has been a long struggle. At first they grew hysterical with disapproval, but she has finally won. What she is portraying is the manifestation of soul in body, a dance that tends toward the abstract, at times obscure, rather than the decorative or even the bizarre.

Her program here will consist of three groups, all from dance cycles of her own which run all the way from classic compositions and popular dances to symbolic "rhythmo-plastic displays" without music. In detail, the first and third groups will be from the cycle, "Shifting Landscape," the middle one from "Visions."

Music from the Ether.

Music from the ether will be on exhibition at the Studebaker this afternoon. Maurice Martenot and his sister will give the first Chicago showing of "L'Instrument d'Ondes Musicales" under the sponsorship of the Chicago chapter of Pro-Musica.

Like the instrument demonstrated by Theremin, a couple of seasons ago, M. Martenot's device harnesses the squeal that sometimes annoys radio users, and puts it to musical use. It is promised, however, that the present instrument is as superior to Theremin's as the electric light to the kerosene lamp, which sounds like a large order. Anyway, the prospect is that the Martenot's will imitate orchestra instruments, play such minute intervals as the third, fourth, sixth, and eighth of a whole tone, range from pianissimo to an enormous volume, and go through a range from notes deeper to pitches higher than the present orchestral range. Then they will play some music.

Symphony Programs.

Dr. Stock is continuing his vacation period over another week, during which time Eric DeLamarter will continue to be in charge of the Chicago Symphony orchestra baton. A Tuesday afternoon program, a young people's concert on Thursday, and the Friday-Saturday programs are on the schedule.

On Tuesday Mischa Mischakoff, concert master of the orchestra, will be its soloist, appearing in the Vivaldi-Nachez concerto in A minor and the Ravel "Tzigane." Two orchestra novelties are on the program, Milhaud's Symphony for Wind Instruments and Pedrotti's Nocturne. In addition there will be Tschaikowski's third suite, that of the theme with variations and polonaise, of which only excerpts have been played in a long time, also Chabrier's "Espana" and Ravel's "Alborado del Gracioso."

On Friday and Saturday Daniel Saidenberg, the orchestra's first cellist, will make his first appearance as soloist in the Lalo concerto. The symphony will be Brahms' second, and other numbers will be the "Dardanus" overture and ballet suite by Rameau and Wagner's "Rienzi" overture.

Music Notes.

Dr. Stock is to end his Chicago season as musical director of the North Shore music festival in May. He has told the members of the chorus that among other things on the program there will be Honegger's "King David," which was done by the Cincinnati chorus last season, Roussel's 80th Psalm, and some smaller works not yet announced.

Dean Peter C. Lutkin, director emeritus, will conduct one or two of the concerts and will bring his A Cappella choir to take part. Paderewski will be the chief soloist of the festival and will probably play in two of the concerts.

Two string quartets will assist in the music making of this afternoon. The London String quartet will be at Orchestra hall in works by Beethoven, John B. McEwen, and Brahms. The Marianne Kneisel String quartet will be at the Playhouse with a program of Haydn, Rieti, and Schubert.

My dear Mr. Moore: I was much interested for various reasons in what you wrote, the other day, about the desirability of our hearing Smetana's "Prodana Nevesta" (otherwise "Die Verkaufte Braut," otherwise "The Bartered Bride") in English.

The late Heinrich Conried, with whom I was for four years connected at the Metropolitan Opera house as assistant and secretary and house librettist, thought as you do. About twenty-seven years ago, on the very day when he took charge at the Metropolitan, he sent me to Europe to make important engagements for the opera house. He also handed me the vocal score of "The Bartered Bride," and requested me to begin and complete without a moment's delay an English version of the libretto. I completed the first act on the steamer and the rest soon after.

Later, Rullman's (through Fred Rullman) agreed to substitute my version for the miserable "translation" which they had been in the habit of selling to opera goers. But Fred forgot. And my version, which could be sung easily and clearly, is still unprinted, like over twenty English versions of standard opera books which I have made in the last decade for the "Edith Rockefeller McCormick Edition."

Faithfully,

IN THE COMING OPERAS

MARGHERITA SALVI. [Daguerre Photo.] MARIA OLSZEWSKA. [Setzer Photo.]

THERE is still time to anticipate the joys of operatic first performances. A French and a German work will be added to the list this week. Mme. Salvi is pictured here as she will appear as Philina in Ambroise Thomas's "Mignon" on Tuesday night; Mme. Olszewska as Brangaene in Richard Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" on Thursday night. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that the one is a coloratura soprano, the other a dramatic contralto.

New Coloratura Soprano Makes American Debut

By Joan King.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Lily Pons, French coloratura soprano, made her American début at the Metropolitan Grand Opera house Saturday afternoon. She sang the title rôle of Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," thereby making all the habitués of the old 40th street emporium happy once again. Gatti-Casazza's youthful "discoveries" have been extremely scarce of late.

The reception, which one of the Metropolitan's largest audiences of the season accorded the young soprano, was reminiscent of nothing less than that record making occasion upon which New York took a certain young Kansas City songster to its heart. Indeed, this recent premiere provided those who ever crave the novel, their first thrill in a somewhat dull operatic season.

But there was a difference between the Talley reception and that of Lily Pons. Much press agenting had preceded the former's arrival at the Metropolitan, and the audience which packed the house to hear her was fully prepared for the awarding of honors.

Arrived Unheralded.

Little had been heard about the vocal ability of the French singer. It was only known that she was 26 years old, of French and Italian ancestry, a native of Cannes, and the wife of a Dutchman, August Meserich. She first planned to become a pianist, later appeared on the Paris speaking stage, and finally turned to opera, in which she made her début three years ago. Her recommendation for the Metropolitan came from Maria Gay, the Spanish soprano. Mme. Gay was motoring through Italy last season and chanced to hear Mme. Pons sing. Forthwith she cabled to Gatti suggesting the engagement of the young French songstress.

Almost from the first notes which Mme. Pons sang Saturday afternoon her hearers seemed to realize that at last the Metropolitan was offering a true coloratura soprano. Not even the strain of the Metropolitan debut served to mar the remarkable singing technique which the young French songster possesses. As the opera progressed her audience became more and more enthusiastic until in the "mad scene," when she sang in the key of F as the score was written, but which is so often transposed a whole tone lower, it went wild. Indeed, her reception was the most sensationally successful of any awarded by a grand opera audience here in many seasons.

Yehudi Menuhin in Recital.

Another youthful—extremely youthful artist—entertained a Metropolitan audience royally during the week. This was that now world known genius of the violin, Yehudi Menuhin. Yehudi is just back from a long list of European successes and this appearance at Carnegie hall was his first here this season.

Yehudi will celebrate his fourteenth birthday Jan. 22. He has been appearing in this town since he was 11. His first hearing was as soloist with the New York Symphony orchestra—the youngest ever to play with that band. He played on that occasion Beethoven's concerto in D with Joachim's candenza in the first movement. Immediately he was acclaimed by both public and critical New York. He was called a prodigy and a genius, though a few questioned the advisability of using the latter term to describe one so young and so little heard.

Now, all critical opinion agrees. Yehudi has proved himself a genius. Only a few notes from his Prince Khevenhuller Stradavarius and his audience, which filled Carnegie hall and overflowed the platform as audiences do here for some fortunate half dozen favorites, accepted him as one of the few truly great.

The program which Yehudi chose for his return to New York comprised Mozart's B flat sonata; Viotti's concerto No. 22 in A minor; Schubert's "Rondo Brilliant"; Paganini's "La Campanella"; and shorter pieces by Sarasate, Locatelli and Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Disk Offering Gives Sibelius in New Light

Symphony Reflects Folk Music of Finland.

By Edward Moore.

THOSE who collect symphonies as perpetuated in waxen disks will be interested in what Columbia is releasing thus early this year. It is Jean Sibelius' second symphony in D major, opus 43, and No. 149 in the Columbia Masterworks set.

Apparently Columbia went all the way to Finland to get it. At least the recording has been done by Robert Kajanus and a symphony orchestra, and Kajanus, as the note accompanying the set informs us, is not only Sibelius' own choice in the recording of his works, but music director and professor in the University of Helsingfors.

In these nine sides of the five records—the tenth is given over to the intermezzo from Sibelius' earlier "Karelia" suite—you will get a quite different impression of Sibelius than what you may have acquired from the "Valse Triste," or "Finlandia," or, should you happen to remember that rather lovely melody, "The Swan of Tuonela." Sibelius is Finland's foremost composer, and in spite of the stern, at times forbidding, even melodramatic cast of his music, he has fallen into a lot that all composers pray for and seldom attain. As early as 1897, the Finnish senate realized what he was doing for Finnish music and voted him a life income so that he could devote his time to composition without the interruption of making a living.

Glorifies His Native Music.

Consequently he has devoted his life to glorifying the music of his country. Occasionally Mr. Stock puts this symphony on one of the Chicago Symphony orchestra programs, and one wonders, as one does in this record, how much weather conditions have to do with a country's music. The flowing melody of Italy, the dance rhythms of Spain are unthinkable in this work. It is impressive throughout, it is at times majestic and spacious, but its sonorities are seldom anything but grave, solemn, earnest, as though the business of living in Finland were a serious problem. And this though much of the material of the symphony is a continuing paraphrase on Finnish folk music.

The technical recording classifies as fair. One imagines that there was some trouble in getting Conductor Kajanus' orchestra placed so that it would balance well before the recording apparatus. In addition, the string tone, especially the high strings, are a little thin and unresonant. It is too bad, for this is a work too serious in import to be dismissed lightly.

By one of the curious coincidences that sometimes happen, on the day that the Chicago newspapers were telling of the triumph of Lily Pons at the Metropolitan Opera house in New York with her debut in "Lucia di Lammermoor" delivery was made of a record of Lily Pons in the Mad Scene from that same "Lucia di Lammermoor." It is Victor's Red Seal 7369, and it therefore demanded an immediate test under the needle.

Due for Considerable Fame.

Unless all signs are wrong, Mlle. Pons is due for considerable fame. She is young, and her youth shows in her voice. But she is as able a coloratura soprano as has been heard hereabouts since Galli-Curci was in her first years at Chicago. Her voice has quality, the easiest, most agile kind of flexibility, and a simply enormous range. It was thought worthy of telegraph tolls to say in the dispatches that she climbed to a high F above the staff and set the crowd into a tumult thereby.

That high F is on the record. In fact, by the slight extra speeding that records get on their turntables, it is a high F sharp. But that is the one note I wish she had not been so ambitious to sing. It is just beyond the range that she can do easily, and the effort shows in the tone. Just the same, it is an amazing accomplishment for a young artist—or for an artist of any age.

Victor has a few more Red Seal records that should not be overlooked. One brings a pair of pieces by Andres Segovia, the one and only guitarist of the world. In the course of preparing this column it becomes necessary to listen to many who try to play the guitar. Segovia is the one and only guitar artist of the lot. The pieces are by Torroba, a "Preludio" and "Fandanguilla," and they are perfectly recorded. No. 1487.

Another is some violin music, by that boy wonder, Yehudi Menuhin. No. 7317 it is, with Gustave Samazeuilh's "Chant d'Espagne" on the one side and Serrano's "La Cancion del Olvido" and Spohr's "Rondo" on the other, his instructor, Louis Persinger, meanwhile at the piano. Marvelous tone, marvelous agility of performance there is, which a slight but noticeable nonmaturity of musical conception does not seem to harm. In the next, No. 7318, you will have a pleasant time with the singing of the tenor, Armand Tokatyan, Buzzi-Peccia's "Lolita" and Tosti's "L'Ultima Canzone."

OF "BERKELEY SQUARE"

LESLIE HOWARD.

THIS is the way Leslie Howard looks when he isn't wearing the Georgian costumes of "Berkeley Square," at the Selwyn theater. Mr. Howard's first appearance in Chicago was in "Just Suppose," as the pal of a mythical Prince of Wales. His last, before "Berkeley Square," was nearly six years ago, in "The Green Hat."

Tour Planned for Jane Cowl; Theater News

Eight Shows Ending Life on Gotham Stage.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—[Special.] —Jane Cowl will remain at Maxine Elliott's theater for only two more weeks, and will then go on tour with her repertory of two plays—"Art and Mrs. Bottle" and Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night." She will probably reach Chicago early in the spring. . . . Katharine Cornell hopes to follow Miss Cowle's example by adding a second string to her bow after she has staged "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." She is now trying to find an alternate play.

An impressive list of theatrical productions are ending their New York engagements tonight. It includes Mr. Ziegfeld's "Smiles," "Lysistrata," "Up Pops the Devil," William Bolitho's "Overture," "Brown Buddies," an all colored musical; the revival of "Babes in Toyland," "The Life Line," and "Queen at Home." Most of these attractions will not go on tour. However, "Up Pops the Devil" and "Brown Buddies" have definite plans for traveling. The latter is headed by the tap dancer, Bill Robinson.

Norma Talmadge of the cinema has been discovered on the stage of the Sam H. Harris theater, rehearsing the rôle that Muriel Kirkland plays in "The Greeks Had a Word for It." The New York Times anounces that she plans to act in this play on the Pacific coast.

Broadway reporters for the Times are ready to testify that Al Jolson has made up his mind to return to the stage in the German musical show called "Die Wunderbar." Lupe Velez of the pictures is being named for a prominent rôle in the production.

"Death Takes a Holiday" is prospering on tour, and has a $17,000 week in Kansas City to its credit. . . . "Young Sinners" pleases Detroit so much that the engagement has been extended. . . . Philadelphia is demanding overtime of "Sweet Adeline."

Mae West closed her tour in "Sex" in Cincinnati last night, after nineteen weeks of traveling. Her next venture will probably be her frequently announced play, "Cousin Kate," which she is still writing.

Somerset Maugham's latest play is "The Breadwinner," which is now a London success with Ronald Squire and Marie Lohr in its leading rôles. A. E. Matthews will probably be starred in an American production of this piece when "The First Mrs. Fraser," with which he is still acting, completes its tour.

Grace George, star of "The First Mrs. Fraser," is now adapting a play by Louis Verneuil and plans to try it out this spring, probably in Chicago. It contains only three characters. M. Verneuil has a habit of writing short cast works. His "Jealousy," acted here about two years ago, had only two rôles, which were represented here season before last by Fay Bainter and John Halliday.

Pedigreed Actress.

Dorothy Bigelow, daughter of Poultney Bigelow, historian and traveler, will play a small rôle in "The Truth Game," the play by Ivor Novello recently staged at the Ethel Barrymore theater, New York. Miss Bigelow's last stage appearance was two years ago in "Sky Rocket." During the last year she has been in Hollywood as an assistant to Sigmund Romberg in the production of musical talking pictures.

Another "Little Show."

Dwight Deere Wiman in association with Tom Weatherly will produce "The Third Little Show" sometime in April. Sketches, songs, lyrics and numbers are now being heard and read at the Playhouse, 137 West 48th street, New York. Plans are for the Broadway premiere to coincide with the anniversary of the "First Little Show" opening April 30.

Gotham Shows Lift Ban on Ticket "Specs"

NEW YORK, Jan 10.—[Special.]— The theater managers who last July organized the League of New York Theaters for the purpose of abolishing speculation in tickets, have adopted a new agreement, modifying their rules to permit speculators to sell tickets again, but continuing the rule against the "buy" system.

The reason for the change of front is that the producers claim that the five accredited agencies, including the Postal Telegraph company, were not selling enough tickets, and that the public did not turn to the box office in large enough numbers to make up the difference.

The league announced that "buys" were just as much against the rules as ever, and that disciplinary steps would be taken against any producer caught negotiating one. A buy is a case wherein a speculator purchases a large block of seats for a show for a month to two months ahead. Under the old system a show was frequently sold out entirely to the speculators for weeks in advance, and there were never any seats at all on sale at the box office.

Twenty-five per cent of the seats always will be kept on sale at the box office, as before, there is nothing to prevent speculators from buying those seats for resale. A more formidable barrier to the complete return to the old systetm lies in the fact that the Postal Telegraph company has a contract right to 45 per cent of the orchestra seats of all shows produced in league theaters, which includes all except half a dozen of the legitimate houses. This contract has two years to run.

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, Jan. 6. — Apropos of your article on "Berkeley Square" in Sunday's TRIBUNE of Jan. 4, it is interesting to note that before Einstein, Henry James and H. G. Wells were the prophets of ancient days.

If you will turn to the third chapter of Ecclesiastes, fifteenth verse, you will find this statement:

"That which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past."

JESSIE HARDING.

Queen of Midgets.

An 80 year old lady, only 31 inches tall, attended the matinée performance of "Ripples" at the Illinois theater last Wednesday. She was Jennie Quigley, former prima donna and star of the Royal German Lilliputian company and the Deakin's Original Lilliputian company, who had come to see the midgets now appearing with Fred Stone.

Miss Quigley appeared at the Chicago Opera house back in 1891, and has lived in Chicago ever since. She was born in Scotland and was on the stage for 41 years. Miss Quigley and Commodore Foote are the Royal Midgets, so called because they appeared by command of Queen Victoria at Marlborough house, London.

An experience Miss Quigley frequently recalls is the accident that befell her and the giant in the "Jack the Giant Killer" company. They both fell through a stage trapdoor into the cellar. She was saved only because she fell on top of him. He escaped with a few scratches.

About Helen Hayes.

Although "Petticoat Influence," now in New York, promises to provide amply for her immediate acting needs, Helen Hayes is interested in the play called "Poor as a Church Mouse," whose American destinies are in Mr. Woods' control. The piece is from the German. Both Elmer Harris and the Hattons have had a hand in its adaptation. It was tried out no later than Dec. 15 in New Britain, Conn.

Crime Reporting Held Up to Wrathy Ridicule.

the death house, the Weldons have wallowed in the details of the case until they are all in a state of nerves. Particularly Stella, the daughter.

The hounds of the press surround the house. Weldon is offered $1,000 for a thousand word statement on the case. Reporters sneak into the living room in the guise of gas meter inspectors and messenger boys. One, craftier than the others, bribes a son-in-law to let him install a microphone that shall report the conversation of the juror's family this last night.

Weldon is firm. He will neither be bribed nor intimidated. He has only done his duty. The law is the law. Murder is murder, and the guilty should pay the penalty. As 12 o'clock strikes and the extras announce the carrying out of the death penalty Stella Weldon sneaks into the house by the back door. In her hand she carries a smoking revolver. She has just shot and killed the Italian lover who had thought to desert her after definite promises.

The Case Brought Home.

Now the case is brought home. What is the honest Weldon going to do about this? Will he cry as loudly for the conviction and punishment of his own daughter?

Weldon tries to. But the keenest of the reporters (he is from the Daily News and wears a dinner coat) won't let him. The man Stella killed is a rat. He had tried to trick her. She should have a chance.

They send for the district attorney. He listens to the story, agrees that he never could get a conviction against Stella, and decides the dead Italian was just another gangster taken for a ride. Thus, by trickery common to the theater and to melodramas, tragic consequences and a depressing ending are avoided. But the play is also weakened. Without Weldon being forced to pay publicly for his defense of law and justice the irony of the situation is wasted.

The play has revealed adventures that are, unhappily, more or less common, but offers neither solution nor effective criticism. The Guild production is complete and impressive. Frederick Perry plays Weldon, Glenn Anders the reporter, Linda Watkins the daughter.

Readjustments Needed.

The first week of the new year brought no added joy to the hearts of the legitimate theater promoters. Arthur Hammerstein, discouraged by the fact that his newest musical show, the piece called "Ballyhoo," starring W. C. Fields, was not returning enough money to cover his expenses, decided to close that entertainment and lease his theater for the rest of the season.

The theater, with many of its costs still gaited to those years of inflation that preceded the great collapse, is being gradually forced into readjustments of one kind or another. The Shuberts have brought in a miniature music play, called "Meet My Sister," in which the leads are played by Bettina Hall, soprano, and Walter Slezak, tenor, son of the Leo Slezak who was once a popular Wagnerian at the Metropolitan. There are only eleven people in the cast and a small string orchestra in the pit, yet there are several delightful songs and, aside from an interlude of rough comedy, which also has its friends, the play has a lot of charm. If it should succeed, then we may look for other similar entertainments of low cost but high entertainment value.

Earl Carroll, on the other hand, is seeking to lease the huge Hollywood theater from the Warners to use for a big spring revue which, with a lot of seats, he can sell for low prices per seat. He has gone to Bermuda, following the close of the "Vanities," for what he describes as a much needed rest, though he does not say from what.

"Strictly Dishonorable" called it a run Saturday night with 557 performances to its credit. It was started in 1929, played through all of 1930 and into the first week of 1931. It is scheduled for a London opening next month.

George White's "Flying High" has also quit, after 357 performances, and will go touring.

in front he topped anything ever done in the way of theater filling by such stars as Beatrice Lillie, the four Marx Brothers, Clayton, Jackson and Durante, and Harry Richman. Nevertheless, Eddie will stick to the celluloid racket.

Charlie Chaplin is just about our most retiring movie man. Not only will the man with the funny feet be dumb in his forthcoming film, "City Lights," but he has also turned down every radio offer. That means giving up a lot of money.

Ginger Rogers is one of the east coast's hardest working picture girls. She found time between making pictures over at Astoria and playing in the musical comedy, "Girl Crazy," to make personal appearances at the Belleau Supper club.

That symphony orchestra at Roxy's theater just grows and grows like Jack's beanstalk. Roxy has added thirty-five musicians and announced plans for a series of Sunday morning concerts in which 200 musicians will take part, the proceeds to be turned over to unemployed musicians.

Alabama Girl Leaves London Stage for U. S.

Tallulah Bankhead Seeks Movie Recognition.

LONDON.—(AP)—A slim, blonde bundle of nerves and beauty, with a touch of madcap and plenty of brains, may be an idol of America's movie millions before many months.

She is Tallulah Bankhead—5 feet 5 inches tall, 110 pounds—born with her dark blue eyes just 28 years ago in Huntsville, Ala.

Her father is Congressman William Brockman Bankhead from Alabama, her uncle is senator elect from that state and Tallulah is the Dixie girl who came to London eight years ago without a job.

Now she's probably London's most popular actress. People wait at the stage entrance to see her leave—sometimes she needs police—and once, when the theater was small, the crowd tore down the box office.

Will Make Talkies.

She sailed for America Jan. 7 to make talkies and to stay.

Tallulah has lived modestly in a little house on Berkeley square which she made over from a garage. It's furnished quietly, and is comfortable, but not flamboyant.

She dresses simply, usually in sports clothes during the day. Black is her favorite color, then pastel shades. Wears few or no jewels. Her favorite flower is gardenia, and other white flowers next.

She has a swanky car and likes to drive it, but not in London. She doesn't know directions here, and the only time she did try to drive she had to hire a taxi to go ahead and lead the way.

Her best part, she thinks, was in "Amy" in "They Knew What They Wanted." The rôle she least liked was "Iris" in "The Green Hat." "Iris had no sense of humor about herself," she explains.

Food doesn't interest her. She never eats regular meals—only by spasms. Then she eats plain fare—bacon and eggs often. Frequently her dinner is a dish of stewed tomatoes.

Likes American Jazz.

She likes American jazz. Made one record herself and thinks it's terrible.

She was named after her grandmother, who was named for Tallulah falls in Georgia. Her mother died when she was born.

She hopes to be married, but the man must have "a divine sense of humor." He needn't be good looking, either, but attractive to her. She'll give up the stage then, for she doesn't think the two can go together. No actors need apply.

She's been in love a couple of times, but has recovered.

Her speech and manner are direct, her voice deep, her accent 'way down south. And American slang is "fresh air" to her.

THE VOICE OF THE FAN

Says They're All Talkies.

Dear Mae Tinée: I am a daily reader of your articles and of late have been wondering why you write "altalker" under the name of the picture you are reviewing. It seemed to be all right a year or so ago, but it seems foolish to keep it up when at this time nothing but altalkers are being produced by the big companies. Respectfully,

FRANK WAYNE.

Stenogs and Their Bosses.

Dear Mae Tinée: If anybody cares what I think, I've seen many comedies, but none so laughable as the sight of that mature man on the beach in the moonlight with that young woman in "The Office Wife."

I saw Lewis Stone in a rôle that he played in one of Emil Janning's pictures and I thought him a great actor and it does seem as though he might do something more worthy of his ability. It must be he prefers the lover parts, for he seems to play them more.

A man in the prime of life, who was handsome, would not have had much appeal to those of us who are office workers, when he kept the girl working late at night simply because he was in love with her, but a number of us were "fit to be tied" after viewing Lewis Stone.

Something ought to be done about this idea that is constantly being promulgated that stenogs are crazy about their employers. I know at least a hundred stenogs who could be electrocuted if they carried out their heart's desire and murdered their employers. Mine is particularly aggravating on a Monday morning. Far from envying their wives, most secretaries sympathize with them.

You might give the old men this tip: "Have they, or has any one else, ever known a young girl who married a POOR old man; one that she had to help support the home?" Not much, they do that for young men, but the old ones had better amass some cash if they wish to buy youth, either with or without beauty.

I feel a lot better. How about you?

NATALIE GRUEN.

Editor's note: Old men! Take tip!

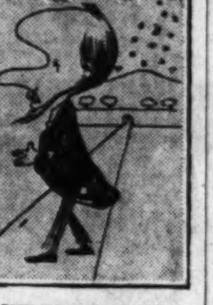
THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

"TAKING THE CURTAIN CALL" is the title which Doris Arthur Jones chose for the life and letters of her father, Henry Arthur Jones. Not many years ago, to a generation of theatergoers, the name of Henry Arthur Jones was a part of every international conversation about the stage. He was one of England's leading dramatists. He was a figure in all of England's artistic life. He knew everybody. Everybody knew him.



HENRY ARTHUR JONES.
[Drawn by Max Beerbohm.]

He died in 1929 at the age of 78. For sixty years he had been a dramatist. It was at the age of 18 that he went to the theater for the first time and he came away determined to write plays. His career really dates from that decision. His first play was produced in 1878, when he was 27 years old. Four years later he wrote a melodrama, "The Silver King," which we, ironically, probably never heard of, but which was such a tremendous success that the author made a fortune from it.

"The Silver King" was praised unreservedly by the first nighters, all except Henry Irving, who, being himself a gloomy soul, felt that the stage was a little light. Mr. Jones, in telling his daughter of the incident, said: "You know Irving's love for dark, mysterious, and gloomy scenes. He criticized one special scene. 'Wasn't that scene a little light, my boy?' [Irving said]. 'Well, you see, it's eleven in the morning' [Jones replied. 'I should have had an eclipse' [said Irving]."

"The Silver King" was produced in New York in 1883, was novelized, and has been filmed twice. Some have called it the classic melodrama of the nineteenth century.

Mr. Jones always had a sharp tongue. "I've a choice collection of enemies, thank God," he once said. His friends were as choice, as is evidenced by his letters. They are delighting and amusing and contemporary comments of far greater value than is apparent upon their charming surface. He knew everybody and, like every one else of his day, he wrote to them.

The art of letter writing is, indeed, a lost one, these days. It was in its waning prime during Henry Arthur Jones' day. He had occasional friendly tiffs with H. G. Wells and Bernard Shaw and Mrs. Pat Campbell and Johnston Forbes-Robertson, and back and forth between him and Ellen Terry and William Morris and Matthew Arnold and Barrie and Kipling and Conrad, and many others, there darted delightful epistolary shafts.

Herbert Spencer, Swinburne, Kate Greenaway, Oscar Wilde, W. S. Gilbert, John Hay, and Adelaide Neilson are among the many celebrities who fill the nice hefty volume. The life, and the resulting letters of Henry Arthur Jones make a vivid story, often tempestuous, always exciting.

Mr. Jones charged his daughter with the task of writing his life and she has fulfilled it not only with filial devotion, but with keen interest not only to herself, but for the reader. The book is a valuable comment on the dramatic changes of the last thirty years, not only in the drama, but in life itself.

There is a charming and characteristic "letter" from Max Beerbohm to Doris Arthur Jones [who is Doris Thorne in the letter] which recalls the first time that the incomparable Max met the great dramatist. He came later to know him in that difficult situation of author-critic. Beerbohm, as you know, followed G. B. S. as dramatic critic of the London Saturday Review and both he and Shaw, he says, stood out practically single handed against the phalanx of the English critics of the drama who resented Henry Arthur Jones' "fussing around and trying to teach them what to think." "As though," says Mr. Beerbohm in a parenthesis, "it was their business to think."

It's a book worth owning, "Taking the Curtain Call."

Old Stage Story Makes Its Debut on the Screen

likes her and all that, but it's pretty hard to get over a colleen like Colleen Moore, especially in view of the fact that right now she needs John a lot more than she did when she was riding high as the most popular star in pictures.

"Despite their divorce and the bitter words said between them, it was nigh impossible for me to believe they weren't crazy about each other. I had some inside information on that too, you see. I went to see Colleen once at her beautiful home and she showed me the lovely palm trees that John had planted for her as a birthday present. 'My necklace of palms,' she said to me on that occasion, 'dearer to me than diamonds because they came from the man I love.'"

Interesting!

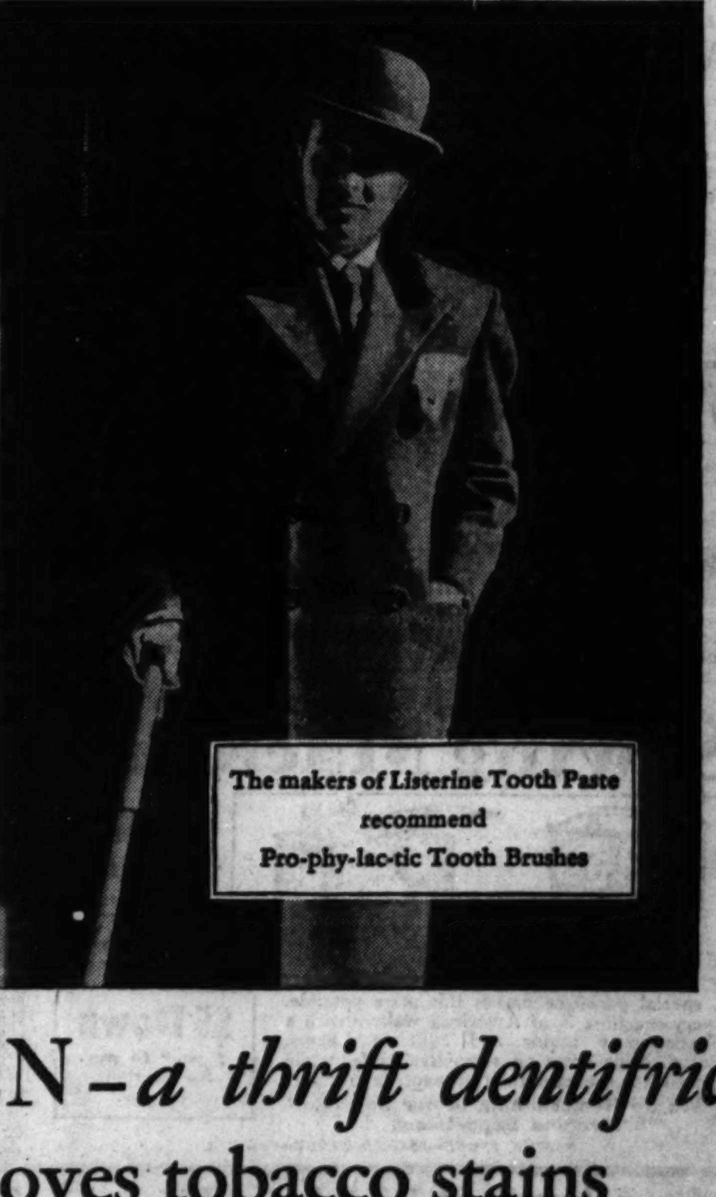
Buy gloves with that $3 it saves

There are so many things you can buy with that $3 you save by using Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ instead of dentifrices in the 50¢ class. Gloves are merely a suggestion.



The makers of Listerine Tooth Paste recommend Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brushes

MEN—a thrift dentifrice that removes tobacco stains and sweetens breath

ONE of the things you'll like about Listerine Tooth Paste is the business-like way it gets rid of tooth discolorations—especially tobacco stains.

Try it a day. You will immediately note the new brilliance it imparts to your teeth.

Another quality you will like is the wonderful feeling of freshness it leaves in your mouth, the feeling you associate with the use of Listerine itself. Your entire mouth feels clean—invigorated. Your breath is sweetened. You aren't ashamed to meet people.

The fact that this remarkable dentifrice at 25¢ saves you about $3 a year over high-priced tooth pastes may also interest you. That we can offer such a paste at such a price is due to marked economies, effected by large-scale buying, modern methods of manufacture, and mass production.

In the past five years nearly four million people have been won to Listerine Tooth Paste. Not by its popular price, but by its quality and the amazing results it accomplishes.

They like the thoroughness with which it cleans every surface of every tooth. The way it removes ugly discolorations and dangerous tartar without injury to precious enamel. They like the way it makes dull teeth gleam. The way it freshens the mouth and cools inflamed gums.

If you are not already a user, buy a tube today. Give it a thorough trial. You will be delighted.

Dolores Jr. Keeps Him Amused.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

tresses. She is quite a figure at the social functions of the élite about Hollywood; she even goes to Bill Haines' parties and mingles with the younger gay crowd where she is worshiped like a goddess or a legend.

When she's asked, Mrs. Carter has been known to admit that she was a great actresses, and the recitals of past splendor, while they have a touch of the pathetic in them, are always eagerly listened to by the young folks.

Mrs. Torrence in Business.

Another actress of the years past, though not so past as Mrs. Carter, is Maude Leslie of the English stage, wife of David Torrence. Mrs. Torrence for years has made her own cold creams and beauty lotions and a couple of years ago installed a small laboratory at the Torrence home in Beverly Hills and employed two people to work under her directions with the manufacture of cosmetics.

Her creams had an enormous vogue among her friends, but as time went on all the customers became friends and the business was on an entirely nonpaying basis. Now, Mrs. Torrence has opened a shop away from her home where her creams are made and sold by the help, and any friends wishing cream and cosmetics pay the help at the shop. The business is thriving, too.

Kathleen Norris took eighteen of her relatives, sisters, nieces, nephews and what-nots with her for a ten day sojourn at Yosemite over the holidays just past. Seven rooms were hired and, as the rooms are $24 a day at that hotel, one can figure what kind of Christmas present that little trip was in terms of cold cash.

Sells Cosmetics.

Another actress of the older days who was in the cosmetic business hereabouts is Mrs. G. P. Huntley, wife of the famous English comedian of a generation ago. Her son, Bruce, known as G. P. Junior, is playing leading man with Jane Cowl, having recently done "Twelfth Night" with her in the east.

Mrs. Huntley, the mother and wife, was an actress of some note herself, and has played in many all star casts. Of late years she felt that the uncertainty of stage work was too much of a strain and has gone into the cosmetic business with a vim. She represents a French system of beauty culture, locally, and goes about from one beauty culture school to another teaching the new method and introducing creams and cosmetics. She is doing poppingly well with it, too, and is a good ad for the system. She looks not more than 30, though admitting to 50.

John Barrymore is making every effort to be sufficiently recovered to go to work on his new picture, but it is a hard disease to fight, as it leaves one weak and listless. He is due to make "Trilby," renamed "Svengali," as he is the star in that name rôle.

As for Dolores, according to her agreement with Warners, they must supply her with a suitable story by the 20th of this month or she can claim a forfeit from them in cash, or in some rearrangement of terms. So far no story seems available. It was not deemed wise to team her with her illustrious husband, though it was as his leading lady that she made her big hit.

Critic's Objection to Lauder's Jokes Wins Free Seats

EDINBURGH, Scotland.—(AP)—A braw ficht is brewing in the hielands between Sir Harry Lauder and Andrew Warr Gibb, an author, who accuses the singer of holding up Scotland to world ridicule.

With a generous roll of his "r's," Sir Harry, though declining to enter full heartedly into the controversy because it will "advertise the book," defended his career against the accusation.

Gibb's book accuses Sir Harry of cultivating a reputation for niggardliness as part of his stock in trade and doing more than any living man to vulgarise the popular conception of Scotland and Scotsmen.

Sir Harry, seeking to refute the implication of being "tight," offered Gibbs two orchestra seats "free" for any night he is giving a concert.

"Furrrthermorrre," he said, "I'll stand him to a wee drap fra ma bottle, nex' tam ay sae him.

"This is not the first time I've been accused of holding Scottish people up to contempt, but my jokes are about myself and not the Scotsmen.

"If I say 'I went into the postoffice to fill my fountain pen' can I help it if my version of that joke passes around the world and is accepted as a reflection on the Scottish people as a whole?

"Run awa noo and ask Mr. Gibb if he has ever heard me. Most o' ma critics have'na, ye ken."

Divorces Now Not at All What They Used to Be

H. Denny Pierce Case Is Friendly Affair.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Things are done O so differently these days from those dear lamented periods "before the war." Once upon a time, when two members of society decided the only cure for their marital ills was divorce, they went about the matter in the best procedure of the duelling code. They separated and sulked and held no communication save through the medium of their "seconds"—the lawyers. Then, perhaps, they met in court, and averted their gaze from each other. And when the divorce had been made final they conscientiously avoided meeting and every hostess had to keep a list of ex-husbands and ex-wives so as not to commit the horrible faux pas of inviting both at the same time.

Friendly Divorces.

Nowadays it is much different. The motto is "Marry and quarrel; divorce and be friends." Husbands not only give their wives all the assistance in the world in getting their freedom, but they do it in quite the most pleasant manner imaginable.

All this is apropos the way the one time Evelyn Hall McManus departed this last week for Reno to secure her freedom from H. Denny Pierce. Denny not only gave "Babe" his blessing on her undertaking, but he came down to the Grand Central to see her off and blew kisses after her. Somehow, it doesn't seem just proper, even if it is the thing.

Eloped in 1923.

It was ages ago in '23 that Denny and Evelyn eloped. She was, and still is, a very pretty woman and Denny was taking no chances when he heard that she was going on a world tour. He rushed Evelyn down to the Municipal building and married her before she could gasp "Jack Robinson."

That was that. They were a splendid looking couple, always to be seen at the jolliest parties. They lunched together at the Ritz—when the Ritz grill was "the place," and danced every night at Montmartre, when that expiring place was the rendezvous of all the world of fashion, from coast to coast. When in one corner one could see the incomparable [though I don't know why] Peggy Joyce; in another Willie K. Vanderbilt and the girl he trotted about with before Rosamond came along, and in still another corner Alice Joyce, Marshall Neilan, Blanche Sweet and all the picture folk who were then working in the east.

It was the thing for society to coddle Denny and Babe. They took up with the fastest set in town and leaped from town to Southampton, where they were immensely popular and finally crashed right into the heart of the Palm Beach set.

Decision No Secret.

That their marriage endured for seven years is a remarkable thing. Usually they lost not even half the time when husband and wife get into the mad whirl. But Denny and Babe were ever the most loving couple. It was not until Mrs. Pierce returned from Palm Beach a few days ago that society discovered a divorce was imminent.

The pair made no secret of it. Gave out the date for Mrs. Pierce's departure and had a host of friends down to see her off. Now the quidnuncs will have it that Babe is likely to marry Barclay H. Warburton Jr. as soon as her freedom comes. Warburton, better known as "Buzzy," is the former husband of the present Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, and is renowned as the squire of pretty women. But for everything we know he is not given to matrimony.

Still, that remains to be seen. Denny Pierce is in town and not too unhappy, and Evelyn is in Reno on her three months' penance. Denny has some few millions which he made in the boom times, and there are no end of eligible girls who will soothe his hurts. Unless, of course, he prefers to remain true to Babe.

Hunting in England.

The F. Ambrose Clarks have made it an annual custom to spend the hunting season at Melton Mowbray in England. They have done this for several years past, and I hear the prince of Wales considers the season incomplete without the presence of the "Brose" Clarks.

In the summer their place on Long Island is the rendezvous for the sporting crowd and their annual garden party smacks of an English "county" fête.

One of the plumes in the Clark cap is their two nephews, the Bostwick boys. Both of them are fond of riding to hounds and, indeed, all the Bostwick clan is horse mad. They much prefer being out on the turf to standing in a ballroom. "Pete" Bostwick is the most famous gentleman rider in the east and is quite the peer of the professional jockeys.

This year I hear "Brose" Clark has leased the prince of Wales' own hunting stables and is offering the best fox hunting England can offer to the English hunting set.

Debut Next Year.

Not since the somewhat chubby Gloria Gould made her debut has that famous clan had a debutante to present. And Gloria, despite the fact that she was the daughter of the George J. Goulds, was not quite the perfect debutante.

However, next year will see the Goulds presenting another bud when Anne, daughter of the Jay Goulds, makes her bow. Her sister, Elinor, came out this last deb season, but Anne is the representative of the Gould clan who is expected to make her mark. At present she is studying at the Beaux Arts in Paris and I hear she possesses considerable talent.

The feminine members of the Jay Gould family are, like the rest of the Gould clan, decided brunettes, but they are of a distinctly French type and Mrs. Gould has always been one of the most chic women in society.

ACTIVE and prominent in the local world of amateur and semi-professional drama in its various manifestations are Alice Gerstenberg, Helen Walton, Mrs. Laird Bell, Helen Tieken, Margaret Carr, and Emily Pope. Miss Gerstenberg's achievements are too numerous to list. She is a playwright of national standing, director, president of the Playwrights' theater, is now affiliated with the Goodman theater executive staff, and has served in numerous other capacities.

Mrs. Walton is also a playwright-actress, and will appear in one of the one-act plays to be given by the Playwrights' theater at the Goodman on January 26, the same evening that a one-act play written by her, "The Great Asset," is given, and also in Miss Gerstenberg's "Latchkeys," to be given by the same group on February 23.

Miss Tieken is now managing the Junior League's children's theater, having studied phases of the theater both in this country and abroad.

Mrs. Laird Bell has a reputation founded on numerous appearances in amateur theatricals, occasionally gives some of her impersonations at the Scribblers, and has been an active member of the North Shore Theater Guild association, now called the North Shore Circuit theater.

Miss Margaret Carr and Miss Emily Pope are more recent additions to the ranks of the players and workers in little theater projects. They act and do some of the executive work for the Junior League's plays, and Miss Carr is an active member of the Playwrights' theater.

New Theater at Palm Beach Opens Tuesday

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Palm Beach may be seen in a democratic mood on Tuesday with 300 people, running the range of the social scale, gathered in a small building at the rear of a former club to see the curtain rise on "Mr. Pim Passes By."

It will be the opening of Miss Muriel McCormick's Palm Beach playhouse and, aside from the personal interest taken in it by Miss McCormick's friends and the theater's patrons, it will make a double claim for attention. Not only will it give Palm Beach its first taste of drama, but it will take its place as about the only local society institution to which the general public is to be admitted at all times.

Indications are that many of the long list of notable patrons of the playhouse will be on hand. On this list are names of such personages as the McKinlocks, the Stotesburys, the Phippses, the Ziegfelds, the Pillsburys, and Otto Kahn. Since the admission charge dips as low as $1, and since the playhouse is an intimate little place, they will come in close contact with the common man, even though there will be a block of seats for season subscribers.

Nine Players Announced.

The democratic spirit of the enterprise has been carried out even to the cast of players. Miss McCormick, emphasizing that there will be no "star," has made it plain that the leading man one week may have the most inconspicuous part the next. This week she announced nine members of the cast as George Cotton, Aleta Freel, Arthur Gould-Porter, Harry Green, Mollie Hicks, Madeline King, Agnes Elliott Scott, Shepperd Strudwick, and Ernest Woodward, taking care to list them alphabetically.

The Playhouse season will run eleven weeks. It will be interesting during that time to observe how much Miss McCormick's efforts are appreciated by those Floridians hereabouts whose only social register is the city directory.

Events of Interest.

Formal opening of Whitehall on Monday, beginning of polo play at the Gulf Stream club, the return here of Col. E. R. Bradley to open his famous Beach club, and the beginning of active work toward the Garden Club Flower show in February also were of great interest in various circles. Arrival for the season of several members of her executive board enabled Mrs. George A. McKinlock, the president, to hold the Garden club's first executive committee session this week.

The waxing season is bringing its usual number of titled visitors, and is bringing many belated additions to the Chicago colony. The Contessa Denise Dolfin and Miss M. Lawrence Wetherill were luncheon guests at the McKinlock home; Joseph E. Widener gave a dinner to honor Count and Countess Carlo Dentice de Frasso of Rome; Lady Davis of Montreal, widow of the late Sir Mortimer Davis, was among those at the Beach club opening.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Winston of Chicago were noted at luncheon at the Breakers; Miss Pauline Bode had a group of friends with her at tea there that included Miss Katherine Clare and William Willoughby; and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Brown spent several days here on a motor trip through the state. Mr. and Mrs.

House Guest from Illinois.

Mrs. Barret is expecting Miss Julia Fairfax Hodge of Bloomington, Ill., to visit her at Dream Harbor, the beautiful winter home of the Barrets. Miss Hodge, who has made her home in Paris for the last six years, plans a visit to Lake Placid after her stay here. Another guest planning to visit at Dream Harbor is Miss Mary L. Buckner Barret, sister of Mr. Barret.

Mrs. Philip B. Jennings of New York gave a dinner Thursday night at her home on Sevilla street. Contract bridge followed the dinner.

Mrs. Louise Wise Lewis and her children, Mary Lily Flagler Lewis and Lawrence Lewis Jr., returned Monday to Kirkside, the home of the late Henry M. Flagler. Kenan Jr., brother of Mrs. Wise, and Mrs. Kenan, who were also guests there, returned to his home in Lockport, N. Y. The Kenans are expected to arrive at Ponce de Leon Jan. 13 to remain for the season.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 28, 1876.

DEAR JULIA:

Are you reading "Daniel Deronda"? I received a copy from a friend a few days ago and was, of course, greatly pleased to get one of the new and much talked of books. I don't believe I like it so well, however, as "Adam Bede," the first novel I ever read of George Eliot's.

I am reading, also, that ridiculous thing, "Helen's Babies," by John Habberton. Have you seen it? A bashful bachelor uncle is obliged to take care of two impish nephews, who involve him in an awkward situation with the young lady he adores. It all comes out well in the end. "Budge" and "Toddy" certainly are terrible children to have around. Their poor uncle never knows what they will say next.

This reminds me to tell you what a little girl in my Sunday school class said last Sunday. She is absent and tardy a good deal, so I inquired into the reason. With finger in mouth, she stammered that she had to help her father. Her father being a milkman, I said: "Why, Pauline, you are pretty little to help, aren't you? Can you milk?"

"O, no," replied Pauline, "I can't milk, but I can pump." Of course, she meant she could assist her parent by rinsing the receptacles, but as the milk from this dairy is quite bluish, a titter ran around the classroom.

Last night we attended a beautiful evening reception at the home of Judge and Mrs. J. D. Caton. Not only friends of the Judge and Mrs. Caton were present, but also those of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Williams. The parlor and drawing room were elaborately decorated with flowers and the supper table was gorgeous with many ingenious decorations. The costumes of the ladies were beautiful. Mrs. T. B. Blackstone wore a lovely polonaise of rich embossed velvet, made after the French fashion—tight fitting and long. Underneath this polonaise was a grosgrain silk skirt.

There were 350 people at the Caton party, I heard, and I saw many old friends, which was pleasant, for Chicago is growing so fast we don't see our friends so often as we used to. I don't know whether I like this business of living in a large city.

The George Armours were there, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon D. Ogden, Charles Fullerton, Adrian Honore, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Medill and the Misses Medill, "Long John" Wentworth and Miss Roxana Wentworth, and Mr. and Mrs. Hall McCormick.

I ran into the J. B. Shermans' house this afternoon to see the wedding presents Margaret Sherman received. She is a great favorite of mine, and her marriage to young D. H. Burnham is a real delight to my romantic soul. Mr. Burnham is a rising young architect of Chicago who has recently formed a partnership with John Root, another architect who is doing well here. The young firm has recently built a beautiful home for J. B. Sherman at 683 Michigan avenue. It seems quite like a story book, for Mr. Burnham while building the Sherman house met the daughter of the household and fell in love with her, which he might well she is so lovely.

Aren't you sorry to know of the death of Charlotte Cushman? I think she was a really great woman and, from what I hear, she was just as wonderful in private life as on the stage. I met Mahlon D. Ogden yesterday and we spoke of her death. She had visited the Ogdens during her appearance in Chicago. Mr. Ogden said of her that she was the most charming woman he ever met, though she was not beautiful. He called her plain and masculine in appearance, which, of course, I suppose is true, but one forgot her lack of personal beauty as soon as she began to speak. He said no one could resist her fascination, and recalled the way she kept the whole household laughing with her Irish stories, which she told in endless succession.

I am glad I have seen and heard her so many times, for I always went when she was in Chicago. I remember seeing her in 1856 and again the winter after the fire, when she gave readings in our churches. She was at McVicker's theater in 1873 and again in 1874 and '75 she was here. I understand she was a good manager and died quite a rich woman. I really think she was, as the critics called her, one of the greatest actresses the world has ever seen.

Will has gone tonight to see Billy Emerson, the comedian. Will never can bear to miss him. He has a new sketch, they say, which

Balearic Isles Popular Resort with Americans

Palma, on Majorca, Offers Much Interest.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—The holiday exodus from the capital this year was particularly marked in the American colony. The overshadowing event of the times, however, was the death of Marshal Joffre, one of the most beloved war figures of France. His obsequies brought many French people back to the capital. Despite the great soldier's modesty and desire for simple funeral arrangements, popular sentiment insisted on a grandiose ceremony that permitted national tribute to be paid his memory.

Nevertheless, while such supreme figures pass into history, the living seek business and pleasure here, as elsewhere. Some middle westerners are joining the seasonal drift to the Balearic islands, so rich in scenery and history. Lying in the western Mediterranean, barely 200 miles from Barcelona, they exercise particular attraction to the sightseer, archaeologist, and artist. Many currents and eddies of European and African history have swirled around the picturesque archipelago. Majorca, the largest island, solicits, especially, the motorist. Good cars and guides may be had at Palma.

Lease Villa at Palma.

The Rev. Wilson Marvin Backus and Mrs. Backus, formerly of Chicago and now of Lawrence, Kas., have taken a villa at Palma. The town offers interesting excursions to grottoes and megaliths, to fig, almond, orange and apricot groves. The countryside offers handsome natives in quaint costumes, monasteries, castles, Gothic monuments, gorgeous sunsets, and—tell it not in Gath—full bodied wine. Prices at Palma are unusually cheap. Mrs. W. J. Compton of St. Louis is among the Americans sojourning there.

Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, although English, is a well known figure in American circles in Paris, and she is contemplating a voyage to the Balearic islands. She is famous for her chic, and a few years ago was classed as one of the fifteen best dressed women in Europe.

Chicagoans on Cruise.

On a liner cruising in the Mediterranean are many denizens of Chicago, en route to Greece, Turkey, Palestine, and Egypt. The cruise will finish June 6 at Rotterdam. Among the voyagers are the Misses Bertha Conde, Blanche Geary, Mary C. Buchan, Emily M. Morgan, Mary E. Smith, Lucy C. Sturges, Annie B. Sweet, Mrs. Willis T. Sheppard, Mrs. Blackshead Bryan, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Johnson. At the end of the cruise the liner's passengers will return to America on another ship.

E. H. Little, the Chicagoan who has been dividing his time recently between Paris and London, has just sailed for the United States. Mrs. May Ansley of Chicago, who has recently been vacationing on the Riviera, is stopping at the Hotel Continental here and is planning to return home soon.

Mr. Insull Shows Old Paintings at Supper Party

Pine Paneling Perfect Background.

By Cousin Eve.

"TO the ladies, who are beautiful in spite of the fashions, and to the men, who are brilliant and scintillating in spite of their perplexities," thus Mrs. Samuel Insull toasted the New Year with other wittily turned phrases. It was at Mr. and Mrs. Insull's memorable watch night party, where the thoroughly unpopular 1930 was ushered out to the divine strains of cello and violin.

Mrs. Insull was toastmistress for a wonderful program. Dressed simply in silvery white, with exquisite voice and inimitable manner, she carried an audience of friends from one musical height to another—the gorgeous Mme. Leider-Cortiz in Spanish costume and Spanish songs; the charming Salvi à la Velasquez in ruby velvet, comb and Sevillian veil. And last, but by no means least, the Mishakoff quartet with Don Salvi at the harp.

A charming episode when Mrs. Insull, presenting a basket of lilies of the valley to Mme. Leider-Cortiz, dropped gracefully to one knee, and the great singer, equally quick, bent and kissed her admirer's hand with a deep curtsey.

Mr. Insull's offices are paneled handsomely in light pine, delicately carved. This wood is a perfect background for a collection of quaint old English paintings, bought abroad years ago and never shown until the present. The furniture is in the old English style with many interesting pieces, and heavy brocades hanging at the sightly windows.

Horns of Plenty.

Supper that night was served at a score of small tables. The guests, many of whom were artists, saw, on entering, a splendid buffet, with two golden horns of plenty overflowing with colorful hothouse fruits, and every one hoped these were true symbols for 1931. In any case, the new year surely did get a happy start at this party.

Beforehand "Aida" was given at the Civic opera for the first and only time this season, and so magnificently staged by Dr. Otto Eberhardt, the new director, that the vast audience was agog over it. The unusual beauty of the two prima donnas, Muzio and Van Gordon, was featured to the uttermost, every advantage of lighting, posture and color were there, and the whole performance left one breathless. Even the amusing Ethiopian ballet was an artistic asset, grouped round the Pharaoh's throne, bringing out the glories of the stage setting, with its ebony note.

Another kind word for our Civic opera, and this from New York, and from no less a connoisseur of operatic matters than Otto Kahn. He telegraphed Samuel Insull a while ago that Chicago had the finest German opera company in the world. I hope this is true, and I believe it—I mean the telegram.

A Card from Polacco.

Last week Maestro Polacco's many friends received a New Year's card from him from Milan; an etching of St. Peter's at Rome with the piazza and obelisk and familiar mass of the Vatican. Inside was a nice little New Year's greeting from "Graziella and Giorgio Polacco." We haven't forgotten you, Giorgio. And another card, a black and white one from the Herbert Bradleys, now safely in France, drawn by their daughter Alice. A vast lion, elephant, and rhino charging three tiny hunters, shooting [the Bradleys]. In the corner this legend: "We hope it's au revoir and not good-by." Inside is the map of Africa in outline, with the line of march from Duala to Mombassa.

Another intrepid traveler left town on Friday for points east, Henry J. Patten, who is setting forth for Jerusalem the golden, which he will find truly golden with electric lights when he arrives, and the entire countryside of Judea blest not with milk and honey, but with Tin Lizzies and Redbugs.

However, his real destination is Ur of the Chaldees which they are just digging out, but I dare say electrification will swiftly follow. For further news of Ur I recommend the family Bible.

Will Dig at Ur.

Mr. Patten, who is a distinguished and courtly citizen of Chicago, expects to dig a bit at Ur, for he is by way of being an archaeologist. Which reminds me that the Henry Fields arrived in New York last week after being away seven months, coming direct from Leamington, England, where their headquarters have been in the hunting country with Mr. Field's mother, Mrs. Algernon Burnaby, the former Minna Field. She is a niece of Marshall Field, the merchant king, founder of the great Field fortune, being a daughter of the late Henry Field, his brother.

Her mother afterward married Thomas Nelson Page and lived in Rome for years when he was American minister. Mrs. Thomas Lindsay, a sister of Mrs. Burnaby, lives in Boston and comes here occasionally. I understand from letters that the young Henry Fields have had "gorgeously" happy times in England, but are "too good Americans not to be glad to get home."

They will settle this year on the south side, they say, to be near the Field museum, Henry's job being there. They were in England during the merry times when the engagement was announced of Betty Field's first cousin, Drogo Montagu, to Tania Guinness, the latter being a very, very fashionable and in the spotlight young lady, and a lot of other details that escape me.

The Hon. Drogo is celebrated, too, having had Kaiser Wilhelm II. as his godfather. And, O, how mad he is about it now. Father Time does play such amusing tricks! Young Montag

A Charming Reception.

On New Year's day the William Monroes' reception in honor of Mrs. Calhoun was so well attended that it seemed as if the party must rend asunder the walls of their charming Elm street duplex. Receiving also at strategic angles were Harriet Monroe, Mrs. Calhoun's sister; Mr. and Mrs. John Root, Mr. and Mrs. Fetcher, Polly Collier, and Henry Monroe.

I can't imagine a New Year's without the Monroe party with all its cheerfulness any more than the day seemed quite normal without the Kellogg Fairbanks' luncheon. This was canceled because of the death of John H. Winterbotham, a dear friend and habitué of these parties since they began many years ago.

His funeral, a few days before, carried with it such an impressive and wonderful picture, symbolic of the man, that one could never forget the beautiful but somber pageantry of it. In St. James' church, well filled of a dusky late afternoon, there were no flowers to mention, but the altar and nave were ablaze with tall candles. Instead of funeral wreaths, the casket bore candelabra flaming into the form of a funeral pyre, a centralized glory of light in the complete darkness of the old church.

A boy choir sang among others a well known wartime song by John Alden Carpenter, brother-in-law of John Winterbotham, "Homeland." And the music was as full of sentiment as were the burning flambeaux, for a flaming spirit had passed.

The Winterbothams are a family of individualists, originals, from the late Joseph Winterbotham down through his sons and daughter, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, to his youngest grandchild, and they leave their mark upon Chicago life. We miss them when they go.

Work to Aid Unemployed.

While many of us have been running ragged through the holiday season and having a good time in spite of everything, there has been a group of women in Chicago, and most of them are my friends, who have been banded together, as in war times, on Gov. Emmerson's commission of unemployment and relief. These women, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, have gone daily to a La Salle street office at 8:30, returning dead to the world at 6 or 7 o'clock, after days of intensive effort.

They took the unemployment situation seriously, and coöperated with the men's committee under George Getz. Last week having finished their hard task, after three months of plodding through the gayest part of our winter season, they were disbanded. I would take off my hat to them, only it is a tight one from Agnes', and comes off with a struggle, so I have great pleasure in giving them the honorable roll call and mention which they deserve. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank [marvelous woman, author, national committeewoman, speaker, hospital president], chairman, and none better. Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. Harold Foreman, vice chairmen; treasurer, Mrs. Edward F. Swift; secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick. Directors are Mrs. Swift, Mrs. Walter Strong, Mrs. Ernest Graham, Mrs. E. R. Born, Mrs. J. C. Weis, Mrs. Foreman, Mrs. Magoun, Mrs. Paul Welling, Mrs. Silvester Schiele, Mrs. H. W. Hardy. These women have gathered and distributed several truckloads of warm winter clothing, and have organized for relief as long as it is needed.

In opposition to this band of gallant souls is another I know equally well. They are groaning at the rich monotony of the bridge luncheons they have to eat daily. It annoys them to think that fifty thousand people wake up hungry in Chicago every morning. They are kind hearted and will write checks in the emergency, but work they cannot, except at contract.

Hundreds Salute Insull.

The Bohemian dinner at the Palmer house in honor of Samuel Insull was a chic, splendid affair in the flower bedecked ballroom, last Sunday night. Mrs. Insull in pale blue satin came with her husband. Six hundred and fifty gayly arrayed diners, including stars of the opera and Chicago eminents of all sorts, listened to long speeches and short songs, and saw the guest of honor blush more than once, as he was called Chicago's first citizen. Indeed, Mr. Insull was up to the neck in compliments and adulation.

Herbert Witherspoon, handsome and amusing cosmopolite, was toastmaster. He intimated that the well known opera temperament was often only a substitute for paid advertising. Having announced once in public that he had studied with Capoul, he said he read next day with some surprise that he was a pupil of Al Capone. A poetic quotation of his "O, bewitching bean" had every one intrigued. Was it a Boston baked bean, string bean, or navy? Queries all about—but no, it was "O, betwitching being" [woman] with ultra English G dropping.

Frederick Stock, in his forthright speech, paid his homage to Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick and her gift which made Chicago's Civic Opera possible [three and a half million dollars of assets turned over], as well as to Mr. Insull's great achievements. Mrs. McCormick, who was present, rose, raising a black gloved arm, saluting the diners in a charming near-Fascist way, advanced and shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Insull, the latter kissing Mrs. McCormick's hand most prettily.

Muzio sang divinely, and so did Bonelli, Cortiz, and others from the opera, and altogether the Czecho-Slovakians did very well by us. Madame Raisa was present in a plain pale pink satin frock with heavy bracelets of sapphires and diamonds on one arm, black hair closely coiffed, her back lightly browned from the Italian summer sun. She was much admired.

Persian Exhibition in London.

London is going wild for the moment over the glories of the Persian exhibition, which is the most glorious and valuable thing done in art for years and years. It was our own Genevieve Carpenter who went over to assist Dr. Arthur Pope with the installation of exhibits, a month ago. I mention this because Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick has two exhibits, both carpets, one of which, called "the Emperor carpet," is the most important work of art, in both a historical and artistic sense, that she has ever purchased. The carpets have not yet been seen by their owner, and they must be truly superb to outrank in interest and beauty some of her other possessions.

A cablegram came recently from Cape Town, South Africa, announcing to Albert W. Goodrich the marriage of his son, Albert W. Goodrich Jr. Mr. Goodrich Sr., our celebrated fire commissioner, had heard of his daughter-in-law, who was Miss Nora Butterworth, a pretty blonde English girl of 18, but he was not quite expecting the wedding.

Young Goodrich, who is a tall and handsome youth of 22, was hurt in a motorcycle smash at college, three years ago, losing a foot. His only exercise was swimming, so he left college, was sent around the world by his father to continue his education in travel in France. Arriving in Cape Town, the traveler suddenly determined to settle there, and settle he did.

The climate, it seems, is agreeable, the town is full of attractive English people, fond of out door life, and, best of all, there is swimming all the year round. During one season they swim in the Indian ocean, and when that gets bad they go around the corner to the well known Atlantic. In this way young Albert keeps his weight down, for which there is nothing better than swimming.

Inherits Fortune.

His bride is a member of a Cape Town family. About a month ago, through the death of his uncle, James Mears McKay, the young man inherited a small fortune, a similar sum being left to his sister, Mrs. Charles Cushing of Lake Forest. James M. McKay, member of all the clubs, and eldest son of an old and prominent north side family, was a renowned sportsman, and a life long pal of our former citizen, Joseph Leiter. He was the greatest wild game shot in America, and left to Charles K. Knickerbocker, besides a legacy, one of the most singular diaries in existence. This is a record of his own shots and shoots, from his first bird, at the age of 16, down to the last feathered trophy, this fall, in northern Minnesota.

Mr. McKay's will also left an endowment fund for the Field museum, to be invested in game exhibits of certain species, the names being stated, each of sixteen syllables or more, and showing a great ornithological knowledge on the part of the great shot. This is to be called the James Mears McKay memorial.

The James M. Morrissons are leaving us soon, and going to live in the state of Connecticut near New London, where they have bought a house on eastern Gaston point, overlooking Long Island sound. Mrs. Morrisson will sing her swan song on Jan. 14 at the Ambassador hotel, in the ballroom at 11:30 when she will address her beloved League of Woman Voters.

Her topic, "The Short Ballot," ought to draw crowds, after our wrestling match with the pink bed sheet ballot on election day. She will have, also, a side line or two of subjects on this occasion, which will be followed by lunch.

The Morrissons are charming people and we shall miss them. I suppose Mrs. Morrisson is about the brainest woman that ever came to Chicago, but, as somebody just said to me on the telephone, "Janet is the one who gets herself over the footlights," Janet being Mrs. "Ked" Fairbank.

Notables at "Sea-Gull."

Alice Gerstenberg of the Goodman theater says that the "Sea-Gull" at that theater is historical, and that the Goodman, anyway, is bound to do arty things every so often, meaning Chekov. Well, it was a great little Russian house party that greeted us at the premiere last Tuesday night. And such a grand, fashionable and altogether fine audience! When I saw Ashton Stevens come in, leading his cousin, the great Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, to a first row seat, I felt sorry for the players. But it didn't jar them a bit. They went merrily on with their gloom and sadness and misery, till the depression that's supposed to be rampant here seemed like the topmost peaks of happiness and exaltation.

The players are all excellent. I went especially to see Karen Stevenson's debut, and she did most awfully well by Chekov, being handsome, temperamental and pitiful, and coquettishly clad, a la gay nineties. The Russian Guesin who stage managed had me back in Russia again, it was all so realistically done. Indeed, a grandniece of Count Tolstoi, Mme. de Zanko, who was present [and I think from her fiery glances at the mention of Great Uncle Tolstoi that she isn't so terribly pleased at the relationship]—we choose our friends but not our kin—said that it was most lifelike; Russians were always a gloomy and depressed people, very, very sad and introspective. And she added that the irresponsibility of it all was typical, and the staging, Russia itself.

I wish I could remember who was there. The Danes turned out for Mrs. Stevenson, Consul General and Mrs. Baumann and their family, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Peterson, Ove Vett, the Arthur Aldises, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodspeed, Mrs. Arthur Bissell, Mrs. Carl Hamilton, Mrs. William Hubbard, Dr. and Mrs. Doering, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Slade, Mrs. Eric Gerstenberg, Mrs. Donald Wegg, Mrs. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick Jr., all of whom were felicitating the new director, Hubert Osborne, in the lobby. It was a good little evening, but on climbing the Goodman stairs I whispered to myself, "If this be Russia, give me Brazil!"

Committee of 100 Plans Social Events at Miami

Surf Club Will Open on Jan. 15.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Social life at Miami Beach is taking on that gayety which presages a brilliant season. Just now the smart set's attention is riveted on the Surf club's formal opening, scheduled for Jan. 15.

A committee of one hundred has a number of social events planned for the winter. First there will be an evening entertainment, Jan. 27, at the home of Gar Wood. There will be a luncheon and water sports afternoon at the Cocolobo Cay club, Jan. 30, and a grand ball at the Surf club, Feb. 20. The Bath club's annual costume ball, to be oriental in nature, will be given Feb. 27.

Elizabeth Poor Engaged.

Speaking of the Bath club brings to mind the announcement of the engagement of its president's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Poor, to Charles Winn Canfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Canfield of Chicago. The announcement is of wide interest here, where Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Poor and their daughter have made their winter home for seven years and are prominent among the winter colony. The Poors arrived a week ago to open their home on North Bay road. Mrs. Poor will entertain informally during the winter for her daughter on their yacht, the Granada IV.

Tropical foliage, which grows so quickly under the southern sun, has added much to the attractive privacy of the artistic group of villas on the shores of Indian creek. Many of the occupants of last season will return again this year. First, however, to return for the new year were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Healy and their child of Chicago. Others who have leased villas are Laurance Armour, Charles H. Glore and Earle H. Reynolds of Chicago.

Club for Yachtsmen.

Situated thirty miles down Biscayne bay, on a little island in Black Caesar's creek, is the headquarters of the Cocolobo Cay club, organization of winter visitors with yachting interests. The club's roster of membership, which is limited to forty, contains the names of the following Chicagoans and their yachts: Webb Jay, president of the club, the Troubadour; C. R. Dashiell, Centaur; John Hertz, Helen; and Frederick H. Rawson, Gadfly.

Polo is geting a play from the beachites, now. Two fields are in use, so that if the game on one field gets too one sided the onlooker merely has to turn and watch the other game. Among the players on the teams which will be described during the season as Ramblers, Wanderers, Flamingoes, Lambs, Doves, Rovers, Pelicans, and Cardinals are the following: John Hertz Sr., John Hertz Jr., Laurance Armour, Capt. Corpening, Charles Glore, Earle Reynolds, and Col. Robert R. McCormick, all of Chicago.

Edward N. Hurley, recent visitor, and Mrs. Hurley have returned to Chicago for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Helen Hurley, to William A. Ryan. The marriage will take place Jan. 17 in the Church of the Lady of Mount Carmel in Chicago. On their honeymoon trip they will come to Miami Beach before going on to the West Indies. Mr. and Mrs. Hurley plan to return here immediately after the marriage ceremony.

Chicagoans at Miami.

Chicagoans seen about the beach this week include: Mrs. T. M. Knox, Mrs. Kerry Meagher, George L. Rapp, Dr. Austin A. Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mallers, Dr. and Mrs. William Gilman, Mr. and Mrs. William Whitman, Senator Otis F. Glenn, Edward W. Cox, Mrs. William R. Emery, Mrs. E. E. Lehman and son, Ernest Jr.; Jesse L. Smith, P. T. Potts, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Krum, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Wisner, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Vanhagen, Mrs. A. C. Bothnerby, W. P. Murphy.

Racing at the Hialeah track will start Jan. 15. The inaugural handicap closed its book Nov. 20 with 88 nominations, and drawing horses from the following famous stables: Rancocas, Joseph E. Widener, C. V. Whitney, W. H. Travers, Bud Fisher, Belair Stud, J. C. Ellis, Greentree, Harned, Wheatley and George D. Widener. Six hundred horses are now on the grounds and each of the 950 stalls is expected to be filled by the opening bugle.

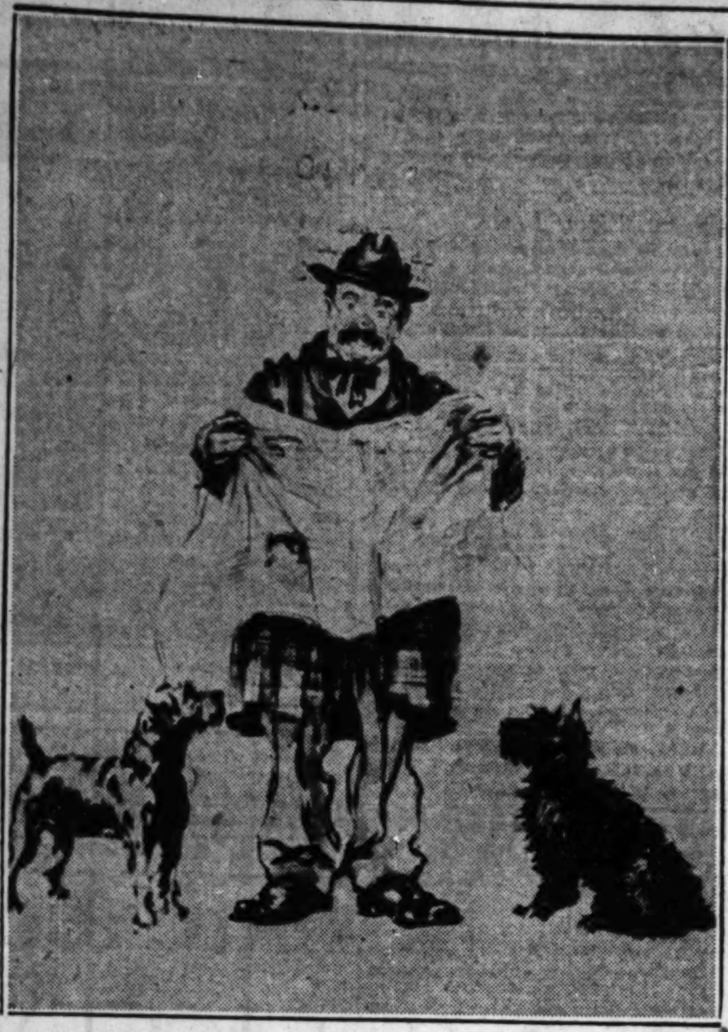
Interesting Art Exhibits Mark the New Year

Shows Range from Nancy Dyer's Pastels of French Peasants to Maj. Dugmore's Stirring Paintings of African Life.

By Eleanor Jewett.



"WHAT PRICE DOGS?" a characteristic sketch by Nancy Dyer, whose delightful exhibit of last winter is being followed up this year by a second charming show in the O'Brien Art galleries. The exhibition opened last Wednesday and will continue through the month. Miss Dyer is unique in her ability to bring to life the whimsical personalities inherent in the peoples of pastoral France. A back, with her, may be a speaking likeness. This exhibit is one of that rare sort which positively should not be missed.

THE new year is starting out with a generous number of new exhibitions in the various galleries. Unfortunately for our chronicle today the most of these started after our dead-line, Tuesday, so that except for the announcement that such-and-such is on at the So-and-So gallery, little can be done in the way of accurate or impulsive description. Still a few of these exhibitions follow up exhibits held last season by the same artist and when this is the case we are advanced a bit because we have at least an idea of what the artist in question can do.

For example, at the O'Brien galleries a delightful display of recent character sketches in pastel by Nancy Dyer, who took us by storm a year ago, was put on view Wednesday. Miss Dyer is a remarkably gifted person. She can put more personality, individuality, and character into a back than the most of us can faintly suggest in a face.

Here she is, then, back from France with the most charming and amusing incidents in the everyday life of the French peasant or person of the middle class! A priest with his group of young charges being hurried along on the wings of the summoning clock; a boy rejoicing in a circus to which only his head is admitted through a hole in the canvas while the rest of him wriggles impatiently at the joyful congregation of legs belonging to those inside who had the price of a ticket; another boy with a dog and another dog with a woman; three women in wooden sabots enjoying the show-window of a fine shoe shop; a waiter with a loaded tray; and marketing scenes. There is no end to the variety of subject in this exhibit, smaller, it is true, than that of last year, but replete, nevertheless, with delicious and tantalizing slices of life, picturesque, veracious, and invariably picked out with vitalizing color.

Intriguing Dog Portraits.

Then, consider Diana Thorne. Last year we had the pleasure of seeing a comprehensive exhibit of her etchings in the O'Brien gallery, today we find her exhibiting in the Roullier galleries. The exhibit, in spite of the announcement last Sunday, did not open until this last Friday and, therefore, in one sense, too late for the use of today's column. But we have, as suggested above, met Miss Thorne and her work before. Custom does not stale the charm of her facile imagination. She is an artist of gorgeously diversified talents. There are others who can treat dogs as superbly, perhaps, as herself, but I know of no one, who doing what she does with dogs, can also give a magnificent account of people—children as well as adults.

There is the touch of a Daumier in some of her work; the sardonic humor of a Toulouse-Lautrec shines through other of it; the charm of the romancer gleams in her poems of children, picture rhymes of children skipping, playing, dancing, warring, nursing, engaged in the thousand pursuits of childhood. Several years ago it was her etchings of children which first drew attention to her name in the Chicago Society of Etchers' annual exhibits at the Art institute.

Next we met her as the portrayer of dogs. These were not aristocratic dogs, they were just dogs, puppies of no breeding but infinite charm, mongrels of no beauty but infinite personality. Whimsical terriers and dignified spaniels, for one reason or another, sometimes as Miss Thorne remarked "because they just asked for it." Diana Thorne has painted, sketched, drawn, and etched a gallery full of dogs.

In the current exhibit we find a number of the dog prints and we find two delicious, delightful, and altogether intriguing portraits in oils of a Scottie for one and of two little pups whose breed has slipped my mind, for the second. These are entrancing. They make you want to dash out to the first taxi, cram your own dog inside and whirl on the wheels of gasoline over any amount of slippery pavement to Miss Thorne's studio, there to plant yourself with dog until such time as she will paint him.

Exciting and Interesting.

From the Roullier gallery it is but a step or two to Knoedler's where an exhibition is in progress which was opened in time for me to see it before writing this last Tuesday. On Jan. 1 in the Knoedler gallery there opened an exhibition of paintings of big game animals, birds, and landscapes by Maj. A. Radclyffe Dugmore and it is altogether one of the most exciting and interesting exhibits we have had in town this last year. This is an exhibition that boys and girls will like as well as the person of mature years. It is an exhibition composed of the paintings of great lions, of elephants, and moose, of zebras and tigers, wild swans and Canadian geese, of other things, too, excellently handled, of Irish landscapes and the Rocky wonders of the Canadian northwest.

The painting of the big African elephant called forth a story from Maj. Dugmore which sent the shivers down one's back even in the security of Michigan boulevard's distance from the jungle. For fifteen minutes Maj. Dugmore lay still on the ground at the foot of a five ton monster waiting to be crushed with one lift of that giant pad, or to be spared if the animal's curiosity could be satiated to such degree that he would retire without trampling the cause of his awakened interest. "Thank God," said the major, "that elephants have reverse gear! When they slowly began to back off I was never more thankful in my life."

Studying Elephants from Life.

He had been studying elephants that day, studying them from life. He was alone with his painting outfit and was immersed in rapid work upon a group that he had discovered when almost like great storm clouds he realized that more of the huge brutes had got his scent and were crowding upon him without a sound, except, and this is what got his ear, the curious rumblings of their vast insides.

He said he lay flat and hugged the earth tighter and tighter, scarcely daring to breathe. He had set a camera at a certain point with a time attachment and that is how he figures out that he lay fifteen minutes without moving, for when the animals finally decided he was not worth bothering with they went back and one of them passed through the glen where the camera waited and was photographed just at the fifteen minute pause.

The painting of lions at the drinking hole was worked up from sketches of the real beasts. Another superb study of lions, the male on guard and the two females lying at ease, "'Ware Scent," would be the title for it, is among the best in the room. The "Caribou in Snowstorm" is a fine painting of the beasts skittering off through a curtain of soft flakes.

"Whistling Swans at Sunrise."

"Whistling Swans at Sunrise" is a beautiful panel of white birds flying against a gray sky on which the dawn is turning the bright rays of the first light. It is as accurate as it is beautiful, for Maj. Dugmore, before he put brush to canvas, made many photographs of these birds in flight to be certain about the curve of their wings in motion.

But whoever sees this exhibit must spend a little time in the first room where are hanging the Irish landscapes and those from the Canadian Rockies. There, too, is the delicate and exquisite painting of boats, "Reflections, Nova Scotia Herring Boats," which is so lovely a painting it should not be allowed to leave town. "Evening on Lake O'Hara" and "Moraine Lake, the Valley of the Ten Peaks," are two paintings of mountains and lakes that glow with beauty.

Maj. Dugmore is a writer as well as a painter and his books on wild animal life are doubtless familiar to many. He has also brought back films of jungle life, among them "The Wonderland of Big Game" and "The Vast Sudan." Take your children when you go to this exhibit, for they will get a tremendous thrill from these paintings unless I am badly mistaken or the children different from those who have come my way. The exhibition is continuing to Jan. 17.

Clay Kelly Exhibit.

An exhibition of paintings by Clay Kelly, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts, is at present in the Revell gallery, or rather corner, because of all the so-called galleries in town aside from the legitimate ones, this has been from the start the least gallerylike. Again and again after rounding chairs and couches and innumerable other objects only to find one wall flanked by two shorter walls in an alcove, the middle of which is still burdened with merchandise, one is forced to wonder why and how the tiny space got the title of "Revell's Gallery." The title is too big for it. It should be called "The Walls, Revell's." The pictures will remain on view during the entire month of January.

On Friday two exhibitions opened at the Arts club. The one is of sculpture by Ossip Zadkine, whose wife's pictures on those walls have been a recent sensation. The second exhibit is of paintings by Jacques Villon.

The Chester H. Johnson galleries announce a showing of paintings by Degas, Renoir, Courbet and Gauguin, the self-portrait of Gauguin having particular importance.

At the Chicago Galleries.

Recent paintings by Leon Kroll and etchings by Samuel Chamberlain opened Tuesday in the Carson Pirie Scott gallery to continue through the month.

The most complete international exhibition of metal work and cotton textiles ever held in Chicago will open at the Art institute Jan. 19 and continue to Feb. 7.

An exhibition of paintings and miniatures by Anna Lynch opened Wednesday at the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue.

The Children's museum of the Art institute has just now an exhibit of paintings particularly appropriate for children. There are also modelings of animals that will delight the child eye and mind.

An exhibition of paintings and wood cuts by Frank Weathers Long is on view in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's Aid and may be seen Wednesday afternoons, Saturdays, or by appointment.

Danish Award May Be Handled Along Nobel Prize Lines

COPENHAGEN.—(AP)—An international prize for art, on lines similar to the Nobel prizes, is being considered by the administrators of the Carlsberg fund.

The fund was established through a legacy of Carl Jacobson, founder of the Carlsberg breweries.

While nothing definite has been decided, the idea is that the prize would be in money and on generous lines, possibly of about the same value as the Nobel prizes, and be awarded annually or every two years.

Premier M. Stauning has expressed keen approval as affording Denmark a chance to demonstrate her interest in international art.

Persians Desert Harem.

TEHERAN, Persia.—(AP)—No longer is the Persian woman shut up in the harem. Now she receives her husband's visitors in her salon. With Persian men adopting European customs, they allow the women to walk abroad in their company, and the veil gradually is being discarded.

Jesse A. White of Pewaukee, Wis., sends us the following verse which he has clipped [author unknown]:

It may be I'm old fashioned,
And my taste not much refined,
But the meals that suit my fancy
Are the good, old fashioned kind,
With the food all on the table,
And the hungry kids about,
And Dad and Mom right busy,
Handing all the good things out;
And knowing, in their presence,
I need not fear to state
That I'd like some bread an' gravy,
When I've finished up my plate.

30,000 Families in Berlin Living in Dark Cellars

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—Thirty thousand families in Berlin are living in cellars without light or air, it has been revealed, with the investigators adding that another 50,000 are living in antiquated homes without bathrooms or gas.

Great efforts have been made to relieve the housing shortage of the German capital, but red tape is making it impossible to solve the housing shortage at present, in view of the high cost of construction and the general shortage of funds.

A Berlin firm had planned the erection of numerous two room portable houses, which, owing to the wholesale production, were to cost only about $8 rent per month. The building authorities prohibited the outcarrying of the plan, because they declared that the rooms were too small. A bedroom 10x12 and a living room 16x16, a kitchenette, and bathroom were to form these new tiny sanitary relief houses.

Because authorities want them to wait until good times come and until there is enough money to build huge old fashioned flats 80,000 Berlin families will have to continue to live in their unhygienic homes.

United America Is Goal of Southerners

Let's Be Friends, Brazilians Urge United States

Admire Enterprise of North Americans.

(This is the fifth of a series of South American stories by The Tribune's Rome correspondent, who was in Brazil during its revolution.)

By David Darrah.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Picture in Rotogravure section.)

RIO DE JANEIRO.—[Special.]—Nearly everywhere one goes in in South America one hears Americans say: "The Brazilian is our best friend." He is a good friend. We have many, however, in the other republics—a growing number.

Among the men of importance and prominence of "Rio" who are staunch friends of the United American idea and admirers of the enterprise and method of the people of the United States is Señor Paulo Rittencourt, publisher of "Rio's" biggest and best morning newspaper, the Correio da Manha.

Señor Bittencourt's paper has just had its housewarming in a new home on the Avenida Gomes Vreia, and in its design and arrangement he has followed American ideas of newspaper production. The Correia has made great strides in circulation and in influence in the community and this was shown strikingly in the editorials and news articles printed both during the revolution and during the period when President Vargas was forming his new government. The paper speaks fearlessly and frankly on all subjects affecting the welfare of Brazil and it is listened to attentively by those in power.

Knows His America.

Señor Bittencourt knows the old world, having been educated in England, but he also knows the United States and pays frequent visits to New York. In talking with him some nights ago, he expressed interest in the New York Daily News' new plant which he had seen on his last visit. He also made detailed study of New York's other newspaper plants in the designing of his new building. Unique among Brazil's newspapers is the editorial room of the Correia, a huge hall where editors, reporters, and copy readers all work together at desks arranged around the room, as in American newspapers.

Señor Bittencourt is remarkably well informed on affairs in the United States; on his next visit to the United States he hopes to visit Chicago, and he expressed a desire to see THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its tower and plant. I talked with him for an hour about the revolution in Brazil.

"It has been a step forward in the affairs of our country and we look forward now to a period of peace and readjustment; the revolutionary change will be accompanied by some modification in our economic policy, no doubt, how much we cannot say, but many mistakes have been made in the past out of a shortsighted policy of favoritism which will have to be rectified. Of course, our relations with the United States will continue to be as friendly as ever; the new government doubtless will try to make them closer and more friendly still in all ways. This new government, with a few exceptions, has been well constituted and has some excellent men in whom we have confidence for straightening out the tangles of administration into which the government has lapsed."

Stimson Misquoted.

Señor Bittencourt through his paper was strongly instrumental in clarifying the delicate situation which momentarily may have prevailed between the United States and the old government after the Junta took power. The old government had issued communique giving a modified version of Secretary Stimson's pronouncement about our policy toward the Brazilian revolutionists. The secretary's words were misquoted. The Correio a few days later printed in detail the exact words of the statement from Washington, with editorial explanation and protest against the government's distortion of the wording.

The Correio also raised its voice against the criticism which arose in some quarters about our diplomacy in Brazil being too closely aligned with the old government party. An article appeared the other day in defense of Ambassador Morgan and his work, and Senor Bittencourt said to me:

"Of course Mr. Morgan was on friendly terms with the old government. That was his duty. He is thoroughly conversant with Brazil, however, and his relations with past governments in no nowise keep him from being an equally valuable and effective link between his country and the present government and continuing his work of furthering friendly interests."

Vargas May Visit.

The friendship of Brazil for the United States and the sense of its leaders for the new Pan-Americanism was attested to in conversations which I had with dozens of other Brazilian chiefs in the new government.

It is not without possibility that President Vargas will pay a visit to the United States shortly. He intimated to me that he would like to do so. He will first, however, make several trips over the north and south and west of Brazil.

There is a growing interest in the greatest of South American republics in the cultural and intellectual movements in the United States, and efforts are being made in the American colony in Rio de Janeiro to get Brazilian literary and artistic productions before the American public.

When Sinclair Lewis was awarded the Nobel prize recently, the press of Brazil gave great prominence to the event and printed Lewis' pictures and a review of his life and literary works, while copies of his books in Portuguese translation appeared widely in all the bookshops.

While, as foreign literature, French still holds the main place in Brazilian taste, there is a growing interest and demand for American magazines and periodicals, which are sold copiously on the street kiosks.

Brazil has a considerably developed modern literature and has a fine talent and taste for music. A dozen excellent modern writers and novelists testify to this.

An Urgent Invitation.

The Brazilians would like to have more North Americans visit their country. During my stay, I read in the newspapers not a few articles expressing wonder that people of the United States spent so much money on trips to Europe when Brazil and South America offer such a new and unexplored field, off the beaten tracks, of indescribable natural panoramas of scenery, of hospitable people, comfortable hotels, and glimpses of an unknown and admirable region which can be visited with comfort.

The main drawback to South American touring, it is recognized, is the distance and time required. For those who have a month to five weeks for a vacation, faster ships between Rio de Janeiro and New York are required.

Nevertheless, there is a considerable flow of travel of Americans looking for new fields down across the equator, as the hotel registers of Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro indicate. With the perfection of air travel, this is likely to increase. On the other hand, there has been a remarkable increase of Brazilian interest in American schools. American authorities here are receiving constant inquiries about educational institutions, and the exchange of professors and students has been helping to shape closer cultural relations.

Race Problems.

Social problems add to Brazil's perplexities. The country, like the United States, has its black belt, and throughout the population has a large element of Negro and Indian blood. Immigration from Europe is encouraged, especially by agencies in Sao Paulo, but the flow does not appear to be adequate for the development of the country, especially the interior in such states as Matto Grosso, which has an area of 800,000 squares miles and fewer than 1,000,000 inhabitants. These great upland plains can take care of the world's excess population for centuries. So far, however, only the Japanese immigrants will go there. The Europeans mostly cling to the coast line.

During the last year it is estimated that 95,000 immigrants entered Brazil, mostly going to Sao Paulo; of these, the Japanese were most numerous, followed by Hungarians, Lithuanians, Jugoslavs, Germans, Italians, and Russians. The Italians and Germans are the most detested element.

The Japanese go about their emigration thoroughly and arrive in Brazil with their doctors, schoolmasters, sometimes even with their own police, judges and financial administrators. They buy their land in Brazil through the consulates before leaving home, and when they arrive, make for the interior of Goyaz or Matto Grosso where often at a cost of numerous victims to climate complete Japanese villages gradually spring up with signs over business houses in Japanese characters.

Communication Needed.

The Italians are found mostly in Sao Paulo, where they count some of the wealthiest families. Italians do most of the work on the great coffee fazendas. The Germans take mostly to the southern states. In Rio Grande do Sul, German is heard almost more than Portuguese. One other unsatisfactory factor is the fact that all immigrants do not settle permanently in the country, many being only harvest hands who return to their homes at the end of the season.

The natural corollary to this settlement problem of saturating the land is communications. More adequate interior communications especially are necessary. There are 19,000 miles of railways, as compared with 24,000 miles in Argentina. The mileage increase has been 75 per cent since 1907, but in the last two years only two hundred miles have been constructed.

The Brazilian railways constitute 34 per cent of all the lines in South America. The United States constructed three complete trains for the famous run between Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, with its "Blue train" service. Large purchases of locomotives and rolling stock are being made in the United States. Only one important railway line is, at present, electrified, but further electrification is projected.

Religious Problems.

In religion, the peoples of the South American countries are predominantly of the Roman Catholic faith. In some countries the Roman church is the established state church; in others it is subventioned by the state. In the republics of the Atlantic seaboard, while there is a distinct tendency to make religion and state entirely separate matters, there are, nevertheless, established there in the cities of Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires the two great cardinal archbishoprics of the church. All religions are tolerated in all the countries.

In Colombia the Roman church enjoys great influence, having control of education. In Peru and Ecuador its influence is great. Only the Catholic religion may be taught in the schools of Peru. Chile grants a subsidy to the Roman church. Contrasting to this, Uruguay admits divorce, unusual in Roman Catholic countries. Peru especially is noted for its many and beautiful churches and its open air religious processions.

Early Missionaries.

From the days of its conquest, almost, the evangelizing work has gone on. It will be remembered that the purpose of the early conquistadores, apart from finding gold, was to carry Christianity to the Indians. In fact, Torquemada, the confessor of Isabella, persuaded his sovereign to finance Columbus on the score of the spread of the faith that it would entail. And when Atahualpa, emperor of the Incas, invited Pizarro to visit him at the Cajamara baths the latter was accompanied by an ecclesiastic who invited the sun king to embrace the faith of the Christians.

The early missionaries, especially the Jesuits played a large part in the early civilization of the country. The first Jesuit missions were established in Paraguay in 1610 and they practically ruled the country until expelled in 1769. Now the established religion is Roman Catholic, but toleration of all religions is marked and only the civil ceremony renders marriage valid.

Into this land, which was once the stronghold of the missions, there began two years ago a migration of Mennonites from Iowa and Illinois, to whom the government gave a 3,000,000 acre tract in the wilderness of the Gran Chaço. There, isolated from others, they are building a refuge in the jungles, and developing a territory which the government is anxious to settle.

Protestantism Spreads.

Of late years there has been a tendency for the spread of Protestantism. In 1925 there were 789,978 people listed as professing Protestantism, together with 3,249 foreign missionaries, 6,008 native missionaries, 3,590 organized churches, and 3,772 chapels. The Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Salvation Army, and some of the other practical adjuncts of Protestantism appear to be organized everywhere and are frequented by Catholic youth as well as Protestant. But the figures of those of the Protestant faith, under a million, are infinitesimal in comparison to the 70,000,000 to 80,000,000 people who are predominantly Catholic.

Nevertheless, alarm is frequently expressed in the Roman church's publications lest Protestantism become a menace to the establishment of its own hold. Objection is especially raised to the practical Protestant activities such as the schools, Y. M. C. A., educational activities, clinics, and publications, and the people of the various countries are told that Protestantism is a menace to them and only cloaking political and commercial interests.

In one publication [Civilta Cattolica, April 5, 1930] it was stated that the Protestant missionaries in South America were responsible for the antipathies presently existing between the north and south hemispheres of the Americas.

Told to Hoover.

Representations were made to President Hoover on his trip down here about the menace to good relations constituted by the missionaries and preachers from the north, and, it was added, "while the citizens of the south would have no difficulty in giving a good reception to the commercial agents, the manufacturers, diplomats, and such, they cannot adapt themselves to such a large invasion of preachers and missionaries."

By pulling out this root of undesirable missionaries, it was added in this Roman publication, "relations of mutual sympathy and perfect understanding will not be long in following, relations which can only add greatly to the progress of the two continents, as to order and peace, generally."

Pilgrim Traffic Pays Millions to Arabian Coffers

Trek to Sacred Cities Yields Huge Revenue.

JEDDAH, Kingdom of the Hedjaz.—(AP)—This kingdom, principal state of Arabia, is starting to collect its yearly revenue, estimated at $25,000,000, from pilgrim traffic to the sacred cities of Mecca and Medina.

The money goes into the public coffers of Ibn Saud who, besides being king of the Hedjaz, is emperor of the Nejd. As such he is leader of the Wahibis, the fierce desert warriors who are the fundamentalists of the Mohammedan religion.

The pilgrimage season starts in January, and from far corners of the Moslem world, by steamship or train, on camel, horse or donkey, in ox cart or automobile, or wearily afoot, faithful followers of the prophet are beginning to stream into the country.

Continues Until May.

The flood of visitors will not subside until May.

And this squatty, torrid town on the burning shores of the Red sea is one of the chief clearing houses for the traffic.

Its normal population of 30,000 is bustling with the business of caring for the vanguard of the 1931 pilgrimage, awaking from the drowsy atmosphere that holds the place through the last seven months of each year.

Jeddah is the port of Mecca. There are numerous foreign steamship agencies here and about a hundred Europeans are engaged in the business of importing and exporting pilgrims.

This year they have had to overcome effects of a tragedy of last May, when 600 pilgrims perished in a fire aboard the steamer Asia.

Were it not for the pilgrim traffic it is considered doubtful if Ibn Saud could keep his government going.

Fleece the Pilgrims.

The population, only a little more than that of New York City, is scattered over an area equal to one-third of the United States, and there are great stretches of desert, barren plains and mountainous waste in which not even the nomadic Bedouins can keep body and soul together.

The living which the tribesmen make by breeding camels, horses, sheep and goats is scant. There is little left for taxes or other public revenue.

So when followers of the prophet begin to stream into the country, the government seizes its opportunity.

At Jeddah, for example, each arrival must go through quarantine, paying a fee of $6 for the process of being thoroughly scrubbed, deloused and vaccinated.

This takes place at a station called Suakim, which was once a market place for the sale of slaves, eunuchs and concubines to wealthy merchants and desert sheiks of the east.

Once free of the quarantine, the pilgrims start for Mecca or Medina, the holy cities. The indigent cross the burning sands by foot, walking at night and resting through the heat of the day. Others ride camels, horses or mules or sit hours on end in creeping ox carts.

By Motorbus and Car.

But the more affluent travel by motorbus and the wealthy hire automobiles, mostly of American make.

King Ibn Saud profits here, for he receives $32.50 as his share of each automobile fare and $2 for each motorbus passenger. There are nearly 700 cars and busses engaged in the traffic.

The pilgrims have numbered as high as 200,000 in one year and it is estimated that each leaves from $250 to $500 in the country.

A large part of this goes into the king's coffers. Besides the direct head taxes, he maintains a series of hospices, camps, restaurants and relief stations to care for weary travelers who cannot afford to speed across the desert.

The basis of all this business is religious. The devout Mohammedan believes that a single visit to the huge black Kaaba stone at Mecca and a drink from the sacred well of Zam Zam washes away his sins, while four visits to the holy of holies assure him a seat in paradise.

For thirteen centuries the faithful have been flocking to the gate of this future life. Many, indeed, spend years to reach their haven of spiritual salvation, only to collapse from exhaustion at the end of the weary trek.

COINCIDENCES

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to "Strange Coincidences," Chicago Tribune.

On the Screen and in Person.

During my schooldays I was particularly fond of a certain Ruth. She had the loveliest black curls to be seen, and, to add to her charms, she was an actress!

One afternoon at a picture show one of the short reels unexpectedly featured my Ruth! Before I had recovered from that surprise I felt a tap on my shoulder—and a familiar voice whispered: "O, Aleene, don't I look funny up there?"

Turning, I saw Ruth in person, and to this day I can feel the thrill of unexpectedly seeing my chum on the screen, and also at the same time finding her sitting in back of me! I call that a real coincidence. A. M. M.

Traveled Before Meeting.

It was 2 a. m. The place, Churkin, Siberia, across the bay from Vladivostok. The scene, the barracks of the American expeditionary forces, 5,000 miles from home. The writer was on guard duty that night and was talking to a relief guard who had come to take his place.

"Where are you from?" I asked.

"Chicago," he replied.

"Live on the south side?"

"Yep. Been living at —— Michigan avenue for six years," he said.

"——Michigan avenue!" I exclaimed. "Why, I'm your next door neighbor. Funny we never met before."

I had to travel 5,000 miles to meet the boy next door! A. W.

Something in Common.

We were entertaining a young man delegate to a young people's conference several year ago. When he told my husband what town he was from, my husband remarked, "Well, all I know about that town is that I got the worst cup of coffee there that I ever had in my life." "Where did you get it?" the young man asked.

"At a little hole in the wall restaurant across from the station," my husband answered.

"Oh," said the young man with an embarrassed grin, "I work there, and my job is to make the coffee.

E. F. G.

Reciprocal Invitations.

A friend of mine lived in a different town and we used to get together quite often. However, a long time had elapsed and we had not visited. One day I decided I would have her and her husband for Sunday dinner and wrote a letter.

Going to the postoffice to mail it I received one from her asking my husband and me for dinner for their anniversary, on the same Sunday that I had wanted to see her. E. W. K.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Foretold Gift of Money.

Some time ago my husband was out of work several months due to illness. One night I dreamed of some one giving me a bag of money.

Not long after that, in response to a knock at the door, I greeted one of the men my husband had worked with. He handed me some money which he said had been made up in his department. At once the dream I had forgotten came to my mind. Needless to say, the money was appreciated.

C. M.

Helped Her Cake Baking.

Because of our fondness for a certain devil's food cake, I was much distressed when I found I had forgotten the recipe. This recipe had been given to me by a cousin and I had failed to write it in my cook book.

However, after worrying about it and trying to make the cake several times, each time proving to be a failure, I dreamed one night of talking to my cousin and asking for the recipe. She told it to me word by word. The next day I remembered my dream and made the cake. It turned out to be a success. L. F.

Death Valley? It All Sounds Like a Dream

It May Be Dead, but It Pulsates with Life.

By Cholly Traveler.

THE dead sea of sand—Death valley.

Not even a misshapen bough of the Joshua tree casts a shadow, not a Gila monster nor a horned toad defies that desert floor which cradled prehistoric seas.

Yet the vast expanse of sandy waste blooms forth during the midwinter season; Death valley, 276 feet below sea level, is splashed with color—myriad purples, yellow, orange, reds, delicate shadings of ethereal beauty.

Two million acres have been set aside in Death valley by the federal government for the use of the public as a national wonderland. And the desert season is on.

* *

Lowest and Highest.

Once famous for its tragedies, the valley is gaining fame among travelers.

Bad Water is the lowest spot in the United States. The topographic survey shows its subelevation 310 feet minus.

Directly above Bad Water towers the variegated range of the Funeral mountains, with Dante's View on the crest, a viewpoint with observatory more than 6,000 feet up.

From Dante's View the vast expanse of the valley spreads before the eyes. Across the valley is the eastern wall formed by the Panamints, with Telescope peak dominating the range and rearing its hoary head 11,000 feet above the desert.

In a World of Ice.

Beyond the Panamints one gets a glimpse of a peak some ninety miles away. It is Mount Whitney, the highest point in the United States.

Reaching an elevation of 14,501 feet, Mount Whitney encircles within its snowy crown a group of magnificent glaciers. Ice caves, blue shadowed grottos, gleaming snowfields, and deep cut valleys, all white and lavender and palest gold in their glorious iridescence—these are the winter tapestries that hang high above the desert's floor.

In this icy world there is something akin to the mad beauty of the silent stretches of Death valley.

Strange are the sensations of those who reach the glacial summits and look across to the depths of the desert. And stranger still are these reactions on leaving the radiance of winter behind and entering the tranquil places where deepening shadows etch fleeting masterpieces on a canvas of sand.

As in a Dream.

Below spreads an area that is colored as with pastel crayons. Delicate colors of all hues and shades blend into a startling mosaic, yet convey an impression of solitude. The desolation which one associates with the desert gives way to realization of the beauty of its natural flora.

The desert mirage has a fascination for those who visit the valley. Out of the carpet of sand a deep blue, ghostlike lake appears. Shade trees trace lacey patterns on its shore and are uncannily reflected in clear waters.

As in a dream, motor cars fly past—the hard, white road, as smooth as a city pavement, begins and ends in the lovely sapphire lake. The mystery of the dry lake has been solved. The five or six miles of its bed is a gleaming expanse of alkali, once the bottom of former seas, which to the eye is as a tide of moving waters.

Vivid Testimonials.

The graves of pioneers who came to wrest from the desert its promised wealth and were lured on by the mirages are there today. They are vided testimonials of the reality of these phantom waters. Perhaps visionary ships peopled these imaginary seas, and, like the specters which the sailors knew, enticed the frontiersmen on.

Vapory shadows with a weird glow still seem to pulsate the twilight hours in the land of the mirage.

Then there is the Devil's Golf Course, an area of salt which extends in all directions.

In the midst of this field, composed of millions of minarets, spires, castellated forms, and miniature grottos, is Pluto's Salt Pool, a natural well of jade green brine, on the top of which tiny crystals are constantly forming and dropping to the bottom. The walls of the pool are shimmering salt.

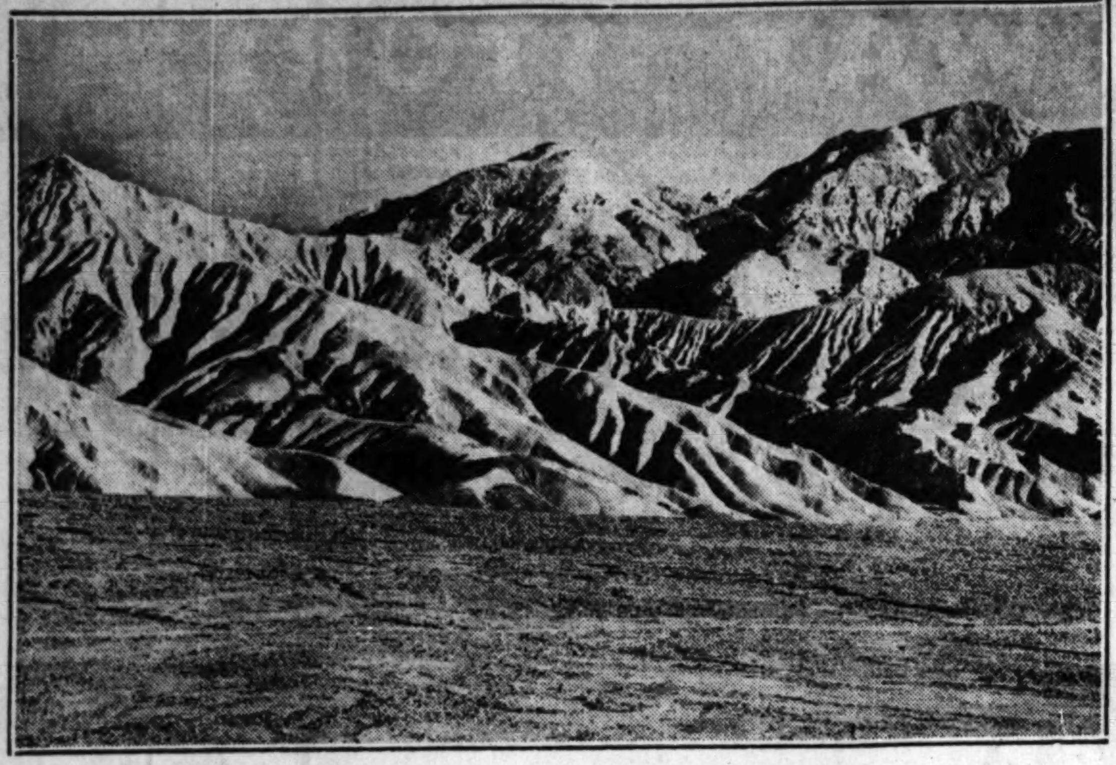
Man Conquers.

Many canyons debouch into the valley, but no two are alike. Golden canyon changes its aspect from a narrow gateway, flanked by rugged, twisted, slanting rocks in yellow, brown, red, and black, to a more open canyon, on the floor of which are domes of soft silk resembling huge sponges.

At the upper end a sheer wall of palisades composed of red standstone forms a barrier hundreds of feet high.

At Furnace Creek one finds an oasis watered with a stream rushing down from the wash, and as a final touch of something or other a nine hole grass golf course.

IN AN ENCHANTED DESERT



HERE the camera has caught some of the lights and shadows that shift the contour of the massive formations surrounding Death valley. The glowing colors lend to the earth's surface a living light. Death valley was once famous for its tragedies; now it is becoming known for its startling colorings.

Yes, Yes, but Do Dead Rats Tell Any Tales?

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—The boy Pied Pipers of the town of Liegnitz are wishing that every rat had several tails.

There's a reason. Liegnitz has a great deal of civic pride, which seeks its outlet in various useful ways. One of them is to make the city safe for those who hate rats. Every year there is a gala one day rat war. The city is in the market for tails, and they net their catcher 12 cents each. Last year more than 10,000 rat tails were thus purchased by the town fathers.

Then the statisticians got busy. They discovered that every year the sale of rat tails increased. They could not figure out how that was possible, in view of the fact that all rats were destroyed every year. Surely not even Liegnitz could have many more than 10,000 rats in its walls.

An investigation followed. It was discovered that yearly the Pied Pipers of Liegnitz had broadened their circle of activities, and had brought in precious rat tails from miles around.

The eldorado for rat catchers is done for. This year the city fathers will show their love for their city by buying only Liegnitz tails. What special mark of recognition Liegnitz rats carry has not been announced.

Girl Will Teach Turkish Children American Games

ANGORA, Turkey. — (AP) — The American gift for play is to be instilled in the children of Asia Minor by a young Turkish girl, Guzine Ihsan, daughter of a former governor of Smyrna.

Armed with a master's degree from the department of hygiene and physical instruction of Wellesley college, she has returned to Angora to train teachers of physical instruction who will spread American methods throughout Anatolia.

"Of course, Turkish children have always played," Miss Ihsan says, "but they have played as individualists, a lonely sort of play. What I want to spread in Turkey is the gift for team work for which America is famous."

She also hopes to organize gymnastics for adults.

Austria's New Chancellor Is Anti-Socialist

VIENNA.—(AP)—A man who once refused the chancellorship of Austria because his wife was ill has been called to the management of the republic.

He is Dr. Otto Ender, self-appointed and successful governor of the province of Vorarlberg on the Swiss frontier.

Dr. Ender not only picked himself as governor in 1918 but he wrote a constitution for the province. And when he came to Vienna a few weeks ago to assume the chancellorship he left in the gubernatorial chair a man of his own selection.

Busy with Law Practice.

By profession a lawyer, he was busy with his practice at Bregenz when the end of the world war sent Austrian soldiers swarming back from the front. There was much talk of bolshevism in those days and Dr. Ender took it upon himself to see that this system should not get its fingers upon his home district.

With none to say him nay he took charge of the whole province and he held his governorship over its 140,000 inhabitants until the change in federal government early in December brought him to Vienna.

What most attracted attention to him was the fact that Vorarlberg is the only Austrian province with a treasury surplus. Treasury surpluses have been rare in post-war Austria.

Besides being governor, Dr. Ender headed the electric power system in Vorarlberg, was chairman of the good roads commission of the tourist bureau and of the farm aid bureau. He also commanded the "heimwehr," or antisocialistic guard of the province.

But though a stanch "heimwehrman," Dr. Ender refused to follow the spokesman for Austrian fascism, Prince Starhemberg, when the latter a few months ago raised the cry of "away with parliament."

Hostile to Revolutions.

"I am a democrat, and will not lend my hand to revolution," said Ender.

He modeled his Vorarlberg constitution on the Swiss system of government, perhaps having his attention directed there by the fact that his wife is a daughter of Switzerland.

A year ago, when Dr. Ender was asked to rush to Vienna and take the chancellorship, he replied:

"I can give you advice but only for one day. My wife is threatened with appendicitis and my place is by her side. Give the chancellorship to somebody else."

Italian Records Make Sure of Duce's Fame

ROME.—(AP)—If any man has a right to the fame of being known by his last name alone probably it is Mussolini.

Letters having only that name as an address are regularly delivered to the duce's office.

But the official bulletin of the chamber of deputies always carries in brackets the term "Capo del Governo," meaning "head of the government," following the name "Mussolini," in reporting his speeches.

Russian Refugees Are Still Seeking Aid from Chinese

HARBIN, Manchuria.—(AP)—Refugees from Soviet Russia still stream into Chinese territory despite efforts of Siberian authorities to keep their nationals inside their own boundaries.

And more than ever, they are seeking aid in Manchuria.

With few exceptions, these people are destitute, possessing barely enough clothing to keep them from freezing to death.

Food, they say, doesn't exist in Siberia in large enough quantities to keep body and soul together and they are forced to depend on Russian relief societies in Manchurian cities for maintenance.

Once across the border, the majority of the refugees make their way to Harbin where they are sure of at least temporary aid.

Those who have the price, or are able to borrow it, buy passage to Shanghai, Peiping or other cities of China proper, where there is a greater likelihood of their obtaining work.

Work in Harbin is almost impossible to find. The city is passing through a serious financial depression and thousands of Russians and Chinese are faced by a jobless winter.

The Chinese Eastern railway, the principal support of the city, has been forced to reduce its personnel more than 50 per cent and is lowering freight and passenger rates in a desperate effort to stimulate business.

Need Educction for Jobs.

ISTANBUL.—(AP)—The Turkish government is making education a necessity to get a job. Next May there is to be a mobilization of certificate holders from A-B-C schools for adults—and thereafter those not armed with such certification will get no jobs in government offices nor in private business establishments.

Colleges in Samarkand.

SAMARKAND, Uzbekistan, U. S. S. R.—(AP)—The first three colleges have just been opened in this ancient capital of Tamerlane. They are a cotton institute, an agricultural school and a medical school. Eighty per cent of the students are natives.

Hungarians Have Difficult Time Getting Divorce

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—Hungary is tightening up its divorce laws more than ever in 1931.

A law of 1930 providing for a "public attorney for the protection of matrimony" at divorce trials, to try to reconcile the two parties.

But in addition to this the law effective in 1931 requires that legal proof must be produced as to the cause of divorce—even when both parties declare their intention to be divorced. In "scandalous" cases the sentence is to be delivered behind closed doors.

Erase Those Signs of Advancing Age!

WRINKLES and relaxed contours often come before you know it! Yet they may be checked or prevented—through Helena Rubinstein's safe, sure, scientific methods, available here at the "Salon Complete."

As a woman approaches middle age, the tissues of her skin relax, lose their youthful elasticity . . . Suddenly she is aware of tiny lines, then unsightly wrinkles. Her facial contour begins to droop. Her chin becomes less firm . . . Then, she yearns for vanished youth!

These conditions can be postponed almost indefinitely. Or if they have already appeared, they can be corrected. For Helena Rubinstein has for years studied methods and devised treatments to regain and retain the fresh, clear beauty of youth.

Despite their amazing effectiveness, these treatments are not expensive. They range upwards in price from $3.50—or in courses as desired.

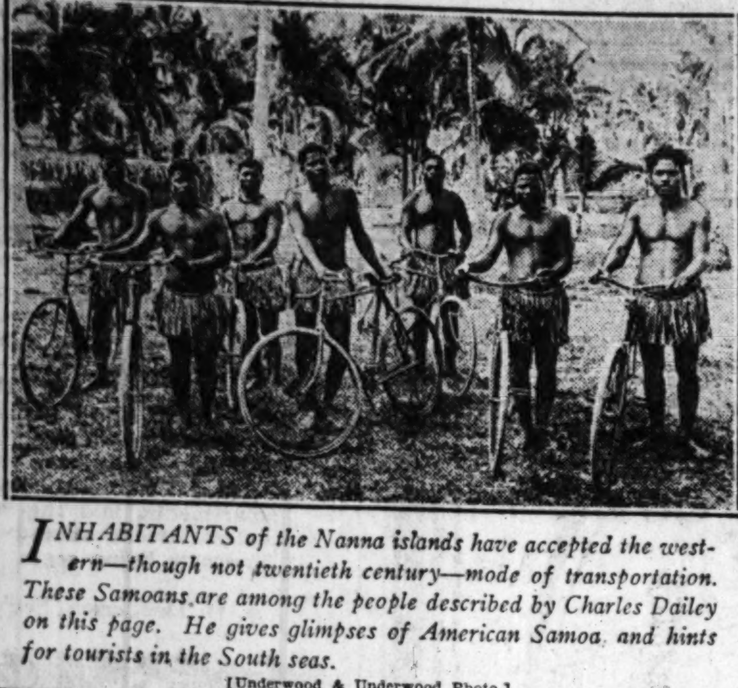
Americans Start Swarming to Samoa

Surprises Lurk for Tourists in the South Seas

Leisurely Travel Reveals Rare Adventure.

THEY HIKE BY BIKE



INHABITANTS of the Nanna islands have accepted the western—though not twentieth century—mode of transportation. These Samoans are among the people described by Charles Dailey on this page. He gives glimpses of American Samoa and hints for tourists in the South seas.

[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

By Charles Dailey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PAGOPAGO.—[Special.]—The slogan, "See America First," still holds good. And while countless thousands, having seen America, turn annually to Europe, yet those who realize that the great American destiny with regard to commerce and the output of our industries lies to the west, are turning to the vast areas of the Pacific and South seas and antipodes as well. Year after year the American flag is more and more seen in the Pacific regions; even in the British colonies and dominions we are getting a foothold.

From a tourist standpoint there is much to see. The business man will find his eyes opened to the trade possibilities of the Pacific. Yet from a scenic standpoint and for leisurely study of the people both north and south of the equator, a tour through the South seas and the westernized countries to the south of them, and thence northward through the Dutch East Indies, the Straits settlements, and Burma and India, and then through Siam, French Indo-China, the Philippines, China, Manchuria, and Japan, amply will repay the tourist, whether he be writer, teacher, sociologist, manufacturer, artist, or trader. It is one continuous panorama. Instead of the round-the-Pacific tour, which now has become popular and with several chartered steamers in its service, it will reward the tourist many times over if he will make the journey leisurely and devote a few weeks or a month to areas that he now must visit in a few hours or a few days.

Across the Equator.

In such an itinerary one will have ample time between the regular boats to make a close study of conditions and possibilities. The painter, the novelist, the student of ethnology or of folklore will find equal opportunity with that afforded the business man or the young folk just out of college and taking a year or so in travel before entering business.

It should be remembered that Hawaii, "the Paradise of the Pacific," is but six days from the American coast, with regular steamers from Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles; so one has a choice of routes. One can spend a week or a month there and then has the choice of two splendid lines to the South seas, while a third line that is increasingly popular is one from San Francisco to New Zealand and Australia via Tahiti and the Cook islands.

Assuming that Hawaii already has been visited on a tour across the Pacific to China or Japan, let us take the boat which, after a brief stop at Honolulu, sails directly into the South seas. One already has donned his tropical clothing at Honolulu, and after a few days' sail on calm and balmy seas, crosses the equator and meets Father Neptune when he comes aboard with his court and exacts the penalty from the newcomer, receiving the perennial pass from his hands.

At Pagopago.

A few days more and Samoa is reached. Eastern Samoa, long held by the American navy and now only recently taken over as an American civil colony, is the first stop. As present schedules are arranged, one has only about eight hours in Pagopago [pronounced [Pangopango], the chief city on the Island of Tutuila, and it is three weeks until the next boat. Hotel accommodations are lacking in Pagopago, but, now that the American congress formally has taken over Eastern Samoa and tourists come in greater numbers, better housing facilities will result, and also there may be time for a visit to British Samoa, which will be dealt with in another article.

America's connection with Tutuila and the adjacent islands dates from the visit of Commander Mead in 1872, but it was only a visit. Yet this visit left its impression and when, in later years, Britain, Germany, and France, in the race for imperialism which led to the world war, began the seizure from the natives of the various islands of the South seas, the inhabitants of Tutuila, under the leadership of two chieftains, Tuitele and Mauga, formally offered to cede the group to the United States in 1902, reiterating a request that had been made in 1900, but which had been ignored. The American navy, meantime, had been putting into Pago-Pago in its effort to prevent by its visits the seizure of these islands by one of the European powers.

Wished on U. S.

The American commandant then at Pagopago forwarded this petition to Washington, asking that the cession offer be accepted, so that the natives no longer would be ashamed of their appeal being ignored. The result was that on July 21, 1902, President Roosevelt sent the Samoans a greeting expressing the appreciation of the American people, sending to each signer of the petition and the deed of cession that accompanied it, a watch, medal, and diploma. Later the other islands of the eastern group were formally ceded.

Samoa was wished on the United States by the natives, who had been impressed with the kindliness of the Americans as compared with the Britishers and Germans who from time to time had called at the islands.

In trying to preserve Samoa for the Samoans the Americans had established a naval base in the harbor of Pago-Pago under an act approved by the President March 2, 1899. A survey had been made of Pago-Pago harbor in 1890 and some tracts were formally purchased from the natives in 1891 and 1892. It was in 1899 that the people began a campaign for formal American cession to the United States to protect themselves from European aggression. The American postoffice at Pago-Pago was opened Oct. 1, 1900. Various regulations followed in the next two years and in 1902 President Roosevelt sent formal greetings and presents, which latter were delivered Jan. 16, 1903. Manua island was ceded in July, 1904, and several other minor islands later were ceded and watches were presented the local chiefs as souvenirs.

Cordial, Obliging.

Germany meantime had taken forcibly the western group and called it Samoa. The Americans had called their group Tutuila, after the largest island in the eastern archipelago, following the visit of a presidential commission to Naval Governor Crose Oct. 21, 1912. Although recognized by the President, the cessions of 1900 and 1904 were not acted upon by congress until the spring of 1929, but an act of Aug. 5, 1909, recognized Tutuila as a "possession." It was not until 1930 that a congressional committee visited Tutuila and ironed things out in an official way. Until the machinery provided for by the report of this committee it authorized the government of American Samoa by the navy continues.

The tourist will find in all the Samoan group both beauty and charm. He will find the natives friendly, cordial, and obliging. The one who wrote truest of Samoa, especially what is now British Samoa and mandated under the league of nations to New Zealand, was a Britisher. It will pay any prospective visitor to the South seas to read the writings of Robert Louis Stevenson, whose tomb, with that of his wife, is on top of a mountain overlooking Apia and the quiet blue sea beyond. If one has not the time to stop over in Tutuila there is leisure sufficient for an inspection of Pago-Pago and for a quick motor run to a place or two westward thereof. The ship usually lies over in the harbor for eight hours or more.

The Rainmaker.

Pago-Pago, the capital, lies on a semi-circular bay that is the cone of an extinct volcano, the walls of which rise precipitately on either side of the new moon shaped harbor, which has a depth of several hundred feet. The ship from San Francisco arrives usually soon after breakfast and rarely gets away until late in the afternoon. One enters through a narrow gateway, the eastern side of which is marked by an almost unscalable mountain known to the Americans as the Rainmaker. A rainmaker it is indeed, and, as everywhere else in the tropics, the downpour is sudden and heavy, and yet does not last long. When a low lying cloud comes over and strikes the Rainmaker it is at once precipitated, and those in the valley rush for cover the instant the cloud is observed. In a few minutes, except at rare seasons, the sun is again shining with its tropical brilliancy.

The naval station, a group of houses of the staff on duty here, the native and semi-foreign settlement, with a small golf links and a drill ground, occupy the small space between the water line and the towering mountain to the west. To the north and along the east side of the harbor is a road passing many villages, several churches of Christian denominations, and a school or two. From the east side the beauty of the naval station is best enjoyed across the bay, with its background of heavily foliaged and practically inaccessible slope nearly a thousand feet high.

"Aloha" in the Shade.

One has heard often of the Samoan marines and their marine band, and these will be on hand to meet the tourist. Commanded by an American officer and an American petty officer of the marine corps, the Samoan marines are a picturesque group. They not only play on foreign brass and string instruments, but they sing—and all Samoans sing—the rhythmic and mellow tunes of the charm of the South seas. And as the ship departs their farewell song puts the "Aloha" of the Hawaiians well into the shade for harmony and the most entrancing of chords.

There is another thing that will impress the tourist who is unable to stop over until the next boat, and that is the native turnout from all the nearby villages, some of them almost a day's journey by boat. These arrive either the day before the steamer is due or in the early morning. Each village has its native bark boat, from sixty to eighty feet long. Twenty to thirty men are at the oars and they are accompanied by from twenty to thirty women—and the beauty of the Samoan woman is of world-wide fame.

These Samoans are lovers of nature and they know only the God of Good. They are kindly, generous and sincere; they are honest in their business dealings and in their craftsmanship. In the village boats also will come many of the minor children, from carefree babies to those who develop the charms and figures of boyhood and girlhood some years earlier than the natives of the colder climes. Often they are parents at the age when the American girl still has [or used to have] her hair in dual plaits down her back.

Echoing Harmony.

The naval government makes a holiday of each boat day and the villagers from the remote parts of American Samoa—even from islands other than Tutuila—come to Pago-Pago. The men at the oars, and the women crowded between them in the craft after which our racing skulls are patterned, sing their native songs in time to the long sweep of the oars. It is a three part harmony—not the four part of western musical culture. The women have the sopranos and altos, the latter being tenor in a sense, and the men usually have a baritone of richness that carries the harmony over the quiet waters. The song is caught up and echoed by the foliaged mountains on either side of the harbor.

On boat day there is no drill by the Samoan marines. The deeply rooted grass drill field is turned over to the villagers, who on this day only offer their wares for sale to the visitors and the naval colony. And such treasures these visitors are to take home: The wall hangings made of tapa cloth, the tree bark hammered to the thinness of paper and then coated with several colors of native paint, generally in rectangular or oblong designs; the various neck and similar decorations made from seashells.

The skirt of man, woman and child is a home woven blanket, folded about the waist and with the corner tucked in to hold it in position. The underwear of both sexes is a simple chemise, but often this is discarded, while generally the children back in the interior wear nothing at all, although as a concession to western pride and due to the advice of the missionaries, the nude is rarely seen in Pago-Pago, Leone, or other small settlements in American Samoa.

Full of Folklore.

The Samoan is fond of movies, the one American innovation that charms him most. At the naval station in Pago-Pago the films sent out to the navy are shown twice a week. These are free both to the navy and to the natives, the latter having all of one side and the rear of the other side of the hall. They seem now to miss Charlie Chaplin, whose antics the younger generation imitate in their play. In time, of course, the talkies will come.

American Samoa is full of folklore; some day a book may be written about it. All Samoa's history is handed down from generation to generation, but since the American navy has come even the smaller children can read and write. Until a government can be devised through the formal taking over of the islands by the long delayed action of congress the naval officers on the station have civil duties. The chaplain is also superintendent of education. His principals usually are missionaries, but native teachers have been developed from time to time. I met as teachers in various sections priests, nuns, Mormons, and one or two Protestant missionaries. Any of these gladly will take visitors through their schools.

All Samoa is full of romance and entrancing interest. But all that has been written about here—and much more—may be seen, with the aid of a motor car, in the eight hour or so layover of the liner every three weeks in either direction.

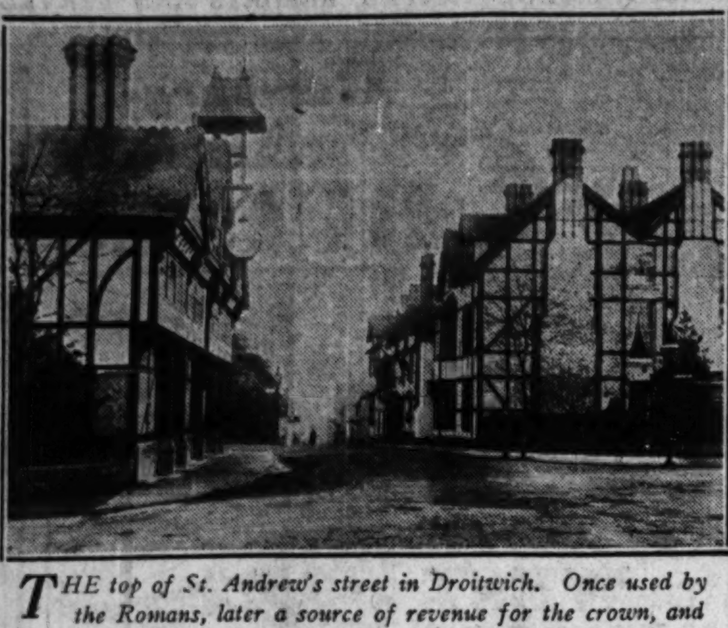
Brine Baths of Droitwich Date Back to Romans

English Spa Ranks Among the Greatest.

By John Steele.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

A CURATIVE CENTER



THE top of St. Andrew's street in Droitwich. Once used by the Romans, later a source of revenue for the crown, and now considered one of the world's most important spas. Droitwich is two and one-half hours' ride from London. It is noted for its brine baths. [Acme-P.&A. Photo.]

DROITWICH, England.—[Special.]—The brine baths of Droitwich have been known for more than a century as the most potent for the treatment of all rheumatic disorders of any in Europe.

Formerly the ancient salinae of the Romans, later an important source of revenue for the crown when the guild operated a jealously guarded salt monopoly, and finally a spa which has no equal among its kind, Droitwich today is one of the most important curative centers in the United Kingdom and the world.

The brine is pumped in inexhaustible quantities from the triassic formation 200 feet below the surface. It holds in solution about 30 per cent of natural salts, ten times the density of sea water and 40 per cent more densely saline than the Dead sea. The nearest approach to the Droitwich brine is found at Bex, Rheinfelden, Biarritz-Briscous, Salies-de-Béarn and Salzungen, although none of these equals it.

Radio-Active.

Scientists have proved that it is radio-active and radio-emanative to an important degree. The air of the bathrooms is heavily charged with radio emanations after the brine has been heated by steam to bring it to the proper temperature.

This analysis was compiled recently after an expert chemical examination of the water:

Chemicals—	Grains per gallon.
Suspended insoluble matter	Nil
Chloride of sodium	20,729.8
Chloride of magnesium	42.0
Sulphate of sodium	190.6
Sulphate of calcium	314.6
Carbonate of calcium	1.3
Alumina, etc.	7.6
Total dissolved solids	21,386.4
Specific gravity	1.20

Investigation has shown that reproduction of this water cannot be brought about artificially. It would involve the solution of 2½ pounds of saline constituents in every gallon of fresh water, but this would fail, because the evaporation of brine in the manufacture of salt destroys its radioactivity and diminishes the healing power of the substance.

Used by Romans.

The development of Droitwich as a spa dates from the establishment of the first public baths in 1836. The first to use it as a watering place, however, were undoubtedly the Romans. It was an important center during their occupation of Britain, and the marks they left of their settlement have since been almost obliterated by traces of later upheavals in the country's history equally as significant. Droitwich has figured prominently in most of the wars of England.

During the Roman occupation, it was on the main road from York to the camp at Kempsey. There was a settlement of some size here, for coins of Claudius, Nero, Galba, and Hadrian were found beneath the paving of High street. Mosaics, pieces of jewelry and the remains of buildings also were found.

When driven out, the Romans left the country to the Hwicca tribe. These were the first to develop the salt industry there. The earliest written records of the town show that the brine seeped into pools, was bailed out, and boiled in leaden pans. Salt laden on pack horses was taken as far away as London.

Domesday Book shows that a reeve and a hundred burgesses regulated the town, and that about 9,000 bushels of salt were made yearly for the king, the Abbey of Westminster, and important personages.

King John, in his need of cash after signing the Magna Carta, sold to the burgesses a charter under which he accepted $500 annually for all his property here, including the right to the salt tax. Since John, the next day, sold the annuity to his brother, William of the Long Sword, the borough assumed as its arms the two leopards of John impaled on the long sword of William.

Cured the Cholera.

For nearly 500 years the salt monopoly was jealously guarded, a trade guild arose, and its seal was designed to portray the implements used in salt manufacture. These included the checkerboard on which the accounts were told, and the modern seal of the borough combined both emblems.

The town suffered heavily in the civil wars. Cavaliers, Roundheads, and Scots occupied it alternately, and while the town was attempting to recover from the ravages of war the salt monopoly was destroyed by William Steynor, who won in court the right to drill for brine on his own land. Many people were ruined, the $500 annually to the crown was permitted to lapse, and then the inland revenue swooped down to tax the manufacturers. Salt tax collectors at one time extracted as much as $2,000,000 annually from the town. The salt tax was abolished in 1825 and the price immediately fell from three shillings to fivepence a bushel.

You Can't Sink.

Then, as if by a miracle, a new and more important use was discovered for the brine, now pumped from deep wells for the salt industry. A cholera epidemic struck the city and a physician ordered a hot bath for one of his patients. No fresh water was available, so the doubting but anxious attendants used hot brine. The result was so good that the measure was adopted generally.

That was just 100 years ago. Today the waters are put to no other purpose than the treatment of disease.

There are two large establishments in Droitwich for therapeutic treatment. One of these is the Royal baths, opened in 1836, and St. Andrew's baths, founded fifty years later. In addition Droitwich is an important headquarters for specialists in rheumatic disorders. Treatment is carried on at their direction or that of some other physician.

The baths are in operation throughout the year. Treatments are given for all forms of rheumatism, including convalescence from acute rheumatic fever, fibrositis, sciatica, arthritis, lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, chronic articular or irregular gout, and some forms of heart disease, of paralysis, and certain diseases of the spine.

Altogether there are nine different treatments in the baths. Among these is the Nauheim bath for disorders of the heart, aerated baths, steam vapor baths, and the usual arrangement of needle baths and the like. The brine bath is one of the most valuable in the spa. The Droitwich water is so heavily impregnated with saline solutions that the patient cannot sink. Careful manipulation of joints and muscles is much easier in water than on a table.

Droitwich Spa is under the supervision of the British Spa federation, which controls all the baths of Great Britain. It is only 2½ hours from London.

Fox Farming in Silesia.

GROSS BIESNITZ, Silesia.—(AP)—Kurt Moebius, silver fox farmer from Wisconsin, is raising the animals on a large scale here. On his new farm Moebius has 100 pairs of the fur bearers, and in four years he expects to have 1,000 pairs.

They Chain Debtors to Their Creditors

ADDIS ABABA.—(AP)—The chains of debt are something more than a figure of speech in Abyssinia.

The person who cannot or will not pay is shackled to his or her creditor—and the bonds are not severed until the debt is discharged. Sometimes these business unions last for months.

One who guarantees a debt sometimes suffers the same penalty, and the debtor, guarantor and creditor make a weird trio as they clank through the streets.

Plan Fast Canal from Birmingham to London

BIRMINGHAM, England. — (AP) — England's "inland waterway" from here to London is to undergo modernization costing about $5,000,000 if governmental sanction is accorded plans of the Grand Union Canal company.

The company proposes to deepen and widen the canal and to motorize the fleet, thus doing away with the horse drawn barges. It would take 900 men three years to complete the canal.

Lloyd George's Daughter Modern—Except for Cars

LONDON.—(AP)—Megan Lloyd George, who is a member of parliament and daughter of the famous Liberal leader, is modern in most manners, but not about automobiles.

She hates driving, says so frankly, and prefers to trust herself to the sedate family chauffeur, with the family since her childhood.

The car itself is a relic of other days. It used to be Lord Kitchener's and was used by him during the war. It is a gigantic pre-war Rolls-Royce. Little Miss Megan is almost lost in it.

card dated Aug. 6, Station k:

"We are well and the trip was uneventful. We left yesterday and were only half a day late in arriving here. The car was not crowded. Those who were in a hurry went on by foot."

Postcard dated Aug. 9, from Nieshin:

"The train is running excellently. Not a single breakdown today. We are going nice and slow and have time to pick flowers and bathe. At present the locomotive is being repaired. We are living in this town and are salting some cucumbers for auntie."

Postcard dated Aug. 15, from Konotop:

"Excuse us for not writing for such a long time. But we have been very busy. First, our locomotive lost its smokestack and the whole train looked a whole day for it. Then a wheel was lost in a forest. It was found and replaced after a lot of trouble. We are on very friendly terms with everybody on the train. We are proceeding surprisingly well; we were derailed only once and noticed it only after an hour. The track behind us was quite ruined. But we have repaired the train and roadbed, too."

* *

Seeing the Country.

Postcard dated Aug. 20, from Fastov:

"We have passed Kiev. The locomotive had to be repaired again; so we stopped here three days and we had a chance to see everything. Now the locomotive can go so fast that the dogs can no longer run along in front of it."

Postcard dated Sept. 1:

"After Zhmerinka we arrived at a blockade. Somebody has refused to accept the credentials of somebody and refuses something. We are on a siding and can't go any farther. In front of us, in back of us, and on all the sidings the junction is filled with trains. We have found many friends and acquaintances. Some have been here for weeks. Please telegraph auntie that she must wait a little longer for us. We have plenty of food, for the surrounding villages are eager to trade with us. We even have had some eggs and milk."

Mushroom Growth.

A long letter dated Oct. 20:

"At last everything has been settled. Yesterday we celebrated the opening of the new town Probkina [Corked Up], which developed from our blockade here. At first we were only a village, but now we are a large town. We are all living in the cars which we have taken from the tracks and lined along the streets. At the end of the streets stand the former locomotives. They are very convenient, for we use them to make hot water and bake our bread in the firebox. We have, at present, twenty thousand inhabitants and more are arriving every day. The conductors are now policemen, but the engineers still tend to their locomotives. We are laying water piper, for a freight train of pipes arrived yesterday. We are much better supplied with goods than in Moscow, for we generally have two or three freight trains arrive daily. They have promised us electricity by the end of the Pyatiletka [five year industrialization plan] but we can wait, for the locomotive headlights light our streets and the lanterns from the semaphores we use in the cars.

Pigs and Poultry.

"This is what the Americans call a 'boom town'; there is much life here and so long as the freight trains arrive regularly we will have plenty of goods to trade with the peasants and thus obtain food. We have a postoffice and a savings bank on Express avenue. We are enjoying the life here greatly. These cars are very convenient, as we can keep the pigs and poultry under them. There is even talk about an opera coming to visit us and so we have decided not to return to Moscow. Besides we have no means of leaving here. It is a great pity that Auntie died without waiting for us."

The author has collected these letters. They explain the mystery of the sudden birth of the town of Probkina. But in the short telegraph news in the Moscow press this story is told more briefly and sadly. They report: "On the Moscow Odessa line, near Zhmerinka a large blockade has been formed. Several thousand cars are standing unloaded." And this is the way new towns are born.

Scientist Traces European Names to Centaur Legend

ATHENS.—(AP)—The citizens of Canterbury and of Kent may be the modern namesakes of those strange creatures of ancient mythology, half man, half horse, the centaurs.

Dr. I. Dragases Paleologo, expert in ethnography, told in a lecture here how the legend of the centaurs derived from the Pelasgic tribes which inhabited the region of Byzantium in prehistoric days, gradually migrating to every corner of Europe.

The Pelasgic horsemen were known as Kentavri, a word Dr. Paleologo said had survived in such place-names as Cantabria in Spain, Kentbry is Denmark, and both Canterbury and Kent in England.

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile.—(AP)—Petitions for a concession to construct a new trans-Andean railroad, connecting northern Chile with an outlet to Buenos Aires, have been filed in Santiago by a firm here.

Backers of the project explain it would give a quick route to the Pacific for a considerable section of Argentina.

French Parliament Costly.

PARIS.—(AP)—Every daily session of the French parliament, one statistician calculates, costs French taxpayers $4,150. He figures this is more costly than the English or Italian parliaments.

Diets Affect Wheat Market.

PARIS.—(AP)—Dieting by women is affecting the wheat market. So say French bakers who are opposed to diet breads. Consumption of white bread in France has diminished near 12 per cent, largely, the bakers say, because of propaganda favoring bread made of other grains.

$300,000,000.00

now being spent by the Federal Government to improve the Nation's Capital and its Northern Virginia Gateway creates an exceptional opportunity for an experienced real estate executive of highest character and ability to organize the sales end of the only desirable home development less than 10 minutes from Washington's business center. More than 150 moderate-priced homes, with all modern improvements, already occupied; 100 lots ready for building; undeveloped section approximates 90 acres of tree-covered hillside overlooking Washington, Potomac River, and Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, a half-mile distant, to be finished by Feb., 1932. Two 28-foot paved roads connect property with the new Federal office buildings, only 3 miles away, via the new $14,500,000 Arlington Memorial and Highway [commercial] bridges. The 1932 Bicentennial Celebration of George Washington's birth will bring hundreds of thousands of people to Washington, all of whom will go to Mount Vernon by the new bridge and highways. Times are always relatively good in Washington because of the Government pay roll of $14,000,000 each month. If you are the man we want you will see a real profit opportunity for yourself in this modern residence development so close to the great Federal improvements and pay roll; you will know how to organize a sales campaign which will bring adequate results, and you will be willing to back your ability with your own money for sales expense, on a desirable contract basis. Owner does not need financing but insists, for his own protection, that you demonstrate proof of past successes and present faith in your ability. Privilege of fullest investigation required and extended. No brokers. Keefer Adv. Agency, Printcraft Bldg., Washington, D. C.
